Labor Leader Tells Why Unionists View Defense Agitation With Suspicion

James Lord, President of Mine Department of American Federation of Labor, Says They Object to Present Military Forms, but Would Join Real Democratic Army Where There Is No Cringing Before Officers.

NEW YORK, March 11.

"THE average American workingman is hesitating between patriotism and dismay. He is a patriot; you can bank on that. He is not a coward, and he is not a nonresident pacifist. He is willing to give his life in defense of his home and is stirred more deeply than are the captains of finance by every threat against the peace of America. But in spite of this all the programs of preparedness now before the country leave him cold and sullen. There is something fundamental in all these military schemes for which he simply cannot stand."

James Lord, president of the Mining Department of the American Federation of Labor, was the speaker. A mine worker at 11, a pioneer in the miners' union, now at the head of five allied organizations representing half a million men, there is no one in America more closely in touch with the most rugged and militant class of American workers.

JAMES LORD

"How are these men looking at the question of national defense?" he was asked. "How do they feel about conscription? In case of war would they flock to the standard of their country with the unanimity of the French workers, or would they be apt to embarrass the Government like—well, like the miners in Wales?"

"Welsh Miners Maligned."

"GLAD you spoke of Wales," said Mr. Lord. "That clears the issue at once. Let me tell you something you don't know about the miners of Wales—and American capitalists may learn something they don't know about the workingmen of America. The Welsh miners, who went on strike at the outbreak of the war, proved to be the greatest patriots in the British Empire. Do you know of any other class of workers who have agreed to work for nothing during the period of the war?"

Lord added, "and Britain did not accept the service. It was the kind of sacrifice the ruling class of any country does not want its workers to make. It was this way: As soon as the strike was called the miners brought down on their heads the patriotic wrath of the whole nation. Mr. Runciman of the Board of Trade, was hustled over to settle the 'scandalous' situation summarily. The miners argued that they were asking only a modest raise in wages, while the mine owners were suddenly acquiring exorbitant profits. Do you think that made any difference? It did not. The nation was in peril, said everybody, and it was no time to haggle about terms.

"Then, after a conference, the union leaders approached Mr. Runciman. 'All right,' they said, 'we have decided that we will all go back to work for our board and lodging—for just what is necessary to keep us alive and working on one condition.

"The condition was that the coal should be furnished to the Government at cost.

"That settled the strike. The miners got their raise. In one sentence, which is bound to become historical in the labor movement, they called the bluff of British capital."

"A Practical Fighting Man."

LORD is not one of the excitable radicals. He is known as a practical fighting man in the labor movement, not as a dreamer or a prophet. He would not tell me that American workers will not stand for this and that. He would not commit his organization, or the men who compose it, to any particular policy. Frankly, he didn't know what they would stand for, or what a national crisis might bring forth. But he was sure that their present attitude is one of suspicion, a suspicion which the men themselves may not have analyzed, but one which is tremendously illuminated by the Welsh incident.

"If you want to know whether American workingmen are patriotic," he said, "propose some scheme where everybody will be called on to throw everything into the melting pot for the national defense. Make John Smith give up everything and make John Rockefeller give up everything. Make no distinction between J. P. Miggins and J. P. Morgan. Don't propose to borrow what they have or take a part of what they have, but propose to take all that all of them have, just as they take all that John and Jimmie have when they put them into the army today. Watch the way the capitalists and workers react to such a proposition and you might get a line on which class is really the more patriotic.

"Governments do not propose anything of the sort. They expect workingmen to give up everything for their country, and then turn over the country to everything but workingmen. The flower of England's manhood went to South Africa to fight for their country. The remnant that returned had no country, not even a job. Maimed, diseased, broken, rotting body and soul, these ex-soldiers could be seen all through England begging their bread. At the same time the diamond mines which their sacrifice had guaranteed to English capital were being filled with Chinese coolies. The English workers were good enough to get those mines, but they were not good enough to work in them, or as good as a Chinaman on the economic field."

What's Wrong With Army?

BUT can it be that American workmen suspect any such a deal? Clearly, America has no schemes of conquest. It is for defense, defense of American democracy and the free institutions that workers ought to fight for, that a large army and even universal military service is proposed. "Will the American workers," he was asked, "do anything which might hinder a policy of adequate defense?"

"No," said this representative of the working class. "If the country wants defense, it can have all the defense it wants. Miners and railroad men and shopworkers would rally by the million to any military system which meant pure defense, or in the event an invasion was actually threatened. Any time this nation wants to arm its workers and show them how to fight, it will have no difficulty in getting men. If that were all that military service means, there would be no such attitude as there is today toward preparedness.

"But what does it mean?" he was asked.

"It means an autocratic military machine," he said. "It means in America about what it means in Germany and Russia. It means that a man joining the army must give up everything he holds dear and trust in God and his superiors not to turn his gun against his own class interests. It means servile obedience to certain individuals, an honest

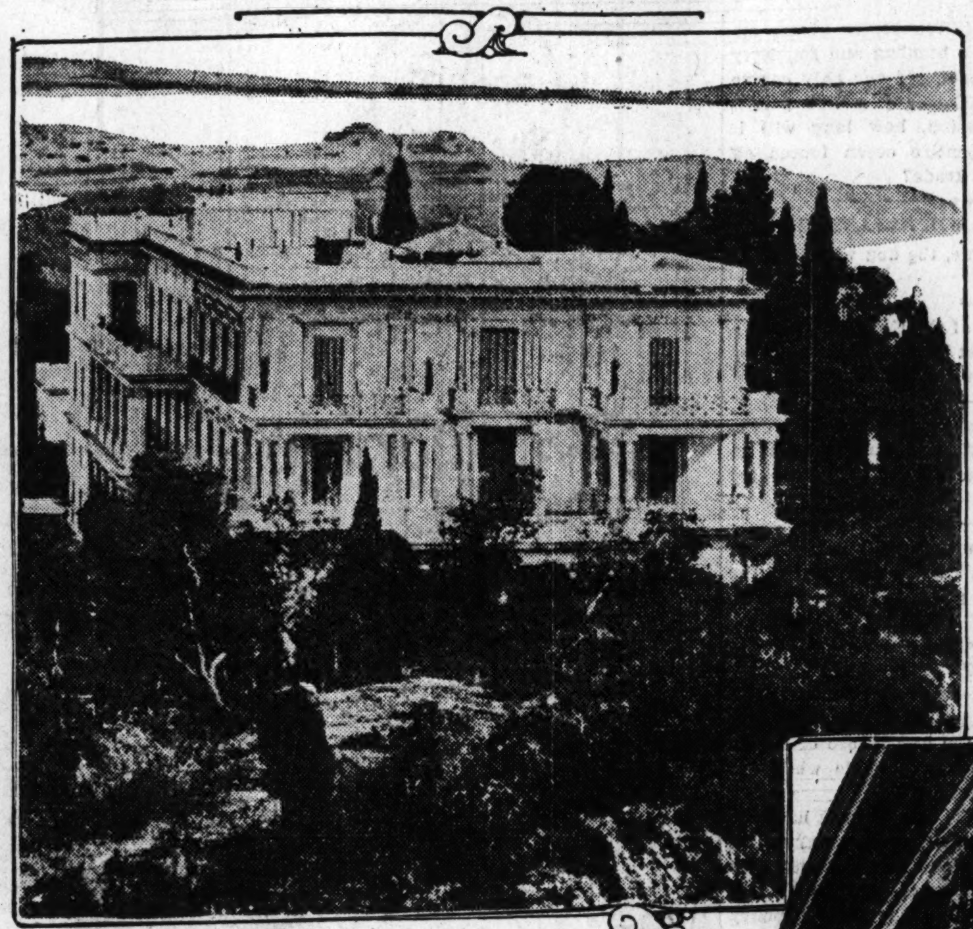
How French Seized Achilleion, Kaiser's Wonderful $15,000,000 Villa in Corfu, Told for First Time

Natives' First View Its Luxuries as They Follow Invaders Into Grounds

Only German Workmen Had Been Employed There and No Corfeans Were Permitted to Visit Its Sacred Precincts to Which the Emperor of the Germans Used to Go in the Spring—Park a Veritable Wonderland and Castle a Colossal Pile Where Luxury Has Run Riot and No Expense Has Been Spared.



ACHILLEION

ACHILLEION and its 30,000 acres of park cost the Empress Elizabeth of Austria $15,000,000. It was her custom to go there yearly for a prolonged stay with a selected coterie of men and women of her court to escape the unpleasant association with the Emperor that the conventions made necessary while she was in Vienna. She considered Corfu "the fairest of earth's islands." After her assassination, the Emperor, who, respecting his Empress' purposes and wishes, had never visited Achilleon, sold it to the Kaiser for a small fraction of what it had cost.

It has 128 rooms, nearly all of vast proportions, and overlooks from a lofty point the azure Ionian Sea. It is surrounded by jungles of ever-blooming roses and forests of palm, native and tropical trees. Hundreds of marble statues surround it and line its avenues.

The Empress was very fond of Athletics and this wonderful castle has a great gymnasium and an indoor swimming pool copied after an old luxurious Roman bath.

The AVENUE OF STATUES ON ONE SIDE.

THE Post-Dispatch presents herewith the first complete story of how the French landed on the island of Corfu, a Greek possession in the Ionian Sea on the night of Jan. 12 and, as a part of the program of occupation, if not the actual motive for it, seized the magnificent estate, known as Achelleion, belonging to the German Emperor, the development of which is said to have cost over $15,000,000.

The Greek King voiced a strong protest against this invasion of his country which he declared to be wanton whereupon the French replied that they had discovered that German and Austrian submarines were operating from the island as a base and that, as a result of the seizure, three undersea boats had been destroyed.

Later, the beaten Servian army has been quartered there, Achelleion being used as a hospital.

This report of the landing comes from Athens whither it was sent from Corfu to the Post-Dispatch correspondent. The evidence of hostility to the Germans that was manifested by the natives during the seizure is accounted for by the fact that the populace of Corfu has been strongly sympathetic with the entente and by the further fact that all the development work on Achelleion has been performed by imported German workmen and that the native populace has been rigidly barred from the grounds.

Special Correspondence of the Sunday Post-Dispatch.

ATHENS, Greece, Jan. 24.

IN the darkness of the night French troops, loaded on four cruisers and guided by numerous destroyers and torpedo boats, slipped through the Corfu Channel, and, while the population of the city of Corfu, comprising 25,000 souls, were sound asleep in their beds, landed their soldiers, and before the sunrise the next morning had put in chains the chief of the German spies in the island.

With the exception of the two official representatives of France and Italy, M. Benegny and M. Matiz, not a soul in the whole island knew of the presence of the French in the city; not even the Prefect of the Island knew that foreign troops had already landed in his little municipality.

The French troops not only landed on the island, but proceeded at once to the Hotel Europe and put under arrest the Secretary of the German Consulate.

German Consul Escapes Invaders Clad Only in His Bathrobe.

WHILE they were busy rounding up other prominent Austrian and German agents, the German Consul got word of the landing of the French and fled from the Consulate wrapped in a bathrobe, taking refuge with a retired Greek officer in the extreme end of the island.

Long before sunrise the entire population of the island awoke to activity. About 4 a. m. the bellboys of my hotel were wrapping at every door, singing out: "The French have landed!"

Within half an hour the streets of the hitherto quiet city were filled with crowds. Men, women and even little children flocked to the streets; all bound to the landing place. Our cosmopolite city turned out to see the strangers that had intruded unannounced in such an unbecoming hour of the night.

The French had landed; arrested the German agents in the city; put guards in front of the Austrian, German and Turkish consulates and then, like true Frenchmen and Parisians, informed the Prefect that they were there and that they intended to stay there for some time, and that they also expected other—Servians and Montenegrins—who would soon arrive.

And, like a true Hellen, the stately Prefect of our beloved Corfu protested against the landing of the French and, in the name of our King, ordered the midnight intruders out to sea.

Crowd Awe-Stricken When It Entered Grounds of Achilleion.

BUT there were two compelling circumstances which soon cooled off his ardor; the fickle population of the city had already given evidence of going wild with joy over the landing of the French; they were cheering the midnight intruders with boisterous enthusiasm, and those who did not know the words to the "Marseilles" were humming the martial tune to their heats' content. Another reason, which was quite a strong one, and which compelled our Prefect to yield was, "The French Commander was so polite and irresistible!"

With the sunrise thousands were either at the landing place, cheering and assisting the 'invaders' of their city to land their provisions and horses, or actually doing the longshoreman work for the newcomers.

In the meantime, an immense crowd had escorted a group of French soldiers to the Achilleion, the marble palace of the Kaiser.

There were very few people in the island who had set foot in the sacred premises of these palatial gardens. Thousands of acres of this Greek island were to all intents and purposes imperial German territory. Occasionally some inhabitant of Corfu could steal a glimpse, from a distant housetop, of the wonderful marble palace of the German Emperor, but for mortal persons like us Greeks, even the approaches to the gates were as inaccessible as the seventh inner gate of heaven.

When the crowd arrived within the view of the outer gates of the palace garden, by habit, they held back. I, myself, was near the front of the crowd. All at once we came to a standstill. Those in front would go no further. However, this hesitation of the timid did not last long.

Forty-Five Women Servants and Sixty-Two Men Seized by the French.

ONCE within the sacred precincts of the mysterious and beautiful gardens, we spread everywhere; some to various statue-lined avenues, some around spacious fountains and others to the flower-studded lawn under the well-trimmed trees. For about an hour or so we (more than 10,000 Corfeans) acted like picnic crowds.

Many of the more serious inhabitants still followed the French detachment, who were bound for the palace proper. I followed this crowd.

As we escorted the French I noticed that many young middle-aged mothers had headed us off, and with the intention of catching a glimpse of

AMERICAN POLICY AND ENGLISH FEELING DISCUSSED BY A LONDON EDITOR

A. G. Gardiner of the Daily News Says Lansing's Note on Detention of American Ships Was Like a Blow in the Face to British.

By A. G. GARDINER,

Editor of the London Daily News.

Reprinted From the New Republic by Special Permission

I HAVE just come from the House of Commons, where Sir Edward Grey has delivered a speech which cannot fail to have a far-reaching effect upon the relations of the United States and England. With the terms of that speech the American public will be familiar, but it may be useful to say something as to its reaction upon English opinion. Of the impressiveness of the speech nothing need be said. In spite of his plain, unadorned, even halting manner, Sir Edward is easily the weightiest speaker in English public life.

The fact is due to the rare elevation and transparent honesty of a character that dwells in a certain disdainful aloofness from all the dust and heat of the political arena. His influence over the public mind has never been more strikingly illustrated than on this occasion. He had to meet a great public agitation promoted in the columns of the Harmsworth press and the Morning Post on the subject of the alleged failure of the Government in regard to the blockade. The case was based on figures that had already been discredited, and Sir Edward had no difficulty in showing that the methods adopted, while respecting the interests and rights of neutrals, were thoroughly effective in their purpose of destroying the enemy commerce.

Like Blow in Face to British Public.

BUT much the most momentous aspect of the speech was that in which he addressed himself to the neutral world and especially to the United States, and asked whether there was to be no discrimination in that world between the inconvenience which England's legitimate exercise of sea power—an exercise well within the scope of American precedent—caused to neutral traders, and the policy of ruthless piracy and murder which Germany has carried out on the high seas. The question was specifically related to the Lansing note, and gave expression to the deep undercurrent of feeling which has existed in the public mind on the subject of the terms and the spirit of that note.

(The note to which Mr. Gardner refers was that dated Oct. 21, protesting the action of Great Britain in seizing ships bound for neutral ports and the attempt to adjudicate disputes from this action through prize courts. Subsequently Secretary Lansing sent a note protesting against the examination and consequent delay of American mails.)

It would be useless to deny that that document fell on the British public like a blow in the face. Had it come earlier in the war its effect would have been disastrous. But much has happened in the past year to make public opinion in this country more reflective and less inflammable.

If one ventured to express the state of mind of a nation in a phrase, one would, I think, say that England today has lost in illusions and gained in power. The extravagant hopes and fears of the early months of the war have given place to a temper in which neither hopes nor fears predominate, but of which a well-apprehended purpose is the main inspiration. The apprenticeship which the nation has served to war has been full of bitter teachings, but its lessons have been learned, and if the confidence that prevails is less exalted than it was it is also more instructed. The chastening experience of 1915 has left few of our opinions unchanged. It has clipped the wings of a good many vaulting dreams and corrected many false appreciations. We are more humble but much better informed.

At First Expected U. S. to Declare for Allies.

THE change is especially apparent in regard to the attitude of the United States. In the early stages of the war there was a considerable body of thought in England that took the view that the United States ought to declare on the side of the allies, and that the failure to do so would be the betrayal of a moral duty. An intimate appreciation of your republic is not a common attribute of the Englishman. He does not visit America as the American visits Europe, and politically he is absorbed in the preoccupations of his own hemisphere in a measure that makes the doings of America merely the echo from another sphere. But in the back of his mind he regarded the American nation as a projection of the Anglo-Saxon ideal beyond the Western horizon. It was a reserve of sympathy and power which in ultimate need would be found ranged on the side of England. He saw the external influences that made for a common purpose. He saw a nation whose speech was his speech, whose fathers were his fathers, whose traditions were his traditions, a nation that had carried his ideals of liberty to a larger stage and given them freer scope. What he did not allow for, because he did not understand it, was the enormous complexity of the American position—the extent to which past differences had left their mark on American sentiment, the separation of its aims from the aims of the Old World, the extent to which German thought and German commerce had permeated the community, the legacy of hostility to England with which the tragedy of Ireland had endowed America, and the preoccupation of the Western States with problems which turned their outlook towards Asia rather than Europe and brought them into potential conflict with British diplomacy.

Beginning to Realise American Difficulties.

ALL this is much better understood today. There is a greater disposition on the one hand to allow for the difficulties of the United States' position, and a more modest view of the claims of England upon the active sympathy of neutral Powers. Apart from the extravagances of the National Review and one or two organs of the extreme Jingo party, there is a very noticeable decline in the adverse comment on the policy of the United States. But while the public discussion of the subject has diminished and sobered, certain broad and general conclusions have taken possession of the public mind. I am afraid it cannot be said that those conclusions are favorable to the presidential policy. It is felt—and speaking as one who has done something to explain the difficulties of the President's position to the British public, I must confess that I share the feeling—that the attempt to preserve a perfectly even keel has given a sense of weakness, of a sort of decisive indecisiveness to the policy of the United States. There has been too obvious a determination to keep the scales even, no matter what is in them. I hold the view which is widely held, that the President missed his supreme opportunity when he allowed the atrocities in Belgium to pass without initiating action in the neutral world. It would not have been impossible for that action to have been directed not specifically against Germany, but generally against any breach by any belligerent of the laws of war and of The Hague Convention, of which the President of the United States was a signatory. Even if the action had resulted in nothing more than a formal watching brief in the name of the neutral Powers and on behalf of humanity and public law and rights, the fact would have had a profound moral value for the world. It would have held aloft a standard of right in a world of wrong that no other hand than that of America could keep erect. The failure of Mr. Wilson to do this left justice without any authoritative advocate, and

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Save the Birds.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The St. Louis Bird Club did a good thing when it gave the people an opportunity to hear Mr. Baynes in his lecture on birds.

The lecture was good, the pictures on the canvas fine, and good will surely come as a result of his showing us what is being done in some parts of the country in the work of protecting the birds and helping them to get through the winter.

There are some birds that are widely distributed and for whose protection there is urgent need. One of these is bob white, one of our finest game birds, and one that suffers greatly when the ground is covered with snow and ice. It may be said that all of the birds sometimes have a hard struggle for existence; and Mr. Baynes has shown us how much pleasure there is in attracting them about our homes and feeding them when their food supply is short. Mr. Baynes' canvass showed some birds that are common here, also a good number that are almost unknown about St. Louis, such as crossbills, redpoles, pine siskins, evening grosbeaks, etc. In New Hampshire, the scene of most of his pictures, the problem seems to be to save the winter birds. In this part of the country the perhaps more serious question is how to save the migratory birds that are left behind, or that come back before winter is over. Robins and bluebirds have been in our parks nearly a month, and some of them fell by the way during the recent snow.

Interest in the good work is growing here, and the people are willing to help; but the important thing is for the Park Commissioners to make the feeding of the birds—and the squirrels—a part of the regular work, not tacked on as a minor extra, but the special work of men who would consider this one of their most important duties. Taken as a whole, covering all the parks, it would be a large task, but so distributed as to be almost a small matter. A small sum, for seeds and other suitable foodstuffs, and for the wages of men for a small part of the day, would go a long way toward taking care of Tower Grove and Shaw's Garden, the homes of many of our most useful birds.

The editorial in your paper of Saturday was a very graceful one, and gave the assurance that the Post-Dispatch stands ready to co-operate in the good work. The St. Louis Bird Club and the Audubon Society are bringing the people to see that the growing interest in the birds is not a sentiment or a fad, but a matter of large economic importance.

It is well to remember that some species are well along the way in the vanishing class. Will those in authority fall in with the popular movement for conserving the wild life of the country?

Drowning of Naval Reserve Men.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I note in your issue of Feb. 25 that two men were drowned at the Naval Training Station at Lake Bluff, Ill., when "heavy seas dashed a boat load of the reserve against the breakwater," and the above loss of life was the result. Such cases should be investigated by the Navy Department and the person ordering or allowing men out when it is unnecessary and the seas are rough ought to be punished for criminal carelessness, as such person would be of no value in time of trouble, when they use such poor judgment in time of peace. AN AMERICAN.

The National Guard.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Our Government has at last decided to give the national guard the consideration due it. The national guard should be federalized completely, taken entirely out of state control, thereby eliminating the possibility of strike duty. Let each State use the money it formerly appropriated for the national guard to equip and pay a state constabulary, say three companies of 108 men each, and officers, as that would be sufficient to quell any riots or disturbances.

If the national guard were not used for strike duty and were paid a small salary the regiments all over the country would be filled up in a short time and have waiting lists.

Under Federal control the men would become as efficient as any soldiers in the world. Take the First Regiment, Troop "B" and Battery "A" here in St. Louis; look up the U. S. A. annual inspection reports and note the high degree of efficiency they have attained under adverse circumstances.

St. Louis can boast of the officers and men of these three organizations as they have proven their ability on several occasions. If union labor were assured they could not be used for strike duty, ninety per cent of the members would join and St. Louis could have three regiments instead of one. T. A. IMMELL.

INCREASE MISSOURI'S WEALTH.

The Missouri Federation of Commercial Clubs has started a campaign to add a billion dollars a year to the value of Missouri crops. It is a high aim, but it can be accomplished with the co-operation of the cities, towns and counties.

In his address at Friday's luncheon at the M. A. A. Prof. Cromer, whose specialty at the University of Missouri is moral economics, pointed out the method of procedure. The end is summed up in the one word—EFFICIENCY. Prof. Cromer showed that with excellent soil and climate, equal to the best, Missouri farm methods are woefully inefficient. While Missouri takes prizes for apples, stock, poultry and other products of individual efficiency, proving what can be done, the average efficiency throughout the State is low. In fruit, Missouri is fortieth in acre productivity; in corn, twenty-third; in wheat, twenty-ninth; in all farm crops, forty-first, near the bottom; in farm buildings, twenty-seventh; in farm machinery, thirty-fourth; in schools, thirty-second, and in improved roads the percentage of this State is less than one-half the average for the United States.

All of these discreditable results are caused by lack of general or average efficiency on the farms. The farmers follow antiquated, unscientific methods of farming, dairying, stock raising and poultry raising. Their stock is of poor quality, but the cost of feeding is as much as the cost of feeding the most productive stock.

The federation proposes to educate the farmers and stock men in the best modern methods of agriculture. It proposes to inform the people as to the inefficiency of school methods and demonstrate how to improve them; it will educate the people on the subject of good roads. For these purposes films showing improved methods and their results will be made and distributed from the State University, to be exhibited by local commercial clubs and other organizations. Farm experts and advisers are to be supplied to teach the farmers how to prepare the soil and cultivate crops; how to develop the best stock and get the best results from them.

In order to accomplish these valuable ends, two things are needed—organization and money to conduct both the campaign for wider organization and the practical work of education and promotion.

As the market and commercial distributing center, St. Louis is deeply interested in the success of this work. Every addition of population in the State and every dollar of value added to its productivity increases the prosperity and growth of St. Louis. The co-operation and pecuniary assistance of the Business Men's League is pledged. But individual St. Louisans should join the federation and contribute to its useful activities.

HUMANE SOCIETY'S WORK.

The annual report of the Humane Society of Missouri, just issued, shows a creditable amount of work done during the year. Nearly 1500 drivers and owners of horses and other animals were warned by agents of the society to treat their charges humanely. There were 54 prosecutions, in cases of cruelty, and 34 convictions. The high percentage of convictions is proof that the society does not act without good cause.

A part of the work that will be approved by citizens generally, though incidental to the prevention of actual cruelty, is the attention given to stables, where horses or other animals are kept. The agents of the society have caused a large number of filthy and unsanitary stables to be cleaned and put in good condition. This will benefit not only dumb animals, but the human part of the community. It is excellent civic service.

The Humane Society of Missouri is maintained wholly by private subscriptions, and can only cover part of a very wide field. It is deserving of hearty support.

WHAT ABOUT THE UMBRELLA?

That a railroad is liable in money damages to a woman passenger who is annoyed by a masher is a proposition affirmed by the Arkansas Supreme Court, in sustaining a verdict of $250 against the Memphis, Dallas & Gulf Road in favor of a school teacher, Mrs. Nettie Trussell. Testimony showed that a coy male nuisance standing in the aisle of the car in which plaintiff was riding "winked and threw kisses at her." Whereupon she smashed her umbrella on his head. The Supreme Court was tickled to death—and the bailiff and Deputy Sheriff and court stenographer and the clerk of the court all concurred heartily in the judgment. It is our pleasure to concur likewise. Indeed, we will go a step further than the court, which contented itself with affirming the general damages, without specific recommendations. We think there ought to be special damages awarded against somebody to the tune of—what does it cost to repair a smashed umbrella?

The umbrella was the gist of the action. The umbrella was the emotional element, the human interest feature, the prime factor and chief functionary in the case. The umbrella played the heroic role; it is what aroused the sympathies of everybody and delighted the court. The umbrella deserves something more than bare acquittal at the court's hands. It ought to have moral recognition. Its chivalry has earned substantial and honorable reward. However badly smashed, broken its ribs or fractured its spine, it should be made as good as new at any cost, its surgeon's bills and hospital expenses, plus its witness fees and an honorarium besides, assessed with the general damages. Under an ideal system of jurisprudence the bonehead responsible for the shattered umbrella would be required to mend it with his own hands. Since he can neither do this nor pay the costs and damages (that sort of thing is never worth his salt) it is only fair that these be paid by the careless railroad which should have hauled him in a cattle car, instead of a passenger coach.

THE LESSON OF THE SILIUS.

The unarmed Norwegian ship Silius with from four to seven Americans aboard is reported to have been sunk off Havre by a submarine that gave no warning.

Assuming that the report as to the circumstances of the attack is true, what will be done by the 14 Senators and 276 Representatives who voted in Congress to tie the hands of the President in enforcing the rights and privileges of Americans on a free ocean?

Are Americans to be warned off unarmed as well as armed belligerent merchantmen? Are they to be denied employment and transportation on neutral as well as unarmed and belligerent merchantmen? If they are to be warned off these ships how long will it be before they are warned off our own merchantmen and we are confined within the three-mile limit of our home coasts?

The incident of the Silius comes at an opportune time to mark the humbug and sophistry of the congressional debate. If our only course is to yield every time Germany makes a new and unjustifiable aggression, how long will it be before we find the entire ocean fenced off against our passage and trade?

THE HOUSE OF DETENTION FIRETRAP.

What could be more reasonable than a request made by Judge J. Hugo Grimm that construction work on the interior of the new House of Detention shall proceed as far as possible while the exterior work is progressing?

The appropriation for the outside work has been made. The contract calls for its completion next December. By appropriating the estimated $60,000 for other construction costs, Judge Grimm thinks the building can be ready for occupancy by the end of the year. As long as the money has to be spent, why not practice real economy by spending it in the way suggested?

The saving in money is the least consideration. The present House of Detention is an old, filthy, disease-infested, leased firetrap, whose condition became a scandal forcing provision for the new structure. This week's quarantine against it only repeats a habitual condition of the past. The possibilities of fire while it shelters a score or more of children burden the minds not only of officials of the Juvenile Court, but of all St. Louisans familiar with the utter inadequacy of the present quarters.

One of those practical suggestions for which the Board of Estimates and Appropriation should be grateful is offered by Judge Grimm. The members should approve it.

Sixty-nine thousand first-class passengers less in 1915 than in the year before; 170,000 second-class passengers less in 1915 than in the previous year; 508,000 passengers in third class less than in 1914.

The number of first-class passengers is the smallest on record. Freight made up for lack of passengers, especially in English and Dutch lines; the Holland-American Line, for instance, is about to declare a dividend of 50 per cent, compared with 17 per cent the previous year.

Scandinavian and Italian ships carry the bulk of passengers.

DARK DAYS THEN AND NOW.

America has seen no really dark days for a half-century. The present generation has known nothing but cheerful moods comparatively. Of late the news of our international relations has been of a character to dash men's spirits, but these are not yet, for us, times that try men's souls.

"There were dark days," wrote a friend of Phillips Brooks, "when, as Brooks and I met on a street corner, after some bloody reverse of our armies, he could only wring my hand and say, 'Isn't it horrible?' and pass on gloomily; days when it was easy to take counsel of one's meaner fears and cry for peace at any price." Oliver Wendell Holmes described the dark days of '62: "We are nervous and easily put down, but if we are to have a second national birth it must be purchased by throes and agonies." There were depressed hearts who yearned for foreign intervention—anything to stop the slaughter of Americans in that period. And Lowell pictured the national brooding and horror in a word: "No thoughtful American opened his morning's paper without dreading to find that he had no longer a country to love and honor."

The ultimate horror this nation has never realized, never approached in its gloomiest experience. That is the tragedy which unpreparedness invites.

THE GERMAN FLEET.

A DUTCH trawler which encountered the German fleet in the North Sea confirms the worst fears of the apprehensive Lord Churchill. In addition to fifty great ships of the line, there were in the fleet all sorts of unusual get-ups and new-fangled thingamabobs. The Dutch fishermen who looked on the spectacle were fairly without breath when they got back to Holland, and the British haven't much more than breathed since the story got out. Lord Churchill says a veil of secrecy is drawn between England and the German fleet, but the imagination easily penetrates that veil. Lord Churchill himself sees all sorts of things, the Dutch trawler has seen even more, and the end is not yet. Meanwhile, the poor Germans, invent as fast as they can, probably have nothing particularly new in naval warfare, nor is it likely they will have. One must assume that if this were not so the German fleet would not avoid giving battle. It would come out blithely enough, the unusual get-ups and new-fangled thingamabobs would go into action, and our old friend Jellico would be mashed into jelly. That being about the truth of the matter, rolling it over, let us quit the sea and survey the land.

Us Poor Poets.

This humoristic stuff,
This truly verbal guff,
Is awful hard to write.

In vain the fleeting muse,
I cordially abuse
And get discouraged, quite.

Yet, when inspiration ceases,
And my humor falls in pieces,
I do not tear
My thinning hair
Nor cuss;

I leave such temp'ramental show
To bards like Shelley, Keats and Poe
I merely spill
Some ink, inwil-
Ling, thus.

Home.

Two little fleas sat on a rock,
And one to the other said:

Since my old dog is dead."
"I've traveled the wide world over,
And farther will I roam,
But the first darn dog that shows his face
Will be my home, sweet home!"

Picture Girl.

He clasped the maiden to his breast
And ran to catch the speeding car;
A noble deed, a worthy test,
A hero famed afar.
He lived across the bay, you see.
But who, you ask, was his fair queen?
Oh, just a picture girl was she
On some new magazine.

And you have "took" your leave
Will bring the pleasant memories—
Until you stop to think
That maybe Mamie has her arms
Around another gink!

A Southern congressman is going to resign because his district is so divided in opinion on the armed ship issue that he no longer feels himself able to represent it. The simple expedient of siding with the majority serves the purposes of the average congressman, but one doing that cannot, of course, have too many principles.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

BEAUTY CULTURE.

MISS PLATEST.—Complexion formula: Take large breathings of fresh air, mix with a daily bath, and, if possible, a walk of four miles and an occasional game of tennis, rowing, golf or other outdoor sport. Beat in lightly as much good, substantial, well-cooked food, including plenty of green vegetables, as will make the mixture of the proper consistency, adding every hour or so a drink of water of a sufficient quantity to average 10 tumblerfuls a day. Add at least eight hours of refreshing sleep, and be very careful not to spoil the whole by allowing any crumbs of worry or care to fall into the mixing bowl, The result will be good health and a clear, unblemished skin, provided there is no constitutional trouble. Bowels must be kept open. (Garland's lotion for freckles.)

CLEANSING.

A. A.—Any enameled surface—like a sink or wash basin or bath tub—can be effectually cleaned with gasoline, rubbed on with a woolen cloth. Soap and water, in which there is a little ammonia, are usually effective in cleaning enameled surfaces, but if they are badly stained, the gasoline will be found better.

MRS. B.—First clean white gloves thoroughly with good gasoline, then, while they are still damp, cover with a thick coat of good scented talcum powder and hang in the sunshine for a few hours. After they are quite dry brush the powder from them thoroughly. Gloves so cleaned will not only be free from any disagreeable odor, but will have the gloss and freshness of new gloves. Here is also an inexpensive and easy way to clean white kid gloves which are not very much soiled: Put the gloves on the hands and rub well with cornmeal. Be sure to use plenty of cornmeal and rub on the palms and backs of the gloves just as though one were washing the hands.

HEALTH HINTS.

WORRIED MOTHER.—Incontinence of urine is caused by nervousness, by drinking too much water or too little, by eating foods irritating to the urinary system; by taking irritating medicines; by weakness of bladder muscle, and by conditions in bladder which only a capable physician can successfully treat.

G. H. P.—A medical writer says of treatment for acute gastritis: Remove the cause, which is, of course, the food in the stomach that has not undergone digestion. The remnants irritate and keep up the condition. Superinduce vomiting. Then rest the stomach. Take no food for 24 hours. A little chopped ice relieves the thirst. Perhaps a little weak, unsweetened tea, an effervescent drink like soda, lemonade, peppermint tea, later milk and lime water. Take no solids of any kind until later. Clear out the intestinal tract with castor oil, or with calomel and soda. The application of heat to the abdomen will help to relieve the pains. The application of cold to the head will relieve the splitting headache. This, with utmost quiet and a dim, darkened condition of the room will lead to rest and sleep, with reawakening relatively free from pain. Then comes the time for resolution making, never again, etc., the breaking of which occurs with such surprising regularity and singular forgetfulness of the misery of the last bacchanalian revelry. Another writer forbids drugs and recommends careful diet and best massage.

HOW COLD AT THE POLES?

W. I.—A favorable opportunity has not yet been presented for taking meteorological observations at the North Pole; hence, there is no temperature record for that particular locality. The probable maximum temperature, however, even considering the strong isolation of the 24-hour day of midsummer, cannot be much above the freezing point because of the necessity of having to melt all the ice and snow before the immediate surface temperature rises above 32 degrees Fahrenheit, and where there is an open ocean the water is ice cold or nearly so. Amundsen reported a temperature of only 8 degrees below zero at the South Pole, although 76 degrees below was recorded on the way to it. Capt. Scott, in the letter found on his body, mentioned 47 degrees below while crossing the ice barrier. His complete records have not been published. High altitudes at the North Pole are warmer than at equator, if you get high enough into the air. This is the astounding claim made by a German scientist. Prof. Hergesell of Strassburg University makes this claim. This fact, he explains, was determined by balloon ascents in various latitudes under the auspices of the international committee which investigated the atmosphere at high altitudes. Unmanned balloons, with automatic instruments attached, reached altitudes of 11 and 12 miles. In the tropics the instruments registered 148 degrees below zero, while in the latitude of Central Europe, at the same height, the temperature is only 56 degrees to 85 degrees below zero. Another fact it is claimed these balloon ascents established is that the greatest cold of the upper atmosphere is reached at heights from 6 to 7 miles. Contrary to assumption of scientists heretofore, the atmosphere grows warmer above that height.

GUSTAVUS.—The Chemical skyscraper presents a keen angle to the wind, as does the Flatiron building in New York, and this is what produces the similar results. Especially in the breezy months of February and March are these results noticeable. The prevailing winds of this period are from the north, northwest, west and southwest. When they reach the corner of Eighth and Olive they encounter the Chemical building, as if it were a tremendous sail. Across the street to the west is the Federal building, comparatively low, and on the southwest corner is an old-fashioned two-story structure with one of similar construction directly opposite on the southeast corner. This conformation of the immediate neighborhood is what enables the Chemical building to do its peculiar wind-producing stunt. Another factor in the situation is that this vicinity constitutes a part of the old Mill Creek valley, which extends from the southwest part of St. Louis northeasterly to the Mississippi, and which itself acts as a sort of funnel for the prevailing winds. When all these facts are taken into consideration it is not strange that the Olive street block from Eighth eastward to Seventh street is the windiest in St. Louis.

United States Must Punish Villa Raiders

WHO IS BACKING VILLA?

New York Sun: Incidental to the direction of the military activities there rests upon the United States another task to be performed immediately. By whom was the raid across our border inspired? What ultimate influence produced it? Was it exclusively Mexican in conception, or was it the fruit of political intrigue of a wider and more sinister significance? The answers to these questions are for Washington to find.

"IRON FIST" NEEDED.

New York Staats-Zeitung: The Mexican trouble is again in full swing. It is really quite as was to be expected. It is clearly evident that Carranza is not the proper man to bring Mexico back under one hat.

It may be assumed that the administration has learned by this time that a "word of might," even if spoken by President Wilson, can accomplish nothing in Mexico. What the bandits down there need is a "man with an iron fist." Let Washington find such a man now. When there was one, in the person of Huerta, he was forced out and finally hunted to death. What now?

FORCE THE ONLY REMEDY.

New York Tribune: It is time to put an end to this shameful farce of enforcing American rights against Mexican assassins.

Killing Americans on this side of the Rio Grande by organized bodies of Mexicans is an act of war. The only remedy left to the United States is to enter the territory in which Villa is operating and to deal with him and his followers as open enemies.

Nothing short of a demonstration of force can now restore American prestige in Mexico and undeceive the lawless elements there as to the value our Government sets on the lives of its citizens. The administration has evaded a duty to Americanism long enough.

WASHINGTON TO BLAME.

Detroit Free Press: The massacre at Columbus, N. M., is cause for indignation, but not for surprise. It is the legitimate fruit of watchful waiting and the application of that policy. It is the logical consequence of the whole course of the American Government. Washington has encouraged the Mexicans to acts of violence by failure to protect American citizens in Mexico. Washington has incited Pancho Villa to his course, first by encouraging and petting him and afterward by treacherously breaking faith with him in favor of Carranza.

OTHER CRIMES UNAVENGED.

Denver News: The invasion of American territory and the butchering of American citizens by renegade Villa and his band of cutthroats at Columbus, N. M., calls imperatively for decisive action from Washington, such steps as will convince the whole tribe of revolutionists and pillagers that tolerance has ceased to be a political virtue, even with this national administration, and that retribution is at hand, not only for those later crimes, but for those which have gone before. The murder of American miners a few weeks ago by a Villa band remains unavenged.

FORCING WAR ON US.

Philadelphia Record: It is difficult to see how armed intervention in Mexico can be longer avoided—not intervention in the political affairs of that country, but intervention for self-protection. The affair at Columbus, N. M., was indisputably an act of war. The United States cannot submit to invasions and other violations of its territory and the Government at Washington cannot accept assurances from Mexico that do not assure. Our territory has been violated and American citizens have been murdered in their own homes. The invaders have fought American troops and killed and wounded a large number. This is war, and when war is made on the nation the nation must defend itself.

NO RELIANCE ON CARRANZA.

Baltimore News: This time Villa has invaded American territory, butchered soldiers and civilians, men and women. No nation can permit so gross an outrage to go unpunished. If Carranza could bring the man before a firing squad, that would answer; but Carranza has shown himself impotent to capture Villa or control his movements. No alternative is left the United States but to take matters into its own hands.

TIME FOR INVASION.

Topeka Daily Capital: The United States should follow this murder up, invading Mexican territory far enough and long enough to get him, drag him out of the country and hand him the punishment his crimes deserve. Patience has reached the limit, where it ceases to be a virtue in the case of the border ruffians in Mexico.

"GET THE MURDERERS."

Boston Globe: Had Villa not been declared a bandit and an outlaw we would be at war with Mexico at the present moment. It would not be because we wished, but because the Mexicans wished it. A nation attacked has no choice. Villa as a bandit presents a more difficult problem. He cannot be allowed to repeat his dastardly performance at Columbus under any circumstances. He is now a man who has committed murder on American soil. The United States has a duty to perform regarding a fugitive murderer, and that is to "get him."

Newton D. Baker

A MAN OF ABILITY.

Indianapolis News: Under our system it is almost impossible to say whether a man will or will not make a good Secretary of War. It is the merest chance that he will know anything about military affairs. Fortunately, this is not necessary. Two of the greatest War Secretaries this country has had, Edwin M. Stanton and Elihu Root, were lawyers. But they were strong and masterful men, accustomed to weighing evidence, and possessing fine executive ability. Mr. Baker is a good lawyer and he has also had some executive experience. What is almost as important, he has had political experience, which ought to make it easy for him to work with other men.

A "SECRETARY" OF WAR.

Louisville Courier-Journal: Newton D. Baker of Cleveland will be just that: a "Secretary" of War. Without disparagement of the vigorous and intellectual former Mayor of Ohio's largest city, it can be surmised that he will not break with the President over any matter of policy. He will study the questions confronting him, arrive at a thoughtful decision, press his views in the Cabinet with all the skill and earnestness at his command and then—abide by the will of the very definite MacGregor at the head of the table.

To the mind of the Courier-Journal that is precisely what the head of a Government department should do. He is a confidential chief clerk of the President. Yet there arise Cabinet members now and then who take themselves so seriously that they decline to complete their service under a President because he is unwilling to accept their individual views on great questions. Such a situation, treacherously interpreted, resulted in the withdrawal of Mr. Bryan. A similar situation, earnestly and honestly interpreted, lost Mr. Garrison to the Cabinet.

Congress Gives President a Free Hand

OLD GLORY STILL FLOATS.

New York Times: The courage and the wisdom of the President have their reward. The last stronghold of sedition, of alien intrigue and factional conspiracy, has surrendered. The Senate last week, by a vote of 68 to 14, and the House of Representatives yesterday, by a vote of 276 to 142, have put out of the way the cowardly proposal to contract the sphere of American rights to make room for the expansion of Germany's sphere of lawlessness. The Stars and Stripes float over the Capitol.

MERELY CLEARS THE WAY.

New York Tribune: In so far as the votes in the two houses may be construed as strengthening the President in his purpose to surrender no American rights—to stand for the strict fulfilment of all the obligations of international law—we welcome them. If they steady the administration's policy, they will have done a useful service. But it is impossible to blink the fact that they have not really altered the status quo existing before the Pou letter was written.

STRENGTHENS WILSON'S HAND.

New York Evening Sun: The extent of this triumph is beyond mistaking. From now on the President will exercise his power over foreign affairs without further serious hindrance from Congress. The war of the congressional Kaiserists on the administration is over. The enemy have been dispersed and some of them have made a separate peace. Mr. Wilson is now free to devote his attention to Count von Bernstorff. The administration is not only in a position to command respect from that formidable diplomat; it is actually likely to rank higher in German regard than before the congressional plot was hatched.

A UNITED GOVERNMENT.

New York Evening World: The President's challenge to Congress has produced the desired result. Both houses are now on record as unwilling to meddle with his handling of the armed merchantman controversy. It is no longer possible for Germany or any other foreign Power to point to the United States as a Government divided against itself or to affront this nation's flag upon the cynical assumption that Congress will push the President aside and take diplomatic negotiations into its own hands in order to keep the country out of war.

DISUNION AND SCUTTLE ENDED.

Brooklyn Eagle: Weakness, hesitancy, vacillation invite aggression. Firmness, directness and stability discourage it. These latter qualities have been displayed by the President in his recent dealings with Germany and the latter must now be fully convinced that there will be no want of harmony between Mr. Wilson and the Congress should outrage challenge both to act.

The knowledge in Berlin that disunion and scuttle have been decisively voted down should have a restraining effect upon the directors of submarine warfare.

A WARNING TO BERLIN, VIENNA.

Philadelphia Inquirer: The Gore resolution in the Senate and the McLemore atrocity in the House were not only barbarous in their logical working out, but they were unpatriotic and un-American in their very conception, since they sought unblushingly and openly to hamstring the Government and deprive it of its constitutional rights.

But enough of this. The whole miserable movement was reeking with ignominy and loaded down with cowardice, dishonor and hyphenated audacity. It is done for. The great moral sense of the citizenship of the United States abhors the murder of women and children on shipboard and plants itself firmly on the observance of international law. This country will not in any manner whatever condone such crimes. It will not be put in the position of even seeming to acquiesce in them. It may not be able to prevent all assassination, but at least it can convey this word to Berlin and Vienna: Thou shalt not murder citizens of the United States.

This it has done by the action of both Senate and House. And Germany and Austria now know that if they continue to violate the laws of God, of humanity and of the nations, they will do so at the cost of the severance of friendly relations.

VOICE OF THE REPUBLIC.

Louisville Courier-Journal: There was a desperate squirming among the politicians, the hyphenates, the cowards, the peace-at-any-price doughfaces, but there was no getting around the issue which they themselves had raised and which the President insisted they should settle. And forced to vote, they voted.

As a consequence, every other flag except the Stars and Stripes has been hauled down from the Capitol and the flag that remains floats in full view of the world, re-emphasizing its message to the humblest citizen of America and to the most powerful despot of Europe, that the republic for which it speaks does not propose to blot itself out because imperial absolutism in its desperate death struggle across the sea refuses to recognize any law of man or God.

MEANS "STRICT ACCOUNTABILITY"

New York Globe: The vote in Congress is full and fair warning that "strict accountability" is no longer an academic doctrine. It has been provided with teeth. Any country taking the lives of our citizens contrary to international law will do so at its peril. We have not yet progressed far enough to stand for international right wherever attacked, but barbarism must not express itself at our expense. So defending ourselves against attack we are encouraged by the thought that we shall do something not only for ourselves but for mankind at large. By opposing the practices of the German Admiralty, we are protecting not only the interests of Americans, but interests of Germans born and unborn. Germans, when the war fury gets out of their brains, will see that they are as much concerned as we are about protecting the legitimate freedom of the seas and in preventing lapses into savagery.

ENDS PRO-GERMAN EFFORTS.

New York Herald: The House of Representatives has repudiated Wilhelm the Nihilist and his field commanders, Count von Bernstorff and Mr. Bryan, quite as emphatically as the Senate did last week. The vote taken in disposing of the McLemore resolution should end the pro-German agitation conducted for the purpose of embarrassing the President and besmirching this nation.

WRONG-HEADED AGITATION.

Cincinnati Times-Star: The attempt to wrest from the chief executive of the nation his constitutional initiative in foreign relations has dismally failed. To the credit of Congress it must be said that the Senate and the House of Representatives refused by large majorities to subscribe to a doctrine which would have been in its effect as vicious upon the future of the nation as it was subversive of the intent of the fathers.

Now that the world appreciates that the nation stands with the President, the agitation should be forgotten. Several of its aspects were not the sort of which an American can be proud, especially the admission by Senator Gore that he introduced his resolution upon the basis of a rumor which he did not attempt to confirm.

The Zeppelins

Louisville Evening Post: The Herodian Kaiser continues remorselessly the slaughter of the innocents. The children on the Lusitania are still unrevenged; that crime is unexpiated. The year's correspondence, dark with turbulence and black with dishonor, draws to a close with every agreement withdrawn and with the assertion of the right to repeat it put up to the Congress of the United States for acceptance, and accepted by Gore in the Senate and Mann in the House and by a few others.

But while this discussion goes on the murderers of the air are not idle. For their raids they chose Sunday, out of respect to that God the Kaiser has created in His own image, and worships with fanatical devotion.

Sunday, on the quiet coasts of England, the Kaiser's birds of war came down and three men, four women and five children were slain. "A mother with four children in her arms, was found dead in her home, with the husband and father just alive."

They have gone to join the children of the Lusitania, to stand before the great white throne until, at the judgment day, their murderer appears.

Kipling has a short story of the return of the children, dead before their time, to comfort those on earth who have a spiritual vision clear enough to see and welcome them. The story is entitled, "They," and it is preceded by a poem entitled "The Return of the Children," which may well be read this day:

THE RETURN OF THE CHILDREN.

Neither the harps nor the crowns amused, nor the cherubs' dove-winged races—
Holding hands forlornly the Children wanderer beneath the Dome;
Plucking the radiant robes of the passers by,
and with pitiful faces
Begging what Princes and Powers refused:—
"Ah, please will you let us go home?"

Over the jeweled floor, nigh weeping, ran to them Mary the Mother,
Kneeled and caressed and made promise with kisses, and drew them along to the gateway,
Yea, the all-iron unbribable Door which Peter must guard and none other.
Straightway She took the Keys from his keeping, and opened and freed them straightway.

Then, to Her Son, Who had seen and smiled,
She said: "On the night that I bore Thee
What didst Thou care for a love beyond mine or a heaven that was not my arm?
Didst Thou push from the nipple, O Child, to hear the angels adore Thee?
When we two lay in the breath of the kine?"
And He said:—"Thou hast done no harm."

So through the Void the Children ran homeward merrily hand in hand,
breathless Heavens stood still;
And the Guards of the Void resheathed their swords, for they heard the Command:
"Shall I that have suffered the children to come to me hold them against their will?"

It is a dream not here to be realized, but if they may not be recalled, surely the Congress of the United States may say to the Butcher of the Rhine that every American child slain by his order is a cause of war, into which the nation will go as one man.

Cruise of the Moewe

New York Tribune: The commander of the Moewe has shown himself as bold and resourceful a seaman as the gallant Capt. von Muller and a complete account of his cruise should prove no less instructive and thrilling than the story of the Emden. Such exploits have been rare in the present war and it is doubtless for this reason that so many absurd conclusions have been drawn from this single incident. People forget that in former naval wars it was impossible to clear the seas completely of raiders and speak of the Moewe's successful adventure as if it were a demonstration of incredible laxity on the part of Germany's foes.

The extraordinary success of the British fleet has blinded them to the lessons of history and the episode is dwelt upon as amazing and hitherto unparalleled. Thus the World, remarking on the industry displayed in the control of supposedly neutral traffic, asks, with a great show of resentment, if we are to infer that the blockading fleet "is so busily occupied in this way that it has no eyes for German sea raiders moving out from and back to German ports under its very nose." The Staats-Zeitung likewise solemnly declares that "the British boast that England controls the sea has again been exposed in all its absurdity." And the Vossische Zeitung, in its enthusiasm, goes so far as to say that the feat "proves to England that German alone is unconquerable at sea!"

Such comments show an astonishing ignorance of naval warfare and history. The performance of the Moewe proves nothing. The wonder is that we have heard of so few excursions of this kind, and were it not that the Germans had placed so much faith in their submarines it can hardly be doubted that similar attempts would have been made before. It has proved virtually impossible in all wars of the past to effect the complete sealing up of ports. Between 1793 and 1800 the British lost no less than 4314 ships by capture. Nor in the old days was it always possible to prevent the escape even of considerable squadrons. Lord Bridport was celebrated in his day as a singularly daring and successful blockader, yet Bruix escaped from Brest in spite of his watchfulness.

The conditions are doubtless very different today, yet in some respects the complete sealing up of ports is, if anything, more difficult than in sailing days. The decision of the Royal Commission appointed in 1859 to consider the defenses of the the United Kingdom was that the effective blockade of an enemy's ports had become well nigh impossible. This was soon to be disproved, but it is notorious enough that occasional evasions were possible in our Civil War. The Wilmington blockading squadron thought it was doing very well when it had demonstrated that a third of the attempts to run the blockade in or out were frustrated. The possibility of evasions has, in short, always been recognised; there is nothing unique in the escape of the Moewe, and it is not at all unlikely that we shall hear of further adventures of the same sort in future.

GREAT SEAMANSHIP.

Philadelphia Press: How the Moewe contrived to remain at sea all these months without being caught is more surprising than the feat of running the blockade. The fear of submarines and the exceedingly stormy and foggy weather in the North Sea at this season of the year make anything like a close blockade of the German coast impossible. But on the high seas, with enemy cruisers everywhere and every passing ship liable to give warning of her position by wireless, the daring and ingenuity of the Moewe's commander must have been constantly taxed to their utmost.

Racquet Club Dinner Dance Closes Formal Winter Season Which Has Been Gayest One Within Several Years—After-Lenten Period to Open With Many Weddings and Parties al Fresco.

By Frances Cabanne Scovel.

THE Racquet Club dinner dance Tuesday night, which was a Mardi Gras affair to close the formal winter season, was a "small and early," and not the brilliant party it was expected to be. The reason is said to be that everyone is tired. That, in itself, tells the story of a winter the gayest the social set has seen in a number of years.

So many dances, large and small, have been given that a costume dance at the Racquet Club at the end of the season tempted but few who dined and danced and went home before 2 o'clock—very early for a carnival dance, as the party was planned to be.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bond Lambert had a large table with a lot of the young married set for guests. Mrs. Lambert went as a Watteau shepherdess and was charming.

Among her guests were Mr. and Mrs. Alden H. Little, Mrs. Guido Pantaleoni, Mr. and Mrs. Julius S. Walsh Jr., J. Lawrence Mauran and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Dickson Jr.

Walter Cerre Taylor entertained a table which was chaperoned by Mrs. J. Dwight Dana, and the guests were Misses Marie Wight, who wore an Oriental costume, Miss Katherine Pierce, Grace Taylor, who was a Chinese lady, Ann Collins, Messrs. J. Dwight Dana, Oliver Anderson, John Young Brown and Andrew McCreery.

Louis Werner had a large party which included Col. William M. Kenly, the new commandant at Jefferson Barracks, Capt. Ralph C. Caldwell and Capt. and Mrs. Albert R. Dillingham.

Miss Marie Church wore one of the most conspicuous costumes there. She was a ballet girl in short white tarlatan skirts, white satin bodice sleeveless and cut decollette. Miss Clair Macbeth was an Eskimo in a white parka.

CAPT HALSEY E. YATES of the Thirtieth Infantry, U. S. A., whose wife was formerly Miss Julie Chamberlain Nicholls of St. Louis, has been appointed Military Attache to Rumania and is on his way to Bucharest to take his post. Upon his arrival in London he was met by a courier with whom he crossed through the warring countries.

Mrs. Yates will remain at Plattsburg Barracks, N. Y., until it is considered safe for her to join Capt. Yates. Mrs. Yates is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Nicholls. She was one of the special maids of honor at the Veiled Prophet's ball the year she made her debut. Shortly afterward she went abroad and took up sculpture. One of her pieces of work, the head of a boy in bronze, was admitted to the spring salon in Paris.

Mrs. Yates accompanied her husband when he was ordered to Alaska and, for two years was at a small post, snowbound most of the year.

The appointment of attache to a foreign country is considered a diplomatic honor. Always an interesting post, it is more so in time of war. The term of duty is about two years.

Hats to conform to the new gowns received daily. Sally Meagher, 801 Century Bldg.

ABOUT 200 members attended the jingle party at the Century Boat Club Friday evening. They were required to be decorated with bells, the women wearing bells in their hair, about the arms, around the neck, on the trimmings of their dress, around the waist and some even had them attached to the ankles. The men wore the club colors, green and white, with bell attachments.

A bell orchestra, consisting of an electrical arrangement of 80 bells, supported by saxophones, banjo, drums and piano, added to the novelty of the entertainment. In the ballroom from the arches in the ceiling and about the wall, long streamers of sleigh bells, worked by an electrical attachment, were kept in tune and harmony with the bell orchestra. The installation and placing of the electrical devices and bells was done by the Decorations Committee, consisting of Messrs. Alois Fassel, Otto Buder, Carl Luyties, Otto H. Olfe Jr., F. T. Thomsen, Philip F. Fox and William C. Schmals, chairman.

ANNOUNCEMENT of the engagement of Miss Lucille Ravenscroft of [illegible] Waterman avenue, to James F. Brown, a mining engineer of Goldfield, Nev., was announced today. Her father, W. T. Ravenscroft, is vice president of the St. Louis Union Trust Co., and with his family removed to St. Louis last fall from Denver. The bridegroom-to-be is a Yale graduate and formerly resided in Denver.

The wedding ceremony will take place at the home of the bride the evening of March 15, the Rev. W. C. Bitting, pastor of the Second Baptist Church, officiating. It will be attended by a number of out-of-town relatives and friends. Roger [illegible] of Milwaukee will be the attendant of the bridegroom, whose sister, Miss Sallie Lewis Brown, will be maid of honor.

Freckle-Face

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

Do you know how easy it is to remove those ugly spots so that no one will call you freckle-face?

Simply get an ounce of othine, double strength, from your druggist and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of freckles and get a beautiful complexion. The sun and winds of March have a strong tendency to bring out freckles, and as a result more othine is sold in this month. Be sure to ask for the double strength othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove the freckles.—ADV,

Nemo NEWS
Devoted to the HEALTH, COMFORT and BEAUTY of WOMEN

Almost every woman knows something about Nemo Corsets; but all women should know and remember—

1. Every Nemo is especially made for some individual type of figure.

2. Every Nemo is a model of correct style.

3. Every Nemo renders some exclusive and invaluable hygienic service.

4. Physicians endorse and approve of Nemo Corsets.

5. The Nemo models for stout figures are world-famous.

6. Several Nemo models are made especially for slender figures.

Get the Nemo that is made exactly for your own figure. Yes, there is such a corset!

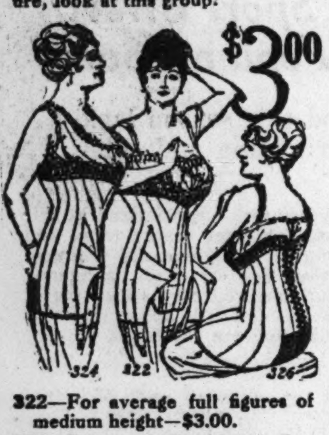
If you are of average stout figure, look at this group:

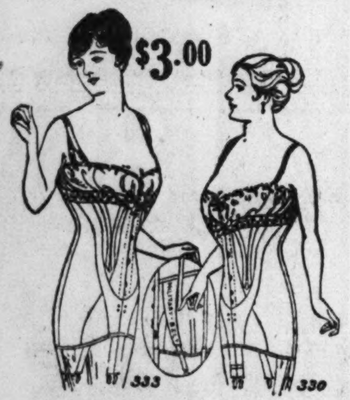


322—For average full figures of medium height—$3.00.
326—For a similar figure, but with heavier hips—$3.00.
324—For taller full figures, high bust and back—$3.00.

Millions of women find unequaled comfort and style in these models. Semi-elastic Lasticurve-Back give extreme pliability. Nemo Self-Reducing Straps gently massage away surplus fat.

Body-Training Military-Belt

Perhaps you're of average slender or medium figure. You want a beautiful corset, a durable corset—one that fits and gives you stylish lines. Look at these newest Nemo models—



No. 330 is for slender or medium figures, short or of medium height—$3.00.
No. 333 is for taller figures, slender or medium—$3.00.

These corsets will give you a graceful, healthful poise, constantly remind you to assume an erect carriage, and make you breathe deeply. And you'll always be comfortable in them.

Just because your figure isn't "average"—but is too heavy in certain parts—don't say that there is no corset for you. You women of large, fleshy figure—look at this Nemo group:

402—For short, stocky figures, large abdomen—$4.00.
403—Medium height—$4.00.
405—Tall and large—$4.00.

Semi-elastic Nemo Relief Bands and Self-Reducing Straps support and gradually reduce a large abdomen by constant auto-massage. Nemo semi-elastic Incurve-Back insures comfort in any position.

If your figure belongs in any of the above groups, one of the corsets illustrated is just the right one to give you perfect style, comfort and hygienic service.

If you are of still another type, go to your corset dealer and be fitted in the RIGHT Nemo. There is a Nemo model made just for you.

TODAY'S AID TO BEAUTY

An especially fine shampoo for this weather can be easily made at trifling expense by simply dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox in a cup of hot water. Pour slowly on scalp and massage briskly. This creates a soothing, cooling lather that dissolves and removes all dandruff, excess oil and dirt. Rinsing leaves the scalp spotlessly clean, soft and pliant, while the hair takes on a glossy richness of natural color, also a fluffiness which makes it seem very much heavier than it is. After a canthrox shampoo arranging the hair is a pleasure.—ADV.

PIMPLES ON FACE
ITCHING INTENSE

Began Getting Bigger. Large, Hard and Very Red. Scattered Over Face. Had to Scratch.

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"I noticed that my face was covered with pimples which began getting bigger. They were large and hard and were very red and there were so many festered at a time that I had to squeeze them out and they formed like a boil under the skin. They scattered all over my face and the itching was so intense that I had to scratch my face so much it bled.

"The trouble lasted about a month and I used ——— tablets, but they did not do any good. I noticed a Cuticura Soap and Ointment advertisement so I thought I would try them. The next day I saw the pimples were going away and I used two cakes of Cuticura Soap and three boxes of Cuticura Ointment and I was healed." A Single Application Banishes Every Hair

(The Modern Beauty)

Here is how any woman can [illegible] and quickly remove objectionable hairy growths without possible injury to the skin: Make a paste with some powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This is a painless, inexpensive method and, excepting where the growth is unusually thick, a single application is enough. You should, however, be careful to get genuine delatone.—ADV.

TODAY'S BEAUTY HINT

It is not necessary to shampoo quite so frequently if your hair is properly cleansed each time by use of a really good shampoo. The easiest to use and quickest drying shampoo that we can recommend to our readers may be prepared very cheaply by dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox, obtained from your druggist, in a cup of hot water. This rubbed into the scalp creates a thick lather, soothing and cooling in its action, as well as very beneficial to scalp and hair. After rinsing, the scalp is fresh and clean, while the hair dries quickly and evenly, developing a bright luster and a soft fluffiness that makes it seem very heavy.—ADV.

PAGEANT DRAMA PLAYERS TO BE DRILLED BY LONDONER

Preparations Soon to Begin on "As You Like It" Performance in Forest Park, June 4.

Cecil J. Sharp of London, who is a recognized authority on English folk songs and dances, will drill St. Louis amateur players of the Pageant Drama Association, in preparation for the "As You Like It" performances in Forest Park, the week of June 4.

Sharp will be here, probably the week of March 26, and will drill squads of 24 persons each, for four hours a day. Arrangements for his visit are being made by John H. Gundlach, president of the Pageant Drama Association, and Percival Chubb, who is chairman of the Shakspeare Ter-centenary Committee of the Drama League of America.

Miss Florence Grant, physical director at Washington University, will aid in the training of the Shakspearean players. She is teaching some of the dances to Washington University students who are to stage a pageant on the university campus next month, in connection with the convention of the Drama League of America. Miss Grant studied English folk singing and dancing under Sharp, at Eliot, Me., last summer.

Men will be numerous among the dancers, Chubb said yesterday. The Morris dances, he said, will probably be done by men alone.

SPLIT SALARY CASE DEADLOCK

Chicago Commission Said to Be Unable to Decide Which Woman to Believe.

CHICAGO, March 11.—After more than a week's deliberation, the verdict of the City Civil Service Commission in the city hall split salary scandal, which will be made public tomorrow or Monday, is said to allow the entire subject to revert to its original standing.

The commission is said to have been unable to decide whether the charges of Mrs. Page Walter Eaton have more weight or are more worthy of consideration than the denials of Mrs. Louise Osborne Rowe, Commissioner of Public Welfare. Mrs. Eaton charged that Mrs. Rowe forced her to split her salary for the benefit of Mayor William Hale Thompson's sister-in-law, Mrs. Margaret Mivelaz.

GERMAN GIFT FOR HOSPITAL STARTS CONTROVERSY IN JAPAN

Pro-British Section of Kobe Community Opposes Naming Ward After the Kaiser.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

KOBE, Japan, Feb. 11.—A proposal from the German residents of Kobe to contribute an operating ward to be known as the "Kaiser Wilhelm II operating room," in connection with the reconstruction of the International Hospital here, has excited a controversy.

The trustees of the hospital accepted the fund some time ago, the sum having been raised by German residents of the city in commemoration of the silver wedding anniversary of the German Emperor and Empress. The fund amounted to $7000, and the original idea was to send it as a gift to the Kaiser, but the latter suggested that the money be devoted to some local charity. In turning it over, the Germans stipulated that German-made surgical instruments should be used.

The feeling among the pro-British section of the community is so strong that an endeavor has been made to raise a substitute fund, and this has already reached $4000, but the Germans declare it is beyond the power of the trustees to change the conditions of their gift.

The controversy centers mainly about the naming of the ward after the Kaiser, and in this matter the Germans will accept no compromise. The Japan Chronicle, voicing the pro-British view, declares it is impossible to agree "to the association of a building for alleviating suffering with the name of one who stands as the apotheosis of the frightfulness of the German general staff."

GIFT BY MRS. E. H. HARRIMAN

Presents Painting of Lincoln to National Art Gallery.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—Mrs. E. H. Harriman of New York has presented the National Art Gallery with a portrait of Abraham Lincoln, painted by George H. Story, the New York artist.

In a letter to Mrs. Harriman made public today, describing the interviews with Mr. Lincoln, the artist says his immediate reason for executing the portrait at this late day was the absence of Lincoln's portraits in any public galleries or in any departmental building at Washington.

PRINCE OF MONACO LOOKS TO AMERICA TO LIFT UP EUROPE

'Only Chance' for Its Survival in Infusion of Our Blood Into War Land's People.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

PARIS, Feb. 24.—It is to America that the Prince of Monaco looks for the regeneration of Europe.

"The only chance for the survival and future civilization of Europe," said he in receiving the correspondent of the Associated Press, "is the infusion of American blood into Europeon peoples, and, if such a thing were possible," he added, smilingly, "I would like to see the best physiological means used for the purpose of injecting it. No country has done more for the progress of humanity than America, and it is only by learning from America that there can ever be such a thing as a United States of Europe.

"But there is this difficulty: European peoples are the slaves of tradition. It is in their blood, resisting every tendency to change. They live, as it were, in a web of race prejudices and customs and ideas which only the adoption of the American outlook can alter. If this change does not take place, and there should be three or four more wars in modern style, Europe will become a desert.

"Every war sows the seed of other wars. Many Colonels of regiments will tell you that the first 200 of their men killed in battle are always the finest men in the regiment, and thus war takes away the best of the race and leaves its reproduction to those of inferior quality. A few more such wars and Europe will be devastated, and those who are left with any strength or spirit will seek another sphere for their energies. That is why the peace at the end of the war must be established on such strong elements that the future may be for long time preserved against brutal force, not one that will lead to further wars by unjust treatment towards the independence of any nation."

Possible Basis for Peace.

As to the possible basis of such a peace, Prince Albert said:

"The best basis is that of nationality. It is a complicated problem, but, with the exercise of good will, not insoluble. On this principle there need be no intrusion of political or extra-territorial ambitions. Politics will become internal, not movements involving other countries.

"Of all the regrettable features of the war," Prince Albert added, "none is more regrettable than the loss by Germany of her splendid opportunity for benefiting humanity. Germans were everywhere received by all other countries in a friendly and admiring spirit. They were regarded without distrust and the greatest attention was paid to what Germany was doing, or thought to be doing, for progress and the advance of civilization. There was much in her efforts and achievements to admire. Her internal administration, for instance, is the best in the world, and there was much else that other peoples might have learned from her with advantage. But this opportunity the Germans have now compromised by great mistakes; and for years to come they have alienated the sympathies and lost the confidence of other nations."

Prince Albert of Monaco has won a more solid reputation as an oceanographer and man of science than as the ruler of the small, but famous, principality from which he takes his tilte. When not engaged on ocean exploration he usually resides in Paris. His chief part in the war is concerned with the maintenance of about 1000 beds in his principality for the use of the wounded, and with the hospital care, at his spacious "hotel" in the Avenue du Trocadero, of a weekly draft of four homeless soldiers on war leave from the front.

Correspondence With Kaiser.

The last time Prince Albert was prominently before the public was in connection with the seizure of his chateau of Marchais in the north of France by Gen. von Buelow's invading troops at the beginning of the war, the imposition of a large war fine on the estate and the district, with its 20 villages, and the publication of a correspondence on the subject between the Prince and the German Kaiser, with whom his friendship had been lasting for many years.

The correspondence, the Prince informed the Associated Press, has been followed by a further interchange of letters, but he thinks the time has not come for disclosing them for the judgment of the world, especially as it seems that the whole of it did not reach the Kaiser. His latest news is that the Germans are behaving considerately at the chateau and are not injuring the building or removing its contents. The Germans seem to consider that the war fine was justified by the supposed fact that the principality is under the protectorate of France, whereas the Prince claims the benefit of neutrality as the ruler of a state of which the absolute independence is not affected by certain customs agreements with the French Government. Though the principality has not [illegible] in sequestration the German properties existing on her territory, the Germans have put in sequestration the monegasque properties in Germany.

The Prince, though best known to the world as a scientific student of the ocean and its wonders, is a personality of greater interest today as one of the German Emperor's oldest friends.

Mystery He Can't Fathom.

"To me," he said to the correspondent, "the Kaiser's appearance under such unexpected features, when he was reaching the highest level of power, success and influence, is a mystery I cannot fathom. I have spent year after year with him at Kiel, and am convinced that he was sincere in his desire for the maintenance of peace. His cordial treatment of the people of all nationalities he came in contact with, his encouragement of art and science and progress in every direction, his familiarity with the necessity of peace for his country's continued prosperity frequently struck me.

He has plenty of discrimination and good sense, as I often had occasion to notice when he spoke of some man or group he had been talking to, sometimes for several hours at a time. His last three Ambassadors at Paris, whom I knew, Count Munster, Prince Radolin and Baron von Schoen, were representative of the Kaiser's pacific tendencies rather than of the policy of the German Government with which they must often have been in contrast. I don't yet see clearly enough his own will appearing in the character of this war, which is the most humiliating blow ever given to civilization."

FREE CLINIC DISCLOSES SAD NEGLECT OF CHILDREN'S TEETH

About 150 School Pupils Have Visited Institution in Wheeling, W. Va., Since December.

WHEELING, W. Va., March 11.—Since the free dental clinic was established by the Social Service and Charity Association, in December, about 150 school children have been treated. Almost without exception the teeth of these children have been in a sadly neglected condition, some of the patients having to undergo treatment of a painful character.

It has been observed that while the children from homes of luxury have to be coaxed, bribed or driven to the clinic, those of less fortunate parents play marbles in the ante room of the association while awaiting their turn, with seeming contempt for the pain in store for them.

For this contrast one theory advanced is based on the "psychology of the crowd." Its supporters say the children display courage because they come to the clinic in large numbers, have the same courage as a mob and are afraid to show timidity for fear of scorn of their companions. Others say the children of the poor learn from earliest childhood to depend upon themselves and therefore need no moral support in facing a crisis.

and position in life are assured to the children of the man who has the loving foresight to protect them under a Monthly-Income Policy in the Missouri State Life. For example, a man in Texas took out $30.00 per month each in favor of his two young sons. Less than two months later the Missouri State Life was called upon to pay each of these two boys $30.00 monthly to continue as long as they live. Was this not a wise provision of the father?

Lansing's Note on Ship Seizures, a Blow to British

moral leadership which, so far from constituted a grave surrender of a compromising neutrality, would have given it a more assured basis.

How Acts of England and Germany Differ.

As it is, United States action has been limited to a nice and scrupulously exact distribution of notes which by their calculated balance have lost their sense of reality and their effectiveness. Germany has quite obviously treated them with small respect, and the British public have come to look for them with a certain amused tolerance, qualified by something much deeper, as in the case of Mr. Lansing's singularly severe note. It is impossible not to remember that on one side these notes deal with the murder of American citizens and on the other with the delay of American letters and merchandise. We do not think that these two offenses are of equal gravity. We do not like to think that America thinks them of equal gravity. We have taken no innocent life in all this war. We have exercised our sea power with a scrupulous regard for the interests of neutrals. We do not admit that we do wrong in following precedents that the United States has established in the past. It is true that we have caused inconvenience to neutrals, but only such inconvenience as is inevitable in the legitimate prosecution of war; and what inconvenience have we caused comparable with the famine in Lancashire which resulted from the blockade of the Southern ports? But Germany has broken every law of God and man and broken it insolently, defiantly, over the back of America. It has sunk your ships and murdered your citizens. And you have sent to the criminal the same formulas of protest that you have sent to us about your parcels and your letters. Is this really the interpretation of the mind of America? Is this really the measure of your values and your moral indignation? I do not believe it. I do not believe that the nation which fought the noblest war of liberation in history has ceased to discriminate between murder and the little more or less of the counting house.

If this calculated policy had had a restraining influence on Germany there would be something to be said for it. But has it? I can see nothing in the record of the past year to show that Germany is moved a hair's breadth by the American protests. Mr. Wilson's great declaration that he would hold Germany to "strict accountability" and that he assumed in the name of America the guardianship of humanity, seemed to open up a new and nobler role for your republic. But German actions have covered that declaration with derision, and few today assume that the coincidence of the collapse of the submarine "blockade" was the fruit of that stroke. It seemed so at the time, but we know now that the submarine "blockade" ended because the British navy had defeated it. And German indifference to the law of "strict accountability" has convinced us that our conclusion is just.

Thinks President's Policy Has Been Weak.

I am far from suggesting that I am capable of indicating a policy which would have been at once pacific and strong. I cannot conceive that Mr. Roosevelt, had he been in office, would have seen his course quite so clearly as he sees it in opposition. America was lacking in the two main essentials of a decisive national policy—the material power to give it backing, and the element of substantial cohesion. But with every allowance for this, I cannot escape the conclusion that the President's policy has been equivocal and morally weak. It has offered the world no standard of values and no splendid indignation. American citizens lie murdered at the bottom of the Atlantic, and Count von Bernstorff is still the accredited representative at Washington of the Government that sent them to their death. That is not a pleasant thought for Americans. Nor is it a thought which is balanced by the new note which comes as I write, protesting against the alleged interference with the American mail bag. I grow tired of that mail bag.

For the personal character and political aims of Mr. Wilson I have the profoundest admiration. I understand the difficult course he has had to steer. I realize how wise and statesmanlike his action has been, compared with the amiable but mindless pacificism of Mr. Bryan. I am sure that he has far-reaching purposes in connection with the part, the disinterested part, which America will play in the settlement of the world when the great tragedy that overshadows our lives and drains our blood is over. There is no one whom I would more willingly see exercising his influence in that struggle of the peacemakers than the President of the United States. But I think he would have come to that task with more authority if there had been in him more of the passion of indignation and less of the determination to see that no matter whether blood was in one scale or cotton in the other, the balance was always true. For we do not admit that this is a case of Tweedledum and Tweedledee. We know it is not. America knows it is not.

I have never held, and there are few today who would hold, that we have any special claim on the consideration of the United States. I do not think we earned any such special consideration in the circumstances of the War of 1812 or during the Civil War. But the cause of liberty and humanity has very peculiar claims on the United States. And even we do not forget that in this war the Monroe Doctrine is shielded by the British navy. Take that navy away and give Germany the victory, and the Monroe Doctrine is as though it were written in water. Nor do we forget that much as we may differ in many things, the civilization that we are spending our blood and treasure to preserve in the world is the civilization that you wish to preserve. Let us get below the mail-bag issue to the underlying truth that possesses us in common—the truth that this world cannot live by the doctrine of might is right, and that in the struggle against that doctrine it is we who have our faces to the light and our enemy that would lead us back into darkness.

OIL LEASE FIGHT CONTINUES

Oklahoma Senators on Opposite Sides in Leasing Measure.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—After a two-hour wrangle over the proposal to extend the oil land leases on the Osage lands in Oklahoma, which expire March 16, the Senate recessed today until Monday, when the fight will be taken up anew.

The two Oklahoma Senators are opposed to the question. Senator Gore objects to extending the leases on the basis of Secretary Lane's report that it would give oil operators privileges worth $5,000,000, without competition or adequate return to the Government. Today's debate was punctuated with charges of corruption, in which the Indians are said to have been mulcted.

Morehead for Vice President.

LINCOLN, Neb., March 11.—Petitions requesting that the name of Gov. John H. Morehead of Nebraska go before the Democratic voters at the coming presidential primary as a candidate for the Democratic nomination of Vice President were filed here today with the Secretary of State. It is announced that petitions will be filed in other states.

ORANGE CAKE

1 cupful sugar	1¼ teaspoonfuls baking powder
3 egg-yolks	2 egg-whites
Juice of 1 orange	Few grains of salt
1 cupful bread-flour

Beat the egg-yolks till creamy, add the sugar, and blend thoroughly. Measure the orange juice and add water, if necessary, to make a half-cupful of liquid. Mix the baking powder with the flour, and add alternately to first mixture with the orange juice. Fold in the egg-whites beaten stiff. Bake in layers about five minutes in a hot oven; reduce the heat and cook more slowly till the cake is done—about fifteen minutes in all. Put together and ice with orange frosting, or use a jelly or whipped-cream filling, and sprinkle powdered sugar over the top. This cake will keep moist for several days.

Why Unionists Are Suspicious of the Defense Agitation

workingman having to cringe before some whiffet of an officer, because he m dirt while the officer is a 'gentleman.' It means the denial of all the principles he is supposed to be defending; the denial of democracy, the denial of decent manhood, the denial of the home. How can a man defend democracy by building up a machine in which he has not the slightest say; not even the right to speak in protest? How can he defend the home by deserting his own wife and children to fall for the dissipation and disintegration that goes with a tropical expedition, or a brutal occupation?

"Atrocities? Sure, what else can you expect from army life? You and I would be beasts if we were sent away to the Philippines, knowing every day for years that we'd have to kill or get killed. Away from all decent environment and the civilizing influence of those we love we'd probably do just as the others do."

The big miner's face became tense. "I was sinking a shaft in Indiana," he said, "when my partner, one of the finest chaps I ever worked with, told me his Philippine story. He had a wife and two children here—and was stuck for years in that climate—nothing but soldiers and Orientals to talk to. 'I stood it for a while,' he told me, 'and then I did like all the others were doing. I bought a girl. She was 13 years old. I bought her from her parents. I lived with her two years. She had two children. Nobody thought anything of it out there; but, say, do you know I got to thinking a lot of her. Then I was mustered out and it dawned on me all at once that I was coming back to life, and to my own wife and family. I just came away—that was all there was to do—but I can't bury it.'

"What could I say?" the labor leader asked. "I could see that army life had made him stoop to things he was so ashamed of that he couldn't face himself. It preyed on his mind all the time. Then one day he showed me a letter from the Philippines. The little savage mother had been having a terrible time. Two days later he shot himself. That's the story of what army life does to the best of them. What can you expect it to do to the worst?"

Unionists Would Defend Country.

"All that is loyal in the American workingman," he added, "makes him want to defend his country. But all that is decent in him makes him shrink from military life. Must the two ideas be associated? Why not have a democratic army?"

"Why not?" the interviewer repeated.

"There is a great reason why not," said the labor man. "No one who is crying for an army wants any such thing. They can all prove to you that it is impossible, just as the British capitalists proved that the proposition of the Welsh miners was impossible. I can't say that it will happen; but it wouldn't surprise men much if the American workers should call the militaristic bluff in some such way as the Welsh miners did.

"Just how?" I asked. A democratic army was a hazy jumble of words to me.

"By volunteering en masse," he said, "on one condition—on the condition that the army could not be used to tyrannize over themselves, either as individuals or as a working class. Oh, I admit that it is impossible for the American militarist to see it; but it may be impossible for the workers to see anything else. Then, of the two impossibilities—well, we could find out shortly whether the army was really wanted for defense or whether the word 'defense' was being used as a pretext in order to get the army established."

"But just how would a democratic army function? How could the working class soldiers be guaranteed against the usual run of militarism?"

Objects to Privates Cringing to Officers.

"It's very simple," said Lord, "or very impossible—just whichever way you happen to see it. But tell me first: Is a soldier a man? Is he entitled to a decent living? Is he a citizen? Should he be allowed to think and speak and vote? Is there anything in the ordinary schedule of a workingman's life which is too good for him in case he agrees to defend his country?" The obvious answer being given, the miner proceeded.

"Well, then, if a soldier is a man, there is no reason why he should have to cringe before an officer. And if he is a citizen, there is no reason why he should be tried by an officer. And there is no reason why he should take orders from an officer, to do anything that violates either his conscience or his self-respect, unless the order is sanctioned by public necessity. And when he disobeys an order he should be given the chance that a workingman is supposed to get if he breaks the law. Nothing short of a trial by his peers, not by his superiors, would be demanded in a democratic army.

"Traditionally the soldier is not allowed to think. 'Their's not to reason why' sums up his position; a negation not only of democracy, but of manhood itself. In a democratic army the soldier would not fight, perhaps, unless he had something to fight for; but there would be nothing in that to jeopardize the national defense, and no one will fight quicker to preserve democracy than the workingman.

"A democratic army would proudly elect and recall its officers. That would be impossible in an army intended to carry out schemes of conquest and expansion, but not at all impossible in an army intended only for defense. We have much to defend in America, much that is very dear to the workingman's heart. If that is threatened there is no sacrifice he will not make. But just now he is wondering how he can defend it by selling himself body and soul to a machine over which he has not the slightest control. Can we defend ourselves against militarism by establishing militarism? Can we defend ourselves against tyranny by becoming slaves?

"Incidentally, a democratic army would demand decent pay, so long as the country in general was not impoverished. In a crisis it would starve for an ideal just as so many millions of American workingmen have starved through long-drawn-out strikes. But it would not do the country's dirty work for 10 cents a day, while the country was rolling in wealth as a result of its service. And it would not black the shoes of the officers except at union rates for bootblacks.

"But, above everything else, it would not shoot down other members of its class for demanding better conditions. That is why a democratic army is impossible. An army—the best that the propagandists of preparedness can say for it—must be autocratic. That means it must be for some other purpose than mere defense. It must be the sort of institution which workingmen have come to suspect and dread. The workers are so instinctively opposed to that kind of an army that you might take them for a lot of pacifists. Many of their arguments are unreasonable, but their opposition is well founded. The militia has been turned against strikers so often that the best of patriots have become suspicious. They are wavering between patriotism and dismay. But deep down in their hearts they always want to be right, do right.

"Looking at it from the standpoint of

Astonishing Power of Iron to Give Strength to Broken Down Nervous People

Physician Says Ordinary Nuxated Iron Will Increase Strength of Delicate Folk 200 Per Cent in Two Weeks' Time in Many Instances.

In a recent discourse Dr. E. Sauer, Specialist, of New York City, said: "If you were to make an actual blood test on all people who are ill you would probably be greatly astonished at the exceedingly large number who lack iron and who are ill for no other reason than the lack of iron. The moment iron is supplied all their multitude of dangerous symptoms disappear. Without iron the blood at once loses the power to change food into living tissue, and therefore nothing you eat does you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. Your food merely passes through your system like corn through a mill with the rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind. As a result of this continuous blood and nerve starvation, people become generally weakened, nervous and all run down, and frequently develop all sorts of conditions. One is too thin; another is burdened with unhealthy fat; some are so weak they can hardly walk; some think they have dyspepsia, kidney or liver trouble; some can't sleep at night; others are sleepy and tired all day; some fussy and irritable; some skinny and bloodless, but all lack physical power and endurance. In such cases it is worse than foolishness to take stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs, which only whip up your fagging vital powers for the moment, maybe at the expense of your life later on. No matter what any one tells you, if you are not strong and well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the time double and even triple their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of their symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form, and this after they had, in some cases, been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. You can talk as you please about all the wonders wrought by new remedies, but when you come down to hard facts there is nothing like good old iron to put color in your cheeks and good, sound, healthy flesh on your bones. It is also a great nerve and stomach strengthener, and the best blood builder in the world. The only trouble was that the old forms of inorganic iron, like tincture of iron, iron acetate, etc., often ruined people's teeth, upset their stomachs and were not assimilated, and for these reasons they frequently did more harm than good. But with the discovery of the newer forms of organic iron all this has been overcome. Nuxated Iron, for example, is pleasant to take, does not injure the teeth and is almost immediately beneficial.

NOTE—The manufacturers of Nuxated Iron have such unbounded confidence in its potency that they authorize the announcement that they will forfeit $100.00 to any Charitable Institution if they cannot take any man or woman under sixty who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. Also they will refund your money in any case in which Nuxated Iron does not at least double your strength in ten days' time. It is dispensed in this city by Judge & Dolph Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Johnson-Enderle-Pauley Drug Co. and all other druggists. —ADV.

The above photograph shows one of our Style A Player-Pianos that stood within one hundred and fifty feet of the spot where three thousand pounds of dynamite exploded in the recent catastrophe at Maplewood, Mo.

The only damage done to this instrument was the marring of the case by falling glass, plaster and lath. The sounding board and the interior of instrument is in good condition, which is the strongest evidence of the sturdy construction of Story & Clark Pianos.

the working class, would there be any way of guaranteeing democracy in an army?"

"From any other standpoint it would be clearly impossible," he answered. "Democracy could not be guaranteed by a resolution of Congress. It might be inaugurated that way, but the armed rank and file would have to be their own guarantee. They would have to keep their guns and equipment"—

"And have the country at the mercy of a great military organization?"

"Not a professional military organization at all," he explained, "but an armed working class. Can you imagine a country being overrun by its people? Don't you know that a fundamental principle of the American Constitution was that the right to bear arms should not be abridged. It has been abridged, however. The workers have been disarmed and the arms have been placed in the hands of a military organization out of touch with the workers; or in the hands of private detectives and thugs hired by the capitalists, as in Colorado. Any such military organization is the negation of democracy. A people armed and free to defend itself, is a different thing. But it is the sort of 'preparedness' which those who are talking grandly about patriotism and defense would never stand for.

"I would not commit the organized workers of the country to any particular policy. No man can do that. Personally, I am opposed to militarism, the only militarism I have seen and can judge. Also, I cannot see any danger of European Powers invading America, but with our immense coast line an adequate coast defense seems thoroughly reasonable.

"If the country were actually invaded, no one would sacrifice more, and more quickly, than the organized American workers. But they do not want militarism. They want democracy and the Constitutional Government. They are watching the situation in Europe and hoping that it is the beginning of the end—the end of King and Kaiser, Prussianism and every other kind of professional militarism. They are reading and thinking and waiting. I think they will refuse to be swung off their balance by the hysterical appeals of munition makers, partisans and professional militarists, even at the risk of being misunderstood."

How the French Seized Kaiser's Wonder Island

the French soldiers, they had perched their little ones on the shoulders of the marble statues which lined the main avenue to the palace building. Here and there the jolly crowd hurled witty remarks at these mothers, saying, "Don't let the Kaiser see you do that!"

The good-natured crowd marched as far as the entrance hall of the palace proper, but no further. About a dozen or so of the French soldiers established a cordon at the foot of the long staircase while about 50 or so slowly climbed up the stairs.

Upon reaching the top of the stairs the French soldiers were observed fixing bayonets. Like a flash this fact became known to the inquisitive crowds, who until this moment had been conducting "explorations" and "invasions" of their own. For some time whispered conversation along the avenue prophesied diverse results. We all suddenly realized that the French had not landed on our island so secretly just for the purpose of arousing our curiosity.

By this time other Corfeans had also come to the gardens, until the Achilleion grounds resembled a public on a Sunday afternoon. This tension continued about two hours. Then we saw a French soldier descend the stairs as though he was a herald of an imperial ceremonial. When he reached the foot of the stairs he motioned to those who were guarding the main entrance hall, who gathered around him. After five minutes' conference the officer again disappeared above the stairs. Half an hour more of waiting, then we were rewarded with the most thrilling sight any Corfean could expect to observe.

Between two rows of French soldiers there descended the imperial stairs of the Kaiser a group of men and women.

On seeings this procession descending the stairs the crowd pressed in, but soon the ever-smiling and polite French officer motioned to the crowd to make room for his prisoners. Several men and women in the procession were at once recognized by many in the crowd, and they greeted them with uncomplimentary salutations. I was near enough to the procession to count the men and women in it accurately. There were 45 women and 62 men in that group of German residents of the imperial palace. Especially two of the women excited considerable unfriendly feeling.

These two women were known in the city of Corfu and in the past had spent money lavishly and their specialties had been the cultivation of the few civil and military officials of our city. The Parisian officer had arranged the ceremonial procession of his prisoners in a truly Parisian fashion, 'mesdames first.' Then came the men. But what an assortment! In this group there were men of all stations. From the elaborately dressed and proud possessors of up-turned mustaches to the smooth-faced German seaman type—they were all in this collection.

But, excited as the feelings o fthe Corfeans had been until then, nevertheless they had sof ar abstained from expressing them in violent gestures or words. But when the populace recognized in the midst of those German prisoners, a Greek who had recently returned from America in company with a young German who had passed himself off as an American and had traveled on board a Greek steamer, then the temper of the Corfean population forgot its bounds nd in an instant there was a sudden dash, accompanied with jeers and insulting epithets, directed to the Greek, who had become involved in the German spy system. Then for the first time the Corfean populace gave vent to their pronounced sympathies for the allies, and from that time on the streets became filled with enthusiastic crowds shouting their opinion of the German spies amongst them at the top of their voices.

All day long the city was the scene of many or more less violent demonstrations. The few German sympathizers kept indoors, while here and there, even King Constantine received his share of the abuse heaped upon the German spies.

Late in the afternoon the writer returned to the Achilleion to inspect it.

The interior of the Achilleion is magnificent without doubt, but its beauty is not peaceful and harmonious; it is awe inspiring, sumptuous and, above all, dazzling.

I went through many corridors lined with statues of the celebrities on ancient Hellas and Rome. Finally we came to a door above which there was a round window, through which pierced the sunlight. I kenw this door must open outside. The French officer knocked gently and in the next moment it opened to a courtyard. At this door, also, stood two French soldiers.

In the center of the courtyard was a huge fountain, anything the like which I have never seen in all my travels. The officers in charge told me that it was 70 feet across.

Everything about the castle was in proportionate scale and the grounds and their furnishings and equipment were awe-inspiring in their magnificence and cold beauty. But it all had a made-to-order aspect that was repellant rather than attractive. One cannot wonder after looking over Achilleion and its surroundings that this great $15,000,000 estate never possessed a genuine appeal for the Kaiser; that he rarely visited it and that he was always glad to get away.

It is truly royal in its aspects, but even royalty on vacation and out to play would soon grow weary of it.

Only a Cold—Then a Cough—Then ?

First you feel a little chilly—then you can't get warm. Followed by smarting eyes and sneezes. Then comes the cough. Then what? That depends upon your system's condition. If you are strong, a few days unpleasantness. If you are weak, it may go on longer, may result seriously. The weakness gains, and a host of disease germs find lodgment. The next you know, you are really sick. Colds are dangerous when they cannot be thrown off; the strong man throws them off easily.

The Moral Is to Keep Yourself Well

A neglected cold leaves an after effect of a congested membrane. It may be in the nose, the throat, or the lungs. Sometimes it is in the stomach and intestines. Perhaps you have grown used to it, and fail to notice any soreness. But it's there. A fresh cold aggravates it. Soon you have chronic catarrh. In time, that harbors a cold and forms a point of infection. It spreads until your whole body suffers from systemic catarrh. Then you are really in danger. Don't wait for that.

℞ For Coughs and Colds—Take Peruna

It will soothe and heal the mucous membrane, no matter where it is affected. It will help clear out your system. It will build up your strength. It will counteract the poisons the congested membrane is leaving in your blood.

But don't wait until you are sick. While wonderful cures of chronic colds and catarrh by Peruna are daily reported, and in the last forty years have been so numerous as to make Peruna the nation's Remedy, it is better to stay well. Have Peruna at hand, use it freely at the first symptoms, and you will keep your body so well fortified that you will be free of colds, free of catarrhal symptoms, and enjoy your life to the full.

That's the common sense way in which thousands of people preserve their health. It's the kind of preparedness we all agree upon. It's true life insurance, that pays the benefits while you can enjoy them.

Ask the thousands who use Peruna. It could not have gained the place it occupies in the American household if it did not have unusual merit. Forget your prejudices and let Peruna make good for you, as it has for so many.

You may obtain Peruna in tablet form for convenience. Carry a box with you!

U. S. in '64 Ordered Pursuit Into Canada

Band Had Raided Vermont Town

By STERLING E. EDMUNDS,
Lecturer on International Law, St. Louis University Law School.

MEXICO is not the only neighboring State into which United States troops have been sent to capture or destroy lawless bands, without the consent of such State.

In October, 1864, the town of St. Albans, Vermont, was raided and pillaged by a band of men proceeding from Canada, who claimed to act as soldiers of the Confederate States. Upon learning of the affair, Gen. Dix, in charge of the Department of the East, issued the following General Order No. 97:

"Information having been received at these headquarters that the rebel marauders who were guilty of murder and robbery at St. Albans have been discharged from arrest, and that other enterprises of like character are actually in preparation in Canada, the comanding general deems it due to the people of the frontier towns to adopt the most prompt and efficient measures for the security of their lives and property.

"All military commanders on the frontiers are therefore instructed in case further acts of depredation and murder are attempted, whether by marauders or persons acting under commissions from the rebel authorities at Richmond, to shoot down the perperators, if possible, while in the commission of their crimes; or, if it be necessary, with a view to their capture, to cross the boundary between the United States and Canada, said commanders are hereby directed to pursue them wherever they may take refuge, and if captured they are under no circumstances to be surrendered, but are to be sent to these headquarters for trial and punishment by martial law.

"The Major-General comanding the department will not hesitate to exercise to the fullest extent the authority he possesses, under the rules of law recognized by all civilized states, in regard to persons organizing hostile expeditions within neutral territory and fleeing to it for an asylum after comitting acts of depredation within our own, such an exercise of authority having become indispensible to protect our cities and towns from incendiarism and our people from robbery and murder.

"It is earnestly hoped that inhabitants of our frontier districts will abstain from all acts of retaliation on account of the outrages committed by rebel marauders, and that the proper measures of redress will be left to the action of the public authorities."

This order was later modified by the President so as to permit the crossing of the Canadian border only after communication with headquarters in the particular case.

In the event United States troops should capture Villa alive, a nice question would arise as to what should be done with him. In the Canadian case, officers of United States troops were instructed not to surrender prisoners taken on Canadian soil, but to bring them to the United States for trial. Yet it is a most unusual proceeding for one state to seize an offender within the territory of another and forcibly bring him within its own jurisdiction for punishment.

Villa's offense, so far as the United States is concerned, is plain murder committed within the United States, and there is no question of the right of United States courts to try him if they can get jurisdiction over his person. The fact that he was forcibly brought from another jurisdiction would make no difference.

But there is the probability that Carranza would demand the surrender of the bandit chief for trial in Mexico upon one or more of the numerous charges which might be brought against him there. The Mexican authorities might rightfully try Villa for treason against the state, as well as for murder in innumerable instances, including the cases in which Americans were killed.

All of these are capital crimes, so that even if Villa should escape death in battle with his pursuers he would have little chance of escaping it within a short time after capture and trial.

If Carranza troops should capture Villa the United tates would undoubtedly demand his surrender and extradition, though in cases where a fugitive is sought by his native state on a criminal charge as well as by a foreign state, it is usual before extradition that justice be satisfied first within the state where capture occurred. In this event there would be little prospect of Villa's trial within the United States.

NEW INGREDIENT FOR STEEL

Germans Said to Have Substitute for Ferro-Manganese.

AMSTERDAM, March 11.—The problem of finding a substitute for ferro-manganese for the production of steel in Germany has been solved, according to a semi-official statement received here from Berlin. This substitute, the nature of which is not divulged, can be produced in large quantities from internal raw materials, it is said.

Factories for the production of the new substance are already working and more are being constructed. It is asserted that this process will make Germany independent of imports in this line.

Zeppelin Story Finds Sister for Him.

LONDON, March 11.—The wide publicity given to the finding of the wrecked Zeppelin L-19, recently by William Martin, skipper of the Grimsby steam trawler, "King Stephen," has had a romantic sequel. Through the publication of the story of his experiences and his photograph, Martin discovered his only blood relative, a sister, living in Birmingham, whom he had not seen or heard of for 19 years. She wrote to him after reading the account, and he replied, with the restult that brother and sister were reunited.

Indigestion Frequently Is Caused by Constipation

Neglect of Important Function May Seriously Impair the Health.

There are many people who believe they suffer from indigestion when their discomfort really is due to a constipated condition.

Bloat with its attendant mental depression, sick headache, the belching of sour stomach gases, etc., are frequently due to inaction of the bowels. Relieve the congestion and the trouble usually disappears. The use of cathartics and purgatives should be avoided, however; these shock the system unnecessarily and at best, their effect is but temporary. A mild laxative is far preferable.

The compound of simple laxative herbs known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and sold in drug stores for 50 cents a bottle, is highly recommended. Mr Benj. Bassin, 360 Madison street, Gary, Ind., thinks Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin a wonderful medicine; for four years he had a severe case of indigestion and constipation before trying Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which he is glad to recommend to all who suffer with stomach and bowel trouble.

BENJ. BASSIN

A bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin should be in every home for use when occasion arises. A trial bottle, free of charge, can be obtained by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 454 Washington street, Monticello, Ill.

The Doctor's Advice
By Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply in any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Ellwood Sts., Dayton, O., enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials of fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

"Troubled" writes: "My whole system seems to be in disorder, the mucous membranes seem feverish and diseased. My throat is sore. Please answer."

Answer: You may be the victim of a troublesome disease. Use Elixir Chin-cea compound to drive the humor and disease out of your blood. In cases like yours this has been found to give almost instant help and permanent relief. Obtain this from the druggist in eight-ounce sealed bottle with full directions.

"Worried" writes: "I am only 30, and up until a few months ago never knew what it was to feel tired or worn out. Now the feeling of fatigue never leaves me. I've 'lost my backbone,' have a shortness of breath and feel almost exhausted and wholly without ambition. Feel grouchy and have pains in the back of my head and spine. What will liven me up and make me strong?"

Answer: You need a good tonic to build up your blood and soothe and strengthen your nerves; something to restore your energy and overcome the weariness and make you a man again. Three grain cadomene tablets are most effective and highly recommended. Start using them now, and in a sort time you should feel fine and better than you ever did.

"Mary G." asks: "How may I increase my weight? I am very bony and angular looking. I eat plenty, but it does not seem to nourish my system."

Answer: The most satisfactory and healthful treatment, to increase your weight, you will find in the use of three grain hypo-nuclane tablets.

"Worried" writes: "I have constant headache and backache, my feet swell and I am tired all the time. My eyes look puffed and appear yellow. My blood seems to be turning to water."

Answer: You have a bad case of kidney trouble and you should be very careful. Don't work too hard and avoid taking cold. If you will begin at once taking balmwort tablets, you will get almost immediate relief and continued treatment should greatly relieve you.

"Mrs. W. J. T." writes: "You helped a cousin of mine when she had impure blood. I think now my blood is impure and I want a good blood medicine. I am very much constipated."

Answer: If your blood is impure you would know from some of these symptoms; constipation, headache, coated tongue, sallow complexion, tired feeling and possibly indigestion and some fever. Take three grain sulphcrb tablets (not sulphur). They are splendid to clean the system and put the blood right.—ADVERTISEMENT.

"Father" asks: "I suffer constantly with rheumatism. Sometimes I can hardly walk the pains are so severe and muscles and joints so stiff."

Answer: There is no better treatment for rheumatism than the following prescription. I have used it with most satisfactory results in my practice for years. Every rheumatic sufferer should use it for quick and permanent relief: 2 drams of iodide of potassium, 4 drams sodium salicylate, ½ oz. wine of colchicum, 1 oz. comp. essence cardiol, 1 oz. comp. fluid balmwort and 5 ozs. of syrup sarsaparilla comp. Mix and take a teaspoonful at meal times and again before going to bed.

"Vain" asks: "How may I cure my scalp of a very disagreeable itching and scaly condition and at the time not endanger the growth of my hair?"

Answer: I would suggest the immediate use of plain yellow minyol to remove dandruff and make the scalp alive and healthy. Three or four treatments should correct your scalp and beautify your hair.

"Helen" writes: "I have a cold and cough constantly. My throat and chest are sore, and I am getting discouraged."

Answer: Secure from your druggist 2½ oz. concentrated essence of mentho-laxene and mix with one pint of simple sugar syrup. You will find this syrup very beneficial in opening up the air passages and healing the diseased inflamed membranes. It breaks up your cold and cough and relieves the system of the cold inflammation.

"Too Fat" writes: "Since I have gotten so stout, I don't feel well and I tire easily. I want to reduce safely but surely."

Answer: Five grain arbolene tablets are highly endorsed as safe and sure flesh reducers. I have recommended them in many cases of obesity and they have given perfect satisfaction.

DIRECTOR OF VILLA CHASE CAPTURED AGUINALDO IN PHILIPPINES 15 YEARS AGO

Gen. Frederick Funston, in Book, Recounts How a Band of Natives and a Few White Men Surprised Chief of Insurrectos.

FIFTEEN years ago this month, Gen. Fred Funston, then a Brigadier-General of volunteers, led the expedition which captured Emilio Aguinaldo, chief of the Philippine insurrectos, and ended the insurrection. The story of this feat is told in Gen. Funston's book, "Memories of Two Wars," published by Scribner & Co.

Guerilla warfare in Luzon and other islands of the Philippine group had then been going on for 18 months, and the United States troops, which, with native auxilaries, numbered 70,000, had found great difficulty in handling the insurrectos. Aguinaldo, whose hiding place was not known to the Americans, was directing the guerilla bands, and it was evident that until he should be killed or captured the insurrection would not end.

Aguinaldo Letters Found.

Feb. 8, 1901, Gen. Funston, at the headquarters in San Isidro, in Central Luzon, received a telegram from Lieut. J. D. Taylor, Twenty-fourth Infantry, stationed about 60 miles northeast, which stated that a small band of insurgent soldiers had surrendered, and that one of them, Cecilio Segismundo, carried a packet of letters which he said were written by Aguinaldo to his subordinate chiefs in Central and Southern Luzon.

By Funston's order the captured leader and the correspondence carried by him were started for San Isodro, arriving two days later. It developed that Segismundo's surrender was the result of some fine diplomatic work on the part of Lieut. Taylor and a loyal native official. Segismundo told Funston that Aguinaldo, with several staff officers and an escort of 50 well-armed men, was at Palanan, a mountain town 120 miles northeast of San Isidro.

The correspondence, most of which was in cipher, was deciphered by a Spaniard named Segovia, Capt. Smith and Gen. Funston, and it bore out Segismundo's statements to such an extent that the officers became satisfied that he was telling the truth. Segismundo, when questioned by Funston, said he did not believe an American force could capture Aguinaldo, because of the system of outposts which the chieftain maintained. A company of American troops had, in fact, entered Palanan, but Aguinaldo had known in advance of its approach, and had retired to the mountains.

Funston's Plan Adopted.

Funston was convinced that Segismundo was right, as to the impossibility of catching Aguinaldo by going after him openly. Therefore, he relates, he devised the plan of sending a native force, composed mostly of the loyal Macabebe scouts, in the guise of insurrectos, and accompanied by Funston and four other white officers, who should play the role of prisoners. This plan was approved by the department commander, Gen. Wheaton, after a conference in Manila. The party, which started from Manila March 6, included 81 Macabebes, dressed and armed as insurrectos, and speaking the Tagalo dialet, the five American officers, dressed as privates, Segovia and Segismundo, and three loyal Tagalos.

"All realized the hazardous nature of the undertaking," Funston writes, "and without any agreement having been entered into on the subject, it was thoroughly understood that we would never be taken alive. Loyalty to our Macabebe comrades, who could not expect quarter, marked but one course for men who made even a pretense at being soldiers." Funston told his wife of the plan of the expedition, and he writes that "the poor woman had to keep her counsel" during the three weeks of his absence from Manila.

The expedition went north in the gunboat Vicksburg to a point as near the destination as was deemed prudent, and then was landed in native boats. Letters were written to Aguinaldo, to which the signature of one of his subordinates was forged, telling him of the approach of the "insurrectos," with their five American "prisoners." The party was hilariously received in the town of Casiguran, and the march from that town was begun March 17.

Orders From "Dictator's" Follower.

Within 10 miles of the destination, the expedition received a letter from Simon Villa, Aguinaldo's chief of staff, ordering that the "prisoners" be not taken into Palanan, lest they should learn that the "dictator" was there, but should be left under guard at a place called Dinundungan, which was two miles ahead. A note was sent to Villa in reply, stating that food was needed, and in return a quantity of cracked corn arrived.

This incident, Funston says, was the basis of the charge afterward made in the United States, that he and his men, while starving, had begged Aguinaldo for food, and had then violated his hospitality by capturing him. "We simply fooled him into supplying us," Funston writes, "as he thought he was rationing his own troops."

The instruction as to leaving the "prisoners" behind was violated, and the expedition, after narrowly escaping a clash with a band of real insurrectos, got into Palanan. Segovia and Hilario Tal Placido, a loyal Tagalo, led the Macabebes to Aguinaldo's house, where the Dictator's escort lined up to meet them. While both sides were standing at "order arms," Gregorio Cadhit, another of the loyal Filipinos, called to them, "Now is the time, Macabebes. Give it to them." The "Macs" fired, killing two of Aguinaldo's escort, and the Americans, who had been left on the other side of a nearby river, paddled across and ran up as Hilario grasped Aguinaldo, telling him, "You are a prisoner of the Americans."

A few minutes later, Funston was explaining matters to the captured chief, whom, he says, he found to be "far and away the best Filipino I ever was brought in contact with." Soon after his return to Manila, Funston was notified of his apopintment as a Brigadier-General in the regular army, and all who took part in the expedition were rewarded, the American officers with regular army comissions, and the natives with gifts of money.

Regarding the killing of the two members of Aguinaldo's escort, Gen. Funston writes: "If we had sent our cards to them, told them who we were, and invited them to retire, as some ladylike persons in the United States afterward insisted that we should have done, it would have merely exposed our own men to a volley from them. The lives of these two men were of small moment, counted against those that would have been lost had the insurrection continued. Few men have died to better purpose."

PLAN TO INCREASE STATE CROP VALUE $1,000,000,000

Commercial Clubs of Missouri to Start Campaign of Education Among Farmers.

The Federation of Missouri Commercial Clubs, having recently discovered from census reports that the State ranks low in the production of farm crops, fruit, etc., that it has about the most undesirable farm buildings and farm implements of any State in the Union and the most inefficient public school system of any State north of latitude 36 degrees and 30 minutes, has planned a campaign for more efficient agricultural, fruit-growing and educational methods, in the hope of increasing the value of the farm crops by more than $1,000,000,000 a year and making life on the farm more attractive.

The hundreds of commercial clubs throughout the State have been federated and will jointly finance the campaign of education. Lectures, motion pictures and other means of disseminating information will be used to reach and arouse the farmer.

Corn Production Is Low.

A bulletin just issued by the association shows these unpleasant facts:

That of the 12 states north of latitude 36 degrees and 30 minutes, the southern boundary of Missouri, only two of those having 1,000,000 acres in corn, have a lower average production per acre than Missouri.

In the production of wheat, of the 12 states in the same latitude, only two have a lower average production per acre.

That Missouri takes fortieth rank as a fruit producing State, although it has a million more fruit trees than any other state in the Union. The state ranking second in the number of trees produces twice as much fruit as Missouri.

In average acre production of all farm crops Missouri ranks 41st.

In the average value of farm buildings Missouri ranks 27th, and there are only six states in which the average value of farm buildings per farm is less than in Missouri.

In implements and farm machinery Missouri ranks 34th, and there is no state that has machinery and implements of less value per farm than Missouri.

Has Poorest Rural Schools.

Of all the states north of latitude 36 degrees and 30 minutes, Missouri has the poorest rural schools, judged by ten tests of efficiency, according to a report of the Russell Sage Foundation.

In illiteracy, Missouri has the highest percentage of native whites of native parentage of any state north of its southern boundary, who can neither read nor write.

As to good roads, Missouri is far behind the adjoining and neighboring States of Arkansas, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Illinois, Oklahoma and Wisconsin.

The Federation, according to a bulletin just issued by its president, William H. Bloomer of St. Louis, is going to endeavor to establish the dairy industry and co-operative creameries throughout the State.

It will also try to get the counties to employ United States Government farm agents to advise the farmers how to grow better and bigger crops. Missouri has but 16 farm advisers in the 114 counties.

Effort for Better Schools.

The Federation is also going to try to get better schools for the rural communities, and hopes to be able to work out a plan for the consolidation of districts so that schools of higher grades may be maintained. It will also aid in the movement for better roads.

Nearly every town in the State now has its commercial club. The Federation will work through these organizations, which are familiar with conditions in the different sections.

The State University will also cooperate with the Federation in supplying information and picture slides.

Better farm methods, which will increase farm production, will make Missouri one of the richest States in the Union, the Federation asserts, and will also create better conditions on the farm, which will cause boys and girls to be satisfied to remain in the country instead of flocking to the cities.

EXPERT SAYS PANAMA CANAL IS SAFE FROM EARTHQUAKES

U. S. Geologist Adds That the Big Slides Will Soon Be Prevented.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—The Panama Canal will not be swallowed up by an earthquake in the future and the troublesome slides now being encountered will eventually be prevented, in the opinion of Donald F. McDonald, former canal geologist, and now connected with the Federal Bureau of Mines.

While through seismic disturbances the earth's crust on the whole Isthmus is rising at the rate of three feet every hundred years, this will only mean a little advanced expense in dredging the big waterway, Mr. McDonald says. The cause of the rising, he declares, is the sinking of the ocean bottom outside the Isthmian shore waters.

Discussing the slides, Mr. McDonald states that in many cases the immediate cause was the oversteepness and height of the slopes, the blasting and other work attributable only to man.

Last year the Post-Dispatch printed [illegible] Wanted to Purchase Wants, 1349 more than the FOUR other St. Louis newspapers COMBINED.

The "Barefoot" Tire— —and Why.

WHEN you take your Shoes off tonight do this:
—Bear your weight on your right Foot and, without lifting it off the floor, press it forward and backward firmly.

Then observe that only the bony and muscular Structure of your Foot moves forward and backward, while its Sole stays fixed on the floor.

That demonstrates the rolling motion of flesh and muscle, the elastic Cushion quality which reduces friction in walking, and prevents slipping (backward, forward, or sideways).

It supplies that CLING quality, which gives Traction without Friction.

It protects the Bones and Sinews of the Foot against the Wear and Tear of action, as a lubricant protects Metal moving parts, while providing the wonderful "Barefoot" hold on slippery surfaces.

That ROLLING MOTION, then, is the ideal aimed at in this Clingy, Springy, and Stretchy black "Barefoot" Rubber of 1916 Goodrich Tires.

CONSIDER now the means by which many Tires have been given maximum Traction,—i.e., by means of a "sandpapery" texture in the Rubber of their Anti-Skid Treads.

Every time the Brakes are put on, to make such Tires grip the road, the relatively hard, unyielding, and comparatively brittle, texture of the Rubber in their Treads causes these Treads to grind away on the pavement, to WEAR OUT fast at the point of contact.

The sudden efficiency of their grinding-Traction also tugs so sharply on the Rubber Adhesive between the layers of Fabric in Tire as to separate these layers.

There is little "give" to them—just as there is little "slide" to them.

So, they gain Traction at the expense of Mileage.

Naturally such Tires require a great BULK of such Rubber in order to deliver reasonable Mileage before worn out.

And, therein they differ radically from GOODRICH "Barefoot" Tires.

Because,—the Safety-Tread on Goodrich Tires is made of "Barefoot-Rubber," a new, and exclusive compound which discards all unnecessary whitish "frictional" ingredients that are heaviest and inert, as proved by its lighter weight.

HERE is how it acts in Automobiling,—
—When the weight of the Car bears on this clinging "Barefoot-Rubber" Tread, and the power is applied to go ahead or reverse, the wonderful stretch in the "Barefoot" Rubber Sole (or Tread) of the Goodrich Tire acts as a sort of Lubricant between the Fabric Structure of the Tire and the Road.

Then, the Barefoot-Rubber "Toes," of the Goodrich Safety-Tread Tire, CLING to the pavement (instead of grinding against it), in such manner as your Bare Foot would cling to a slippery surface—without Grind, and so, with the minimum of Frictional Heat or Wear for maximum Traction.

Goodrich "Barefoot-Rubber" is now made into Goodrich FABRIC Tires,—Goodrich Silvertown Cord Tires,—Goodrich Inner Tubes,—Goodrich Truck Tires,—Goodrich Motor Cycle, and Bicycle, Tires, as well as into Goodrich Rubber Boots, Over-Shoes, Soles and Heels.

Get a Sliver of it from your nearest Goodrich Branch, or Dealer. Stretch it thousands of times, but break it you can't.

That's the Stuff that GOODRICH Black-Tread Tires are made of.

Lime Medication in Tuberculosis

In the N. Y. Medical Record of December 5, 1914, Dr. John North of Toledo says: "I have come to the conclusion that one of the most prominent causes (of tuberculosis) is 'lime starvation.' * In all cases of incipient tuberculosis there is a deficiency of calcium. Many do not eat food containing enough lime. * In such cases we must resort to lime medication."

Eckman's Alterative should be given a fair trial in such cases, because one of its chief ingredients is calcium (lime), in such combination with other remedial agents as to be easily assimilated by the average person.

Where its use is combined with proper diet, fresh air and hygienic living conditions, we believe it will prove beneficial in any case of tuberculosis.

It contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs, so is safe to try. From your druggist or direct.

WAR INCREASES CRIME AMONG IDLE GERMAN CHILDREN

Schools Closed and Fathers' Discipline Missing—They Have Plenty of Money.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Jan. 10.—Juvenile crime and misdemeanor have increased three and four fold in nearly all cities of Germany since the beginning of the war, according to the societies which specialize in the care of children.

The absence of fathers at the front, the frequent inability of mothers to oversee their children because they have to work to support the family, and the increased amount of spending money which boys and girls have due to employment ordinarily not open to them, are given as the chief causes.

The facts have come as a surprise to juvenile experts. They had always held that the mother was the chief disciplinary factor in the household. They now are constrained to change their opinions and to feel that it has been the father, after all, who has made the children toe the line.

Boys Buy Weapons.

The war, with its accounts of battles and shooting, has inspired countless boys with the desire to have weapons of their own, and in many instances they have been able to obtain them. Little groups or "gangs" have formed in most of the great cities of Germany, have made unoccupied cellars their headquarters, and from mock battles have graduated into actual burglary in many instances.

Many more boys have comparatively lucrative employment at present than they ever had before, and consequently have an unprecedented amount of money with which to purchase what they want, including firearms. Many others, not employed, but desirous of the weapons just the same, have resorted to crime to get money with which to purchase them.

The contraction of school facilities has also had an effect in increasing delinquency.

Children Are Idle.

In Berlin, for instance, about one-third of the schoolhouses have been emptied of pupils and put to military uses, such as hospitals and the like.

The consequence has been that classes have been crowded in the remaining schools, school hours have been materially shortened and women teachers have had to be employed. The average boy and girl has suddenly found himself or herself with an increased number of leisure hours, generally without a restraining father to chastise him for misdemeanors, and often without a mother as a substitute.

The situation has been complicated further by the arrival in German cities of a large number of children from East Prussia—fugitives driven from their homes by the Russian invasion.

The shortage of workers in most branches of trade throughout Germany has led to the employment of children long before they ought to go to work, and it has put into children's hands sums of money that are a direct temptation to vice and crime.

Many boys of 10, 12 and 15 years are intrusted as messengers with large sums of money, and in consequence, in some cases, embezzlements have resulted. It 's almost a weekly occurrence to read in the newspapers of the flight, or the capture, of some youthful criminal.

ITALY CHEAPEST COUNTRY AT WAR IN WHICH TO LIVE

Prices of Foodstuffs Have Not Increased Materially, but Fuel Is Scarce and High.

ROME, March 11.—Italy is said to be the cheapest of the countries at war in which to live—cheaper even than neutral Switzerland. Hotel rates are still reasonable and house and apartments rents are even lower than they were before the war. Food prices have not increased as much as in France, Germany and England. This last mentioned condition is due mainly to the laws prohibiting the exportation of all foodstuffs.

The only food product, the increase in the price of which has troubled the Italian stomach, is macaroni. Its price has gone from 6 to 10 cents a pound. Eggs have remained stationary in price.

The only seemingly insurmountable difficulty of the poor lies in the cost of coal for heating and cooking. That fuel has increased from 24 cents the hundred pounds to 75 cents. This difficulty, too, the poorer people meet by the co-operative kitchens, where several families cook their meals over the same fire.

LIQUOR-CARRYING AUTO SEIZED

Supreme Court Upholds Confiscation for Violation of Prohibition Law.

RALEIGH, N. C., March 11.—Automobiles employed in hauling whisky or other intoxicants in this State may be confiscated by officers of the law, along with the contraband liquor. That is the decision of the highest tribunal in the State, and it holds against the claims of any who may hold a mortgage on the machine.

In April, 1915, Richard Webb of Pasquotank, was the owner of a car, on which the selling company held a mortgage of $425. This sum had been reduced through partial payments until the balance was $280. In December following Webb and two other men were caught conveying in the machine 44 gallons of whisky and the entire outfit was seized. The Elizabeth City Recorder's Court convicted the men and ordered the car confiscated. The case was taken up on appeal, with the outcome stated.

Last year 63,010 For Sale Want Ads appeared in the Post-Dispatch. This is 29,042 more than were printed in the four other St. Louis newspapers combined.

Greatest of all Brass Bed Outfits

$2.00 CASH
$2.00 A MONTH

This Massive and Magnificent Brass Bed—with 3-inch Posts—2-inch Fillers—6-inch Caps
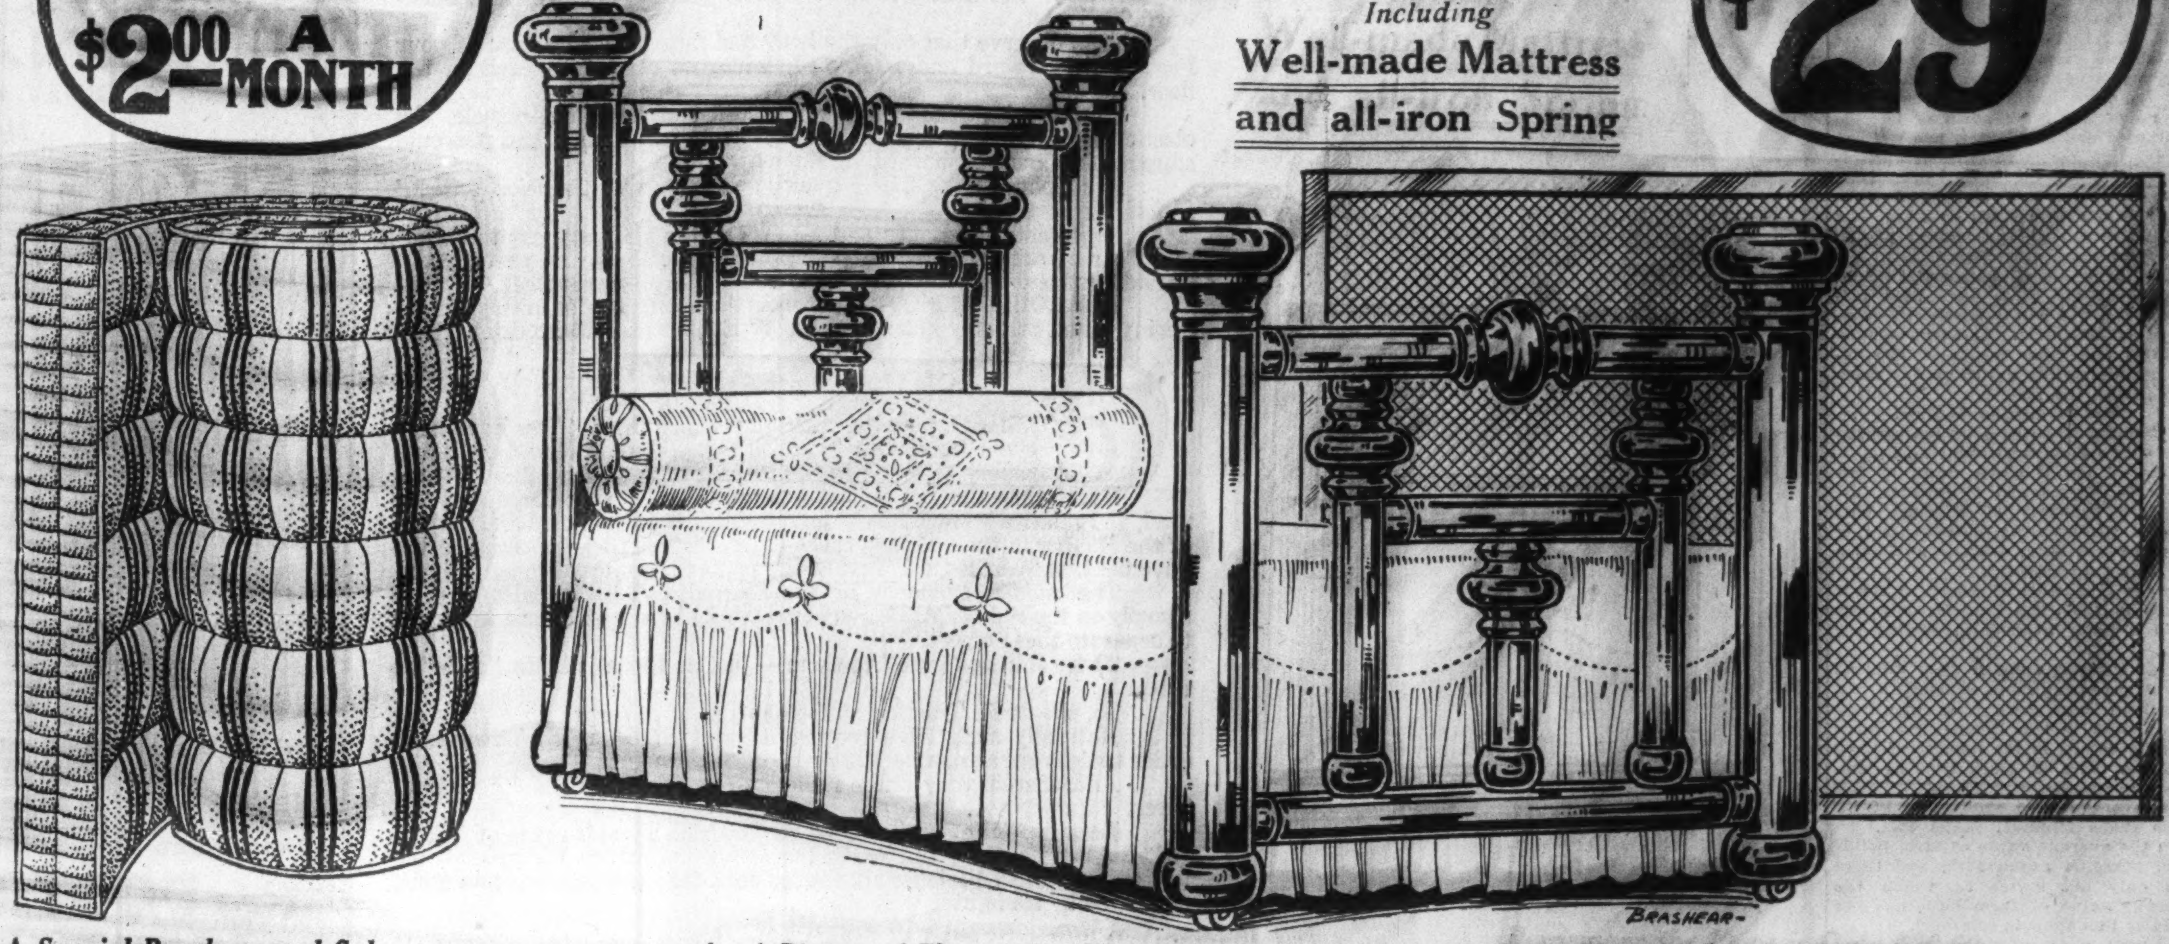
Including
Well-made Mattress and all-iron Spring

$29.50



A Special Purchase and Sale
Some months ago we advertised a special sale of Brass Beds exactly like these—the entire lot was closed out within a few days—and we have been trying ever since to secure more of them. At last we have been successful—another great lot of these magnificent brass beds is here and will go on sale tomorrow at the same sensationally low price as before.

Note the Extraordinary Proportions
Seldom have you seen a brass bed that could compare with this one in size and quality—it is wonderfully massive—one of the largest and finest brass beds made—has 3-inch posts—heavy 2-inch fillers—4-inch ornamental husks and immense 6-inch caps—all the style and appearance of any $40 brass bed on the market.

A Picture of Elegance and Refinement
The illustration above shows the style and proportions of this bed—but to appreciate its chaste beauty and elegance of finish you must come to May-Stern's this week and see it for yourself. It is made of solid brass throughout and finished with a special process lacquer that will hold its brightness and beauty for years to come.

Spring and Mattress are Included
To make this offering still more wonderful—and bring the greatest crowds of the entire season—with each of these Brass Beds we include a heavy, well-made Mattress and a good, all-iron Spring with woven-wire top—all of a quality that we can sincerely recommend, and that you can depend upon to give long and satisfactory service.

Remember the Price is Only $29.50
Bear in mind that this Brass Bed alone is worth at least $40.00—and on top of this we include a good Mattress and all-iron Spring—all for only $29.50—an offering that surpasses anything in this line that you have ever seen or heard of—and one that is certainly worth your first attention tomorrow.

And Note the Unusually Attractive Terms
It would be a simple matter for us to sell all of these Brass Bed Outfits for cash at the price we name—but we prefer to sell them on credit—we want to open as many new accounts as possible—and for this reason we offer this wonderful outfit on terms of only $2.00 cash and $2.00 a month—and invite you to profit by the opportunity.

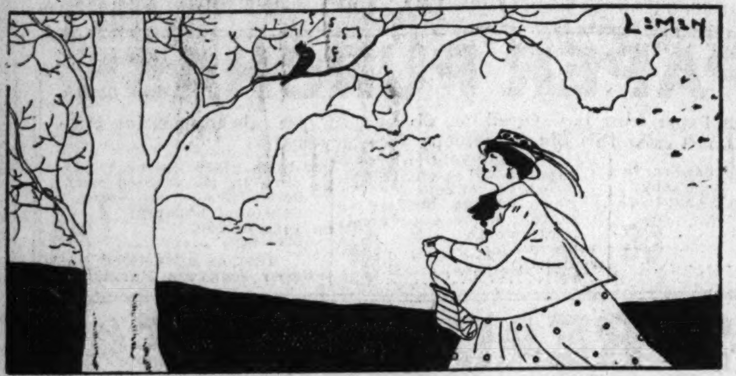
Jests and Jingles

By

W. H. JAMES

ARABELLA HEARS THE CALL.



MISS ARABELLA SIMPKINS BROWN is in an awful flurry;
She's running all around the town and always in a hurry.
For spring is here, she knows it's true, because the styles are budding
And all the merry shopping crew before the wind is scudding.
There's taffetas and gabardines, and chuddah cloths and serges
And lovely shades in blues and greens where every prospect urges.
There's bengalines and mystrals, too, bewildering and prismatic
And silks in every changing hue, auroral and ecstatic.
There's fancy checks and Poiret twills and radiums and scintellas;
We know if she could meet the bills they'd all be Arabella's.
From dawn till dark she's on the quest of lovely new creations
And each in turn will seem the best and win her adulations,
She'll see them in her dreams at night, a truly gorgeous vision
Which to the feminine is quite a taste of joys Elysian.
We know she cannot buy them all, the which it is a pity,
For she has heard the clarion call of springtime in the city.
And yet we know when spring is here in fact as well as fancy
That Arabella will appear, as pert as Jane or Nancy,
In something cute and something sweet, to win our admiration,
And she'll go tripping down the street the fairest of creation.

GO MARK HIM WELL.

BREATHES there the man with soul so dead
Who never to himself hath said:
"I'll raise a garden on my land!"
Whose heart within him ne'er has burned
As with a spade the soil he turned,
And swung his hoe to beat the band?
If such there breathe, go mark him well;
For him no lettuce head shall swell;
High though his titles, proud his name,
If he foreswear the gardening game,
Despite those titles, power and pelf,
He'll dine on canned goods from a shelf;
Living he'll forfeit fair renown
And, doubly dying, shall go down
With the taste of string beans on his tongue
Unwashed, unflavored and unstrung.

GETTING THEIR NUMBER.

"Hello, is this Verdun?"

"Yes."

"Well, this is Hill No. 265. I'm the German commander who has just captured it. Tell me something, please, how do you French number these hills? Are they numbered from the inside out, or from the outside in, please? When we take Hill No. 265 does that mean we have to take 264 more hills before we get into Verdun?"

But the telephone was hung up hurriedly and he didn't find out. Maybe he will, later.

O SUM-SHOOT.

ALL preparedness now is come,
China factory all same hum,
Making fireworks fast as can
For Yuan Shih Kai, that Emperor Man.

Shoot him all pinwheels, nice and fat,
Then many rockets after that;
Roman candle and son-of-a-gun,
To show all people he's Heavenly One.

If coronation no come quick
Emperor Man be pretty slick;
He sell him fireworks by and by
To Melican man for Four July.

CHINA BOY POET.

NOT LIKE CHARLIE.

LITTLE WILLIE'S eyes are straight;
He's regular in feature.
In truth it grieves us to relate
He's quite a normal creature.
His toes turn neither out nor in,
His gait is quite perfection,
He hasn't any foolish grin
Or other disaffection.
And so he's missed a golden chance
For lofty economics;
He'll never wear the baggy pants
Of a star in movie comics.

REAL HIGH WATER.

"Papa, is the ocean deep?"

"Yes, my son."

"Is it very, very deep?"

"Yes."

"Gee! It would almost reach to the tops of sister Mary's new putty-colored shoes, wouldn't it?"

A LOOK AROUND

By CLARK McADAMS

"THE confidence which the average man has in a Government investigation is indicated by what a riverman, with a motorboat, said the other day. We were talking about the price of gasoline, which has been increased from 8.9 to 18 cents in St. Louis within less than a year.

"I thought the Government was investigating the increase in the cost of gas?" said the man with the boat.

I replied that an investigation had been undertaken, but that it would hardly be completed in time to do us any good on the river this year, if it helped us at all.

"I suppose not," he said. "Then probably the people who are making the investigation will go out of office, and by the time the investigation comes up again, it will be like the case against Roosevelt's friend in Arizona. Roosevelt had a Rough Rider who got into trouble soon after the former colonel of his regiment became President. The fellow's first thought of assistance was from the colonel, so he sent him a telegram to the White House. It said:

"'In jail for killing a man. Get me out.'

"Roosevelt didn't quite think it was up to him to interfere with the course of justice, so he did not answer. About six months later he got another telegram from Arizona. It said:

"'Never mind. We have elected the new district attorney.'

"There is so much gasoline used in so many ways by this time that I suppose we would all just as well prepare for the worst. The Government isn't going to do anything to help us. It may bust the Gasoline Trust, as it ousted the Oil Trust—increasing the profits and boosting the price. I always give up when I hear the Government is investigating something. That is the end, so far as I can make out. The investigation drags on until the people who need relief go down and out, and after the incident has passed out of mind the investigating committee files in heavily and reports that we lose. We sure do."

THE UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT was unable to make up its mind as to the constitutionality of the migratory bird law. That was what occasioned the delay. Amended arguments have been ordered by the court, and some time within the present year, probably next Fall, the case will be retried. What the judges have to decide is whether or not a wild duck going down wind at the rate of 150 miles an hour is interstate commerce. Most interstate commerce is easier observed and is more amenable to deliberate and painstaking analysis. The wild duck cares nothing for these hair-splitting considerations. It only knows that the going is good and that by revolving its wings in a sort of bumblebee fashion it can traverse space with astonishing celerity and pleasure. If the duck is interstate commerce of a self-propelling and self-projecting variety, the Government can regulate interference with it by shotgun or otherwise. That is, shooting a flying duck would become analogous in its consequences to derailing a mail train. It seems absurd that such tremendous significance should attach to a purely fortuitous proceeding like trying to bring down a flying duck, but such are the phenomena of law. Upon the other hand, if the duck is not interstate commerce, the Government cannot regulate interference with its passage from one State to another, and fixing the shooting season becomes solely the concern of the state. The truth is that since the movement for a Federal law resulted in the act under which shooting regulations are made, the folly of having anyone but the State attempt this work has been abundantly proven. The Government not only has not the facilities for enforcing its regulations, but has no notion what those regulations should be. Federal control of all migratory birds looked practicable, but it has proven absolutely impracticable. State laws for the protection of birds are every year growing better and stronger. They are only weakened by conflict between State and Federal officials when the Government interferes. That, however, is not the question which is stumping the highest tribunal in the land, and which will probably go in the end to The Hague. The great question is whether a wild duck is fair game for the hunter or interstate traffic.

PROBABLY we shall have a better idea about what we could do if we got into the war after we have seen what Portugal is able to do. We are a much larger and richer nation than Portugal, but in the matter of trying to put the Germans back where they belong we scarcely could render any more immediate assistance than Portugal can. She has a considerably larger number of armed and drilled men ready to take the field than we have, and it is just possible that her small navy could hide out from German submarines as successfully as our big one. Up to this time no out-and-out inefficient of any size has gone in against Germany. Portugal will serve the purpose of experiment. We can watch and see what she does with her army and navy, and maybe by the time she gets as far as she can get we shall be willing to conclude that so far as all practicable purposes go we are in the war now. Italy has not declared war on Germany, nor would it matter greatly for us to do so. We are much more effectually put into it by international law as the matter stands than we could be put into by any formal declaration. Portugal can no doubt send men to the allied line in France, but it is a question whether men are what the allies need. Russia has men without end. If she could trade half of them off for some of the big guns of the Germans and Austrians she would as like as not win the war by herself. It looks at this time as if all Portugal can do is to drill her troops and get her reserves out. She cannot hurt Germany very much. Upon the other hand, she will offer another lot of ships which German submarines can sink with less compunction than goes with the sinking of a neutral, and thus shall the sport be enlivened. All one can see to have been at stake in the matter between Germany and Portugal were the German ships in Portuguese ports. Portugal has those. Therefore, the particular war between those two countries is over. Portugal wins.

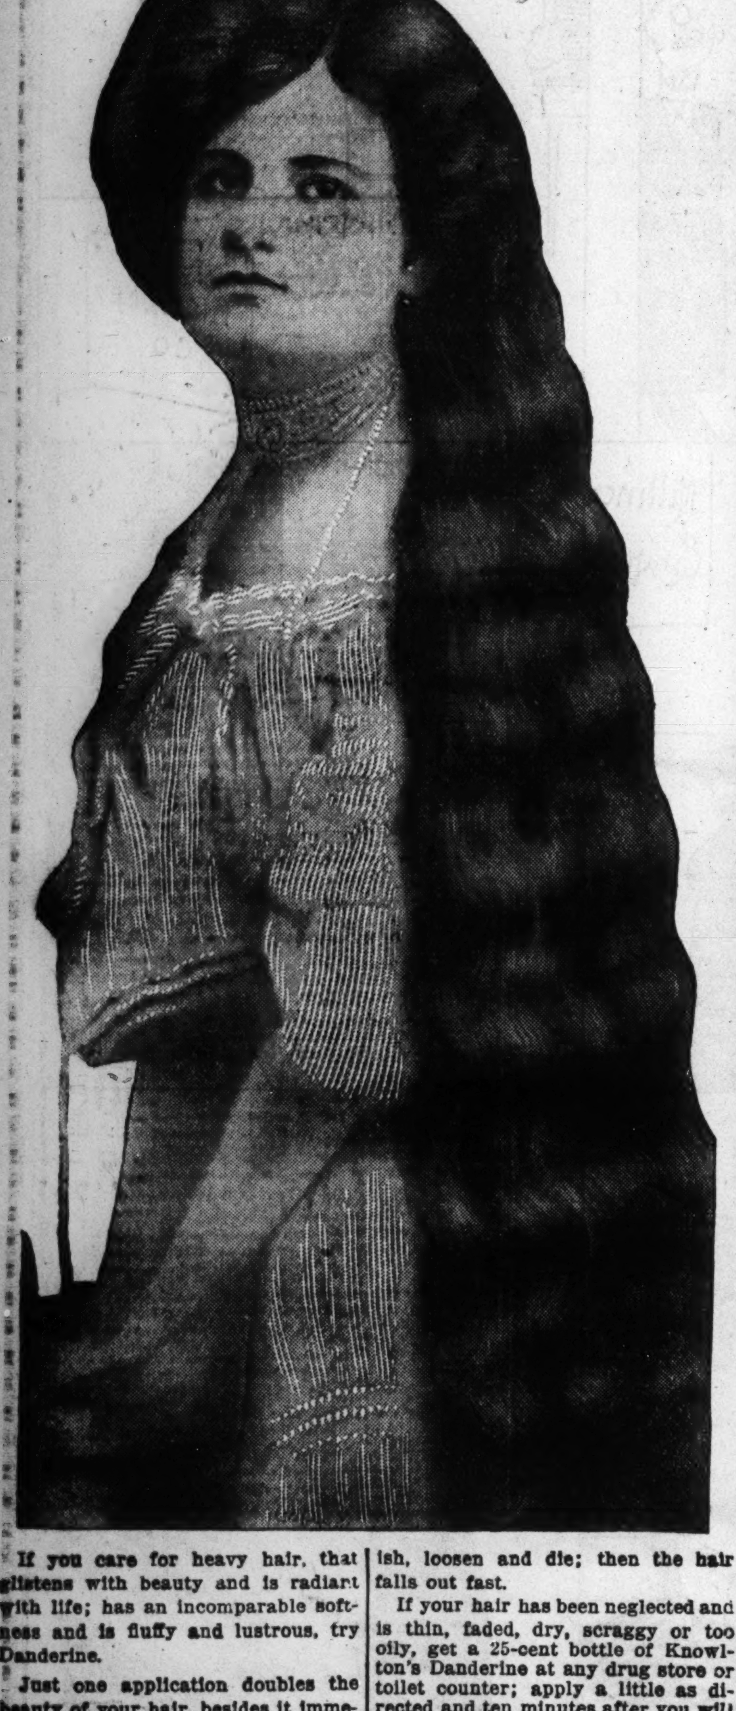
GIRLS! BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR WITH "DANDERINE"

Get a 25-Cent Bottle! Freshen Your Scalp! Stop Falling Hair! Remove Dandruff! Grow Lots of Wavy, Glossy, Beautiful Hair—You Can!



If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you can not have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now? —ADV.

LAUDER, ACROBATS AND COCKATOO ON BILL AT SHUBERT

"A Chinese Honeymoon" at Park; George Primrose Heads Bill at Grand.

This Week's Bills in St. Louis Playhouses

Harry Lauder, Shubert, tomorrow night. Noted Scotch character singer heads vaudeville company.

"Chinese Honeymoon," Park, tomorrow night, by Park Opera o. "Master of the House," by the Players, twice today.

"Master of the House," Shenandoah, tomorrow night. "Chimes of Normandy," twice today.

"A Pair of Sixes," Princess. Farce of business life.

Vaudeville, Columbia. Beatrice Herford, monologist, heads bill tomorrow.

Vaudeville, Grand. George Primrose and company head bill tomorrow.

"Across the Pacific," Hippodrome. War melodrama.

Burlesque, Standard. "United States Beauties."

Burlesque, Gayety. "Roseland Girls."

PHOTOPLAYS.

"The Birth of a Nation," Olympic. Civil War and Reconstruction romance.

American. "Hell's Hinges," "Daphne and the Pirate" and two comedy films.

King's. Billie Burke in Peggy," and two other films.

New Grand Central. Virginia Hammond in "The Discard."

Harry Lauder, whom St. Louis has heard in the past four years only through the medium of phonograph records, will sing his new and old songs on the Shubert Theater's stage this week as the leading entertainer in a vaudeville show for which a first-class price of admission is charged. Daily matinees will begin Tuesday.

Lauder's repertory, it is announced, contains more songs than ever before. This can readily be believed, as the public has a way of remembering his old songs and demanding their repetition, so that he can seldom discard a ballad which he has once made popular. His new songs include "Bonnie Maggie Tamson," "Where the Bluebell Grows," "Rosie," "Jean, My Jean," "The Same as His Father Did Before Him," and "It's Nicest When We Make It Up Again." In the last named song Lauder appears in a baker's workday costume, instead of the familiar kilts.

The accompanying vaudeville company, assembled by William Morris, includes a group of 20 pantomimists and acrobats; Selwyn Driver, monologist; Albert Donnelly, shadowgrapher; Dave Generao and Isabelle Jason, dancers, and Mlle. Lucille and her performing cockatoo.

The beautiful Persian romantic drama, "Omar the Tentmaker," with Guy Bates still in the title role, returns to the Shubert next Sunday night. The attraction for Sunday night, March 26, is Cyril Harcourt's comedy, "A Pair of Silk Stockings," presented by Sam Sothern and other members of the company which played it last season at Winthrop Ames' Little Theater, New York, and which has, for some time past, been at the Princess Theater, Chicago.

"The Birth of a Nation," photoplay extraordinary, remains at the Olympic Theater, for two performances daily.

In "A Chinese Honeymoon," at the Park Theater tomorrow night and the rest of the week, Frank Moulan and Louise Allen will have the chief comedy roles, those of a bridegroom and bride traveling in China. Mabel Wilber will be a Chinese Princess, Sarah Edwards a mother-in-law, and George Natanson, Arthur Burckly, Francis J Boyle, Royal Cutter and Harry Fender will have roles. "The Master of the House" will move to the Shenandoah, this being the final week of the engagement of Florence Reed and Malcolm Williams with the Park Players.

Beatrice Herford, monologue, sketch and characterization specialist, heads this week's vaudeville bill at the Columbia. Others on the bill are Dorothy Toye, who sings with two voices; McWaters and Tyson; Jack Wyatt's Scotch Lads and Lasses; Marshal Montgomery, ventriloquist, assisted by Edna Courtnay; and Fleta Brown, in bird songs, with Herbert Spencer, singer and composer.

George Primrose, minstrel comedian, will be at the Grand this week, with his company of singers, dancers and comedians, including the Primrose Quartet. Several other acts are on the bill. The Princess Theater will present "A Pair of Sixes," a popular farce lately seen at the Shubert.

DRAMATIC SOPRANO IN RECITAL

Miss Eula Dawley to Appear at Sheldon Memorial, March 23.

Miss Eula Dawley, dramatic soprano, will appear in song recital at Sheldon Memorial, Thursday evening, March 23. Miss Dawley, a Texan by birth, spent the past five years abroad, under Catogni of Rome and d'Aubigne of Paris, perfecting herself for the operatic and recital stage.

In addition to a French and an English group, Miss Dawley will sing an aria from Verdi's "La Forza del Destino" and one from Massenot's "Herodiade." Mrs. C. J. Luytles will act as accompanist and Mrs. Luytles and Tyrie W. Lyon will appear twice in numbers for two pianos. Miss Alice Ruemmeli will play the violin obligato to "Chere Nuit," one of the French group.

$500,000 WORTH OF TAPESTRIES TO BE SHOWN HERE

Exhibit Will Be Opened in Art Museum in Forest Park Thursday Night.

An exhibition of old and famous tapestries, valued at more than $500,000, will be opened at the Art Musemu in Forest Park Thursday night, when the building will be open to the public until 10 p. m. Arrangements have been made for auto busses to carry visitors from the park entrances to the Museum.

For this exhibition R. A. Holland, director of the Art Museum, has brought from New York a collection of 21 of the best examples of the tapestry art of the best periods and makes, including Brussels, Aubusson, Beauvais and Gobelin. These were loaned by one of the largest New York dealers.

A St. Louis owned tapestry, reported to have cost about $100,000, will be loaned to the exhibition by Edward A. Faust of Portland place. This is the piece entitled "The Prophecy of Nathan," a color reproduction of which was shown in the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Feb. 27. This tapestry is considered remarkable for the brilliancy of its colors and for the distinctiveness with which the many figures in it stand out.

Inspired by Bible Story.

The inspiration of this tapestry is the Bible story of David and Bethsheba, and the central portion shows the King and, standing in front of him, the beautiful woman, wife of one of his soldiers, with whom he had become enamoured after seeing her at her bath. On either side are other groups of figures depicting incidents in the royal romance that finally led to the treacherous death of Uriah, the husband of Bethsheba. In the central foreground is shown the Prophet Nathan denouncing David and telling him that the child Bethsheba is to bear him will die.

Among the pieces brought from New York are a pair of eighteenth century Royal Aubusson tapestries with the titles "Death of Phaeton" and "The Reception of Paris by Helen." A pair of Gobelin tapestries, bearing the titles "Summer" and "Autumn," were designed by Claude Audran about 1725 and woven by le Fevre.

Two Renaissance Tapestries.

There are two striking Renaissance tapestries, "Birth of the Virgin" and "Judgment of Paris." A Gobelin tapestry called "Roland" was made about 1733 and is after a cartoon by Charles Coypel. "Apollo and Daphne" is the title of a Brussels tapestry, and a beautiful Flemish piece of the seventeenth century is caled "Sophonisba and Masinissa."

Among the unnamed tapestries are a pair of seventeenth century works, a Beauvais tapestry after a design by Francois Boucher, a Gothis Verdure tapestry, and an eighteenth century piece after a designs by Teniers.

It has not been announced how long the tapestry exhibit wil continue, but it is planned to have the Museum open on some other nights while the exhibit remains here.

FLIER AMPUTATES FINGERS OF COMPANION UNDER FIRE

British Aviators Display Coolness While Being Chased by German Aeroplane.

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS, France. Feb. 11.—The cool heroism of two British airmen was demonstrated recently when one of them amputated the fingers of the other while under fire.

Lieut. 3. and Capt. C. D. were being chased by a German aeroplane commanded by Lieut. Immelmann, who opened fire on the Englishmen with his machine gun and pierced their gasoline tank with his first shot.

The British aeroplane began to descend in a volplane, and the German fired again, wounding the Captain in the right arm and smashing two of his fingers. While the Captain steered with his left hand, Lieut. S. amputated the two fingers.

The airmen came down to safety, but as they had no more gasoline in their tank they were unable to set fire to their machine, which fell into the hands of the Germans.

MASONIC RECORDS BROKEN

Chase Withrow Elected Master After Holding the Office 50 Years Ago.

Circuit Judge James E. Withrow yesterday received word that his brother, Chase Withrow, an attorney, had been elected master of the Masonic Lodge at Black Hawk, Colo., 50 years after he was first elected master of the same lodge.

Chase Withrow organized the Black Hawk Lodge in 1866 and was chosen its first high officer. Later he served as grand worshipful master of the Masons of Colorado. According to Masonic papers, it is the first instance of a Mason being elected master of his lodge for two terms with an intermission of half a century.

Russian Prince Writes Marches.

BERLIN, March 11.—Prince Joachim Albrecht of Prussia, whose musical compositions have been a prominent feature recently of programs at the Prussian court, has written six marches of a popular character since the beginning of the war. They are called "Pro Gloria et Patria," "1914," "The Liege March," "With God for King and Country," "Young Germany" and "The Men in Field Gray."

HERE YOU ARE, MEN

Your Spring Suit Made to Measure $19.50

Equal in Every Detail to What Any High-Class St. Louis Custom-Tailor Would Charge $35 to $38 for

Here is how we do it: From one of America's woolen mills we bought, at an exceptionally low figure, about 1000 suit lengths. Every length is a new Spring, 1916, pattern. All are woolens for which custom tailors in all large cities have shown decided preference. The colorings are varied and rich—such colorings as can be produced only in the finest woolens. In the 1000 suit lengths, over 300 are one of a kind in color and patterns. We have completed arrangements to have these woolens custom-tailored in the highest class manner. The low price we paid for the woolens and the price concessions the tailor made us for the big order, enables us to tailor to your individual measure and liking, a smart $35 to $38 Spring Suit for $19.50.

A PERFECT FIT GUARANTEED

These Suits will be made by local journeymen tailors, under supervision of expert designers and cutters. They will charge us $2.00 more for the making, consequently we must ask a slight advance over the price of former sales, however, the materials will be better, the workmanship better, and the satisfaction of having them tailored where we can watch all the little details is well worth the difference.

A Six-Day Offer

We have only 1000 of these Suit Lengths. They are such excellent values at $19.50 that we know they will be snapped up quickly by the first 1000 value-knowing men who read this ad. We will limit this offer to six days, as we cannot secure any more woolens at so low a price.

"JUMBO" DOG OF THE WORLD TO BE SEEN IN SHOW HERE

He Is a Giant St. Bernard From Toledo and Weighs 256 Pounds.

The biggest dog in the world, a kennel Jumbo, is coming to the Mississippi Valley Kennel Club show to be held in the First Regiment Armory April 3, 4, 5 and 6. He is Alta Big Ben, 256 pounds weight, and he heads the Alta Kennels of Mrs. Edna Lee, Toledo, O., who will bring her whole dog family of giant St. Bernards. At the other extreme, Mrs. George H. Moore of Omaha will show her toy Chihuahua, Moxey, about the smallest dog in existence, weighing around a pound and a half.

Many noted dogs of many breeds are also coming, their owners having signified their intention of showing and ordered entries made up.

Miss M. E. Bullock, owner of the great Inma string of white and sable collies, is coming in person with her pets from West Sunsbury, Conn.

T. F. Ryan as an Exhibitor.

Thomas F. Ryan of New York, who has taken time from Wall street to develop one of the finest kennels of German sheep dogs in America, will show a brace of his best, nothing daunted that John Remaklus of North St. Louis beat him at the last show here.

Among noted out-of-town fanciers with strings of fine show animals now on the big bench show circuit who have already applied for entry of their dogs in the St. Louis show are:

W. R. Vandyck, New York; Dr. Carberry, Philadelphia; Dr. O. P. Bennett, Washington, Ill.; Misses Catherine Strong and Daisy Cowper, Chicago; Frank H. Addyman, Ardley, N. Y.; Charles Benson and Arthur Brandeis, Omaha; Mrs. C. R. Bumbarger, Kansas; Mrs. Nelson Browne, Croft Regis Kennels, Dedham, Mass.; Alfred Delmont, Devon, Pa.; Dr. C. D. Eppright, Manor, Tex.; Mrs. Montague Flagg, New York City; Miss Ruth Hale George, Wellesley, Mass.; Mrs. E. O. Y.; Mrs. C. E. Strickler, Columbus, O.; Mrs. G. Steadman Thomas, Hamilton, Mass.; John Seeley Ward, New York, and Miss Theodora Wilbour, New York.

Entry Books Opened.

Entry books were opened yesterday and will be closed to entries March 23, under the new rules of the American Kennel Club, of which the Mississippi Valley Kennel Club is a member. These rules provide for closing 10 days prior to opening the show.

Nearly $4000 cash prizes have been hung up for the winners of the various classes by the Kennel Club and in addition special prizes worth half that much more have been offered by clubs, firms and individuals.

The judges will be Dr. J. A. Bruette of New York, James L. Corbett of St. Louis, J. Steele McKenzie of Cincinnati and Charles G. Hopton of New York.

A New Showing of Spring Costumes of Distinguished Individuality

The showing in our Costume Salon—tomorrow—will include many models that are entirely different from those exhibited last week. They are marvels of beauty, and the variety of styles, fabrics and prices is exceptionally broad.

Stylish New Dresses at $25

At this price, we are showing three very attractive models. One is of Swiss taffeta, beautifully fashioned with flaring skirt and Georgette sleeves. The second model is also made of taffeta with embroidered crepe sleeves and a most distinctive circular tunic in the pointed style.

Crepe de chine has been used in the making of the third costume, which has surplice bodice, Georgette sleeves and a full-plaited skirt. Price $25.00

An Attractive Style at $27.50

At a slightly higher price, we are showing a pretty Crepe de Chine Dress in a style that has the indorsement of fashion authorities. The sleeves are of Georgette, the tunic is plaited and an embroidered-beaded girdle imparts a chic finishing touch. Price $27.50

Highly Artistic Models

Other models of clever design are shown in the most fashionable Spring materials and in every correct color. Prices range from $35.00 to $195.00

Third Floor.

Women's Suits in the Latest Spring Modes and Materials

In our collection of Women's Suits you will find every style-feature that characterizes the Spring of 1916. These are models of old-fashioned newness, for in them are reflected the styles of many generations ago—quaint Dickens and Bishop Collars, bell-shape and puffed sleeves, and skirts that have yards and yards of fullness.

The Suits for semi-dress wear are quite attractively trimmed, and so extensive is the variety we offer that every taste can be satisfied. Prices range from $15.00 to $265.00

Silk Suits at $27.50 to $48.50

Special attention is directed to the Silk Suits that show the new blouse and hip-length coats, smartly finished with collars and cuffs of contrasting color. The skirts are extremely full, as they should be, and have the new girdles. Prices $27.50 to $48.50

Third Floor.

Demonstration of Gossard Models in Our Corset Specialty Shop

Miss Katherine Johnson, the manufacturer's personal representative, will be here to demonstrate and display the new Gossard Models—for one week, beginning tomorrow.

Gossard Corsets are designed with the most careful regard for every requirement of health and comfort. They are scientifically boned, so that they support the back and assist you in attaining and maintaining a correct poise, whether sitting or standing. The front-lacing adjustment permits of that smooth and perfect back which always characterizes the Gossard Corset.

There is a Gossard model suitable for every style of figure and we give you a cordial invitation to come in and have Miss Johnson select the correct model for your type.

Prices $2.00 to $20.00

Gossard Model 551 has been carefully designed to meet the latest style requirements without sacrificing one iota of comfort. It has very low bust with ample fullness over the diaphram and back and has long hip and back lines; three elastic sections in the skirt. Price $5.00

Gossard Model 659 is made of a fancy pink striped broche and has medium-high bust and medium-length skirt extension. Price $6.50

Gossard Model 902 of figured white broche, is best adapted for the large figure as it has extremely long skirt extension with medium bust. Price $10.00

Third Floor.

A Wonderful Array of Lovely Silks in the Newest Weaves and Colors

Our Spring line of Silken Fabrics is unusually complete in variety of weaves, colors and patterns—for street, afternoon and evening toilettes, coat suits and skirts. Only by way of mention do we describe a few of them here.

The highly favored Taffetas are here in every conceivable shade and they are really extraordinary values at our prices of $1.25 to $2.50

We are showing a great variety of beautiful Striped Silk Suitings, in the very latest styles and combinations—priced at $1.50 to $3.00

"La Jerz" is quite the most popular weave for Sport Coats and Suits, as well as for men's and women's Outing Shirts. It is shown in stripes of almost every kind imaginable on white grounds, including the new ombre effects; 32 inches wide. The yard $2.00

Second Floor.

Cream Woolens Are Ultra-smart for Women's and Children's Apparel

10,000 Yards of Fine St. Gall Embroideries in the Greatest Value-giving Sale That St. Louis Has Ever Seen

The sale of Embroideries that will begin here tomorrow morning will eclipse every sale of its kind that has ever been held in Saint Louis. We have never heard of such exquisite Embroideries being offered at such a phenomenally low price.

They are the product of Switzerland's leading manufacturer of high-grade goods and are delightfully dainty in weave and pattern.

The lot comprises Galloons, Bands, Edges and Flouncings—of organdy, voile, batiste, Swiss and net combinations—in black, white and colors. They are just what will be required for the making and trimming of dainty Summer frocks, blouses, lingerie, etc.

The importance of this sale will be realized when we say that the embroideries which we are now offering are actually valued up to $2.00 a yard, and, while the quantity is large, they are not likely to last long at our surprisingly low price.

Tells how to hold and control rupture and how to avoid serious consequences, such as strangulation, etc. It has shown hundreds the way to better health and happiness. Send for it.

You Can Be Free From Truss Slavery and Rupture Misery

Are you going about harnessed like an over-burdened truck-horse with an ill-fitting truss or make-shift contraption gouging into your flesh or slipping out of place, causing you endless misery?

I've proved to a multitude of rupture sufferers that PERFECT support and COMFORT are possible. Let me show YOU Free how YOUR rupture can be held and held with PERFECT, GLORIOUS comfort.

Here Is Proof!

Mr. John T. Custard, Lamar Mo., says: "It has really cured me." Mr Broadus Willoughby, Crosby, Ala., says: "The Schuiling Rupture Lock is the best I ever used. It has cured me." Mr Louis Fitting, Kooskia, Idaho, says: "I wore the Schuiling Lock five months and can say I am cured."

These are samples of scores of letters we have on file. I will send copies of dozens like them. I offer STILL STRONGER PROOF I will send you a SCHUILING RUPTURE LOCK if you wish and let you

Test It at Our Risk

Our Trial Offer plan enables you to put on a SCHUILING RUPTURE LOCK and run, jump, pull, tug, twist, squirm, strain, cough, sneeze and do anything else you like to prove to yourself that IT HOLDS and holds COMFORTABLY under ALL conditions. Once one of these Locks is adjusted to fit you, we are willing for you to give it the severest test that you or anybody else can think of. Write today for our book and particulars of trial offer Free.

The Schuiling Rupture Lock

Is a very different kind of support. It conforms perfectly with the shape of the body. It has no steel springs, no rubber or elastic bands, no plasters or leg straps. Yet, when once adjusted to your needs you simply CANNOT displace it by any action of the body. You can put it on or take it off as easy as snapping your finger. This wonderful rupture support will really LOCK your rupture so it CAN'T come down.

It holds the rupture with wonderful firmness yet with all the comfort that could be obtained by gentle pressure of the hand.

If you wear a properly fitted SCHUILING RUPTURE LOCK your rupture can't come down, bear that in mind—your rupture CAN'T come down, no matter what position you get into. Think of it, a rupture support that holds your rupture so it CAN'T come down and at the same time holds with REAL COMFORT.

Isn't such a rupture support worth spending a penny or two to find out about? Isn't it worth INVESTIGATING? Doesn't your own good judgment tell you as you read these lines that there MUST be something remarkable about a rupture support that will do this?

Fill out the following coupon and send it to me right today—right off, right now, while you are thinking of it and have address before you. Or write a post card or letter, if you prefer, but write it and send it AT ONCE.

Introductory offer to new customers only—and but one shipment to each.

An offer never before made. An offer absolutely unparalleled—so daring that no one but Detrick—selling direct from the distillery to you—would attempt it. Just think, Bottled in Bond Pure whiskey of the rarest flavor, most entrancing aroma and genuine medicinal qualities, practically Seven Summers Old—such a whiskey as costs $1 or more every day in the year—for 75 cents a quart or $3 for four quarts—with every cent of the express prepaid by us.

Why such a generous offer? Because we know that every person who tries this whiskey will use no other brand. The first Taste will delight you—the first quart will convince you—you will never use any other and you will always be an enthusiastic booster. This is genuine bottled-in-bond whiskey—absolutely pure. The United States Government green stamps protect you and are a guarantee that this whiskey is fully matured, full measure and 100 proof. Your medicine chest or sideboard should never be without a bottle of Detrick's in time of emergency. It's a positive necessity. Our whiskey is indorsed for its medicinal qualities.

Now—this minute—while you can taste the goodness and [illegible] flavor of Detrick's Whiskey—rush that order. We will rush the shipment by express at once.

SCHOOL BOARD TO LET CONTRACT WITH W. B. ITTNER EXPIRE

Members Indicate That the Architect Will Not Be Re-Engaged.

No action will be taken by the Board of Education, at its meeting Tuesday, toward the renewal of the contract of William B. Ittner, architect, by which he has been receiving 3 per cent commissions on the gross cost of all new school buildings in St. Louis erected since 1910, members of the board said yesterday. Ittner's contract will expire April 1.

Dr. J. P. Harper, president of the board, and Dr. Henry L. Wolfner, chairman of the Building Committee, said the question of a possible renewal of the contract had not been discussed by the board members and that it would not be taken up by the board before its expiration. The board will not meet again after the Tuesday meeting until after the expiration of the contract.

Dr. Harper said the matter would be permitted to "peter out," explaining that he meant it would be an indication that the board did not intend to renew the contract if some action was not taken on it before it expired.

Ittner was Commissioner of School Buildings at a salary of $6500 a year until 1910, when he resigned. He was immediately afterward employed as architect on the 3 per cent commission basis and given a contract for two years. This contract was twice renewed.

Records of the board show Ittner received during the first four complete fiscal years his contract was in force an average of $20,545 a year in commissions. The average annual cost of the building department after Ittner resigned, and including his commissions, was $70,000, as against an average cost of $66,000 for the preceding three years.

R. M. Milligan, Commissioner of School Buildings, told a Post-Dispatch reporter that his office could do the work formerly done by Ittner, with the addition of three draftsmen at $140 a month each.

GREEKS COVER GOOD PART OF LETTERS WITH STAMPS

Three Kinds Beside Regular Postage on Sale, One of Them Obligatory at Holiday Times.

ATHENS, Greece, March 11.—Designs for a new issue of Greek postage stamps have been approved, and unless the Servian occupation of Corfu interferes with the printing of them, the new stamps will be on sale within a few months. Greek paper money is printed in the United States, but the postage stamps are printed on the Island of Corfu.

During the holidays, such as those around Easter, no letter posted for delivery in Greece will reach its destination unless stamped with a "National Relief Stamp," in addition to the regular postage. These stamps are in two denominations—two-fifths of a cent and one cent—and the proceeds of their sale goes to the aid of families of those killed in the Balkan war of 1912 and 1913.

In addition to the obligatory National Relief Stamps there are Greek Red Cross stamps and stamps of the Women's Patriotic League on sale. Their use is so strongly urged by the postal clerks, that the average Greek believes they, too, are obligatory, with the result that he covers the good part of an envelope with stamps.

LARNED'S HISTORY OF WORLD IS ON SALE IN FIVE VOLUMES

An announcement appears in the advertising columns of this paper today, offering to readers Larned's History of the World on terms that make it practically a gift. The five volumes which constitute the set are printed from brand-new plates in clear type and on excellent paper. The binding is in approved de luxe style, with a rich half-calf effect, and will ornament any library.

The set, with the wonderful reproductions of great masterpieces in original colors, with magnificent halftone full page illustrations, and with 150 portraits of famous historical characters, would ordinarily, it is claimed, sell for $12.

Joseph Nelson Larned, the author, has a world-wide reputation as the author of Larned's History for Ready Reference, a work that is in every library in the land and which is often consulted in reference work. His history of the World is his latest work, and he has had an enormous benefit of years of preparation in compiling the masterpiece. The coupon offer appearing in the advertisement explains the terms upon which the five volumes may be had.

Odd Fellows to Give Concert.

An entertainment will be given tomorrow evening by Wildey Encampment, I. O. O. F., at its hall in the Odd Fellows' Building, Ninth and Olive streets. Miss Lucille Ruehmkorf, concert pianist, will be assisted by Misses Beatrice Zimmerman, Margaret Bahrenberg, Lena Peterson, Evelyn Ruhmkorf and Mrs. Williamson.

TAKE SALTS IF YOUR BACK HURTS SAYS DRUGS ONLY EXCITE THE KIDNEYS

Salts is absolutely harmless to flush your Kidneys and neutralize uric acid, thus ending all Bladder trouble.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys. Keep your kidneys clean by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.—ADV.

TRAVELING MEN FORM A CLUB TO BOOST GARDNER

Organization Will Attempt to Line Up 22,000 Drummers in State for Him.

A campaign to enlist the aid of 22,000 traveling men of Missouri for the nomination and election of Fred D. Gardner of St. Louis as Governor was launched at the American Hotel yesterday by a newly organized Gardner-for-Governor Traveling Men's Club. This organization will begin immediately to circularize all the traveling men of the State and will endeavor to get them to pledge themselves to vote for Gardner both in the primary and the general election.

W. E. Leach of 3204 North Taylor avenue, a traveling representative of the F. R. Rice Mercantile Cigar Co., was elected president of the club; E. G. Meyer of 2152 Nebraska avenue, representing the Blanke-Wenneker Candy Co., was chosen vice president, and Harry J. Kranz, 742 Aubert avenue, representing the Carnegie Steel Co., secretary.

The campaign which the traveling men will make for Gardner will urge his support on the ground that he is a business man and that a business administration of the affairs of the State is demanded. The traveling men also are enthusiastic over the proposed Gardner land bank bill, and say that if it should be enacted into law it would bring millions of dollars into the State for distribution among the farmers, and that farmers, amply supplied with money, could meet their obligations to the country merchants, who are, in turn, the customers of the traveling men.

Similar Organizations Being Formed.

The club will present the further argument that two-thirds of the counties of the State lost in population during the decade from 1900 to 1910, that the land bank would have the effect of making farm life more attractive to boys and thus keep them on the farm. This would aid in the development of the agricultral resources of the State and increase its riches, thereby making better business for everybody, the travelers assert.

Similar organizations to boost Gardner for Governor are being formed in other lines of business. A lumberman's club will be organized in a few days. Hampton Rothwell, a lawyer, who aided in the organization of the traveling men's club, said that the Gardner-for-Governor movement was growing in every section of the State.

The organization meeting was attended by 75 traveling men, and the club will meet every Saturday at 10:30 a. m., at the American Hotel, until after the primary election.

The Rev. Dr. J. T. M. Johnston, a Baptist preacher and banker, now living in St. Louis, in a speech in Boone County yesterday, declared that he would not be a candidate for Governor, but left the impression that he intended to enter the contest for United States Senator against James A. Reed.

Deferred Announcement for Senator.

Johnston went to Columbia several days ago and opened headquarters with the intention of making his announcement for Senator, but some of his friends persuaded him to defer it. However, he started a campaign for delegate-at-large to the Democratic national convention in St. Louis, June 14. He said he would make an announcement within two weeks as to whether he would get into the senatorial race.

Democratic leaders throughout the State are agreed that Senators Stone and Reed and Speaker Champ Clark will be selected as three of the four delegats-at-large to the national convention. There will be a fight for fourth place. Former Gov. Lon V. Stephens, William H. Phelps of Carthage and Dr. Johnston are the candidates for the fourth place.

Col. Phelps, who is himself a power in State politics, will have the active support of Joseph B. Shannon of Kansas City, who is now the controlling factor in Kansas City politics and has a following throughout the State.

The State convention is likely to develop several bitter fights, not only over the four delegates at large, but over the election of a national committeeman, and the indorsement of Gov. Major for Vice President.

Major is accused of having made a combination with Senators Stone and Reed to stay out of the race for Senator, provided he was given an indorsement for Vice President and to join them in an effort to bring about the nomination of Francis M. Wilson of Kansas City for Governor.

Angered Other Candidates.

Major's attitude in this matter has angered the other eight candidates for Governor and they are threatening to start a fight to prevent his indorsement by the State convention for the Vice Presidential nomination. The candidates and their friends assert that Major is unpopular throughout the State; that his nomination as Vice President would cause the certain loss of the State to the Democrats, and that Reed and Stone are not sincere in the matter of Major's Vice Presidential boom, as they both know that he has no chance for the nomination and that he would be a dead weight to the national ticket.

Corenelius Roach, W. D. Vandiver, John M. Atkinson and representatives of John T. Barker and other candidates have discussed among themselves during the last few days a plan of campaign to fight the Major-Stone-Reed combination, which they declare exists, despite the denials of the two Senators. So many efforts have been made by the Major appointees, and men presumed to represent the two Senators, to line up leaders and job holders for Wilson, the other candidates say, that the denial of the combination is ridiculous.

California Voters Unable to Express Preference for Vice President.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., March 11.—A. Z. Patterson of Jefferson City, Mo., inquired by telegraph of Secretary of State Frank C. Jordan by what means Gov. E. W. Major of Missouri could place his name before the Democratic voters of California as a candidate for the vice presidential nomination of that party. Patterson was informed that the presidential primary ballot of California did not permit voters to express a preference for the second place on the ticket.

NATURAL GAS PRICE FIXED

TOPEKA, Kan., March 11.—Gas rates in the cities of Kansas may not be increased by distributing companies, which purchases gas from the Kansas Natural Gas Co., beyond the rate fixed by the Kansas Public Utilities Commission, even though the city may have granted a franchise permitting a higher rate, according to a decision by the Kansas Supreme Court today.

The Public Utilities Commission held that 28 cents a thousand cubic feet was the top price the Kansas Natural Gas Co. can charge for gas.

Thankful for Great Relief the Remedy Brought Her

Says Fruitola and Traxo Possesses All the Merit That Is Claimed for It.

Mrs. S. S. Cole

After completing the necessary treatment, Mrs. S. S. Cole, Lampasas, Texas, was so well pleased with the results that she wrote the Pinus laboratories as follows: "Fruitola and Traxo are all you claim. It removed a quantity of gall-stones and I feel sure it saved my life. I am well now and thankful to you for the great good your medicine has done me."

Fruitola is a powerful lubricant for the intestinal organs and one dose is usually sufficient to give ample evidence of its efficacy. It is a great system cleanser. Following a dose of Fruitola, Traxo should be taken three or four times a day in order to rebuild and restore the system that has been weakened and run down by constant suffering. It is a splendid tonic acting on the liver and stomach most beneficially.

Fruitola and Traxo are prepared in the Pinus laboratories at Monticello, Ill., and arrangements have been made to supply them through representative druggists. In St. Louis they can be obtained at Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., 6th St. and Washington Av.

PRICE OF MONROE DOCTRINE TO BE HIGH, BUT U. S. MUST PAY, SAYS PROF. A. B. HART

Harvard Historian Tells New York Lawyers Nation's Responsibility Under It Is Growing Heavy—Germany or Japan May Ignore It.

By Prof. A. B. Hart.

Speech delivered March 4 at the Lawyers' Club in New York by Albert Bushnell Hart, professor of government at Harvard University since 1910, and widely known author and editor of works on history and political science.

WE have had a free Monroe Doctrine for nearly a century; but the time for free lunches in international affairs has passed. Henceforth if we want our Monroe Doctrine we shall have to pay for it.

We have flattered ourselves that the Monroe Doctrine is a benevolent doctrine. We have patted ourselves on the back because of our attitude of fellowship toward our little republican neighbors; we have been vain about our tolerance of the small Powers; we have boasted to ourselves of our policy of self-immolation; we think we have set a better example than others. But the truth is that from 1823 down to the present time the real purpose of the Monroe Doctrine has never been anything else but to protect the people of the United States.

We propound a doctrine which involves the protection of our neighboring states. We have never given any protection. The United States has never appropriated one dollar or spent one soldier to protect the person or property of a single Latin-American neighbor—unless you take the recent case of Vera Cruz as coming within that description. We have had our Monroe Doctrine, and it came to us cheap, and Latin-Americans are aware that it did.

Doctrine Not to Be Even Cheap.

We still have our Monroe Doctrine, and we shall have to keep it, for we cannot do without it. But, as I have said, it will no longer be free or even cheap.

I suppose that if a referendum were ordered by Congress by which every voter should be called upon to cast his ballot for or against the Monroe Doctrine the "for it" would be larger than 68 to 14.

It would be more like 68,000,000 to 14. For the Monroe Doctrine does represent a principle dear to the heart of the American people. Contradictory as its statements have been, vague as are the principles on which it is based, nevertheless every man and woman in the community feels that there is something for which the Monroe Doctrine stands, something which must be maintained as a matter of national dignity, of national power and national defense.

In advocating a Monroe Doctrine, no one defines it. This vague term represents a perfectly clearly understood state, which is simply that it is contrary to our interests and to the peace and prosperity of all the Western Hemisphere that there be any additional settlements of European Powers in America, North or South, from the North Pole to the extremity of the Southern continent at Cape Horn. This is essentially the Monroe Doctrine.

But when you have said that, you have only begun, because the Monroe Doctrine is not a self-executing principle. It depends first of all upon its application to America and its relation both to America and to foreign Powers. And no subject in which the American people are interested is more embedded in misapprehension, more covered by conventional beliefs which have no real foundation, than the Monroe Doctrine.

Bear Others' Tortures Nobly.

The real point of departure was not that it would hurt our feelings if foreign navies came and landed armies which proceeded to make war upon nations and peoples who, so far as we are concerned, were unoffending. We have developed in this day to bear bravely, nobly, unalterably, the tortures of other nations.

To this day the only reason why the Monroe Doctrine is a national doctrine is the theory that without it the United States of America would somehow be in danger and that it affords us protection.

Let us see where is has already led us and whither it is rapidly dragging us.

Theoretically, there are in America 21 republics, all of them sovereign—equal as nations, equal as members of the great family of Powers—and the United States is simply the largest of that 21. The United States has more than 100,000,000 persons. In all the rest of the two Americas there are about 85,000,000—of whom 75,000,000, or thereabouts, are Latin-Americans. Now, at first glance, one might say: "That is not a combination of 21 sister States; it is an exaggeration; there is no chemical combination here. It is rather one great power, Anglo-Saxon in its interests, against a body of 20 Latin-American republics, of which only three, the A B C Powers, have yet achieved a stable government.

But of those 21 republics five are no more sovereign and independent than Montenegro is sovereign and independent, because the United States has already practically absorbed those five and is ready to take others.

Small Neighbors Made Dependent.

I speak advisedly. The truth is, the actual fact is, that the United States has destroyed—I hardly know what term to use—has counteracted, if you like, the independence of these small neighbors. Is Cuba an independent republic? Cuba cannot make a treaty, nor a contract, nor do anything without its being approved by the United States. That is made a part of the Cuban statutes. The little negro republics of Santo Domingo and Hayti now are in a similar position. The republic of Panama is no more independent than the City of New York. Panama elects a Governor whom they think will be acceptable to the Government in Washington, and if they are not sure they submit his name to Washington to be passed upon. Nicaragua is now as much a part of the United States as the Philippine Islands. Having taken two of the six Central American States, the other four are almost certain to come in within a very short time, probably within nine years, and after they come in will the rest of America watch over and protect the Monroe Doctrine? Protect against whom? Protect against Europe, but not against Uncle Sam?

If we make every Central American state a dependency, where and what will Mexico be? It is quite true that in every case the little state was disturbed, but it had or was likely to have foreign debts for which foreign creditors would press for payment; in every case there has been danger that some foreign Power would step in and seize the territory. But does anybody suppose that if the thinking men in those countries could express their will they would choose to be made virtuous, to pay their debts, to recognize the responsibilities of a Government because the President or the Department of State at Washington so bid them? Yet that is their present condition.

We have already brought within our sphere some 10,000,000 of people speaking Spanish, mostly of mixed races, a considerable number of whom have predominating elements which would not be admitted into Washington society. These people do not want us, but we have got to protect them. One of the elements of the present Monroe Doctrine is that we are thus constantly expanding the sphere of our responsibility to protect a larger and larger area, which in itself brings us only weakness. We are drawing more and more upon our strength for a result

How Thin People Can Put On Flesh

Thin men and women—that big, hearty, filling dinner you ate last night. What became of all the fat-producing nourishment it contained? You haven't gained in weight one ounce. That food passed from your body like unburned coal through an open grate. The material was there, but your food doesn't work and stick, and the plain truth is you hardly get enough nourishment from your meals to pay for the cost of cooking. This is true of thin folks the world over. Your nutritive organs, your functions of assimilation are probably sadly out of gear and need reconstruction.

Cut out the foolish foods and funny sawdust diets. Cut out everything but the meals you are eating and eat with every one of those a single Sargol tablet. In two weeks note the difference. Let the scales be the judge. Five to eight good solid pounds of healthy, "stay-there" fat may be the net result. Sargol aims to charge weak, stagnant blood with millions of fresh new red blood corpuscles—to give the blood the carrying power to deliver every ounce of fat-making material in your food to every part of your body. Sargol, too, mixes with your food, to prepare it for the blood in an easily assimilated form. Thin people tell how they have gained all the way from 10 to 25 pounds a month while taking Sargol and say that the new flesh stays put. Sargol tablets are a careful combination of six of the best assimilative elements known to chemistry. They come 40 tablets to a package, are pleasant, harmless and inexpensive, and Judge & Dolph Drug Co.'s 3 stores, Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. Weipert Drug Co., Johnson-Enderle-Pauley Drug Co.'s 7 stores and all other good druggists in this vicinity sell them subject to an absolute guarantee of weight increase or money back as found in every large package.—ADV.

For Farmers—for Cooks—for Children—for Ladies—for Mothers—for Fathers.

We all at some time need a tonic when we are overworked or are run down, nervous, tired or all in. The change of weather from cold to warm or hot is hard on us, for the blood is not used to it. Help to prepare your system with De Lacy's Cin-Ko-Na and Iron, a compound tonic with nux vomica. It will help you to a better appetite, more strength, steadier nerves, and to whip up the sluggish blood. Large $1.00 bottles for sale by your druggist or sent prepaid by De Lacy Chemical Co., 3010 Olive st., St. Louis.

TRUSS WEARING CONDEMNED

Mere Mechanical Support Does Not Cure—Binding Pressure Declared Harmful.

At best, the truss is only a makeshift—a false prop against a collapsing wall—and cannot be expected to act as more than a mere mechanical support. The binding pressure retards blood circulation, thus robbing the weakened muscles of that which they need most—nourishment.

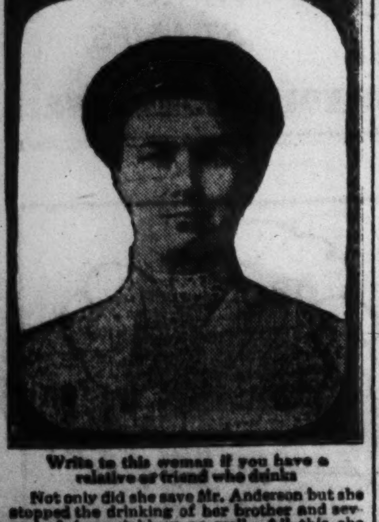
But science has found a way, and every truss sufferer in the land is invited to make a FREE test right in the privacy of their own home. STUART'S ADHESIVE PLAPAO-PAD is unquestionably the most scientific, logical and successful self-treatment for rupture the world has ever known. Soft as velvet—easy to apply—inexpensive. To be used whilst you work and whilst you sleep. When adhering closely to the body slipping or shifting out of place is impossible, so cannot chafe or pinch. No straps, buckles or springs attached.

Learn how to close the hernial opening as nature intended so the rupture CAN'T come down. Send your name today to Plapao Co., Block 262, St. Louis, Mo., for FREE trial Plapao and the instructive information necessary.—ADV.

This Wife and Mother Wishes To Tell You FREE How She Stopped Her Husband's Drinking

By all Means Write to Her and Learn how She did it.

For over 20 years Jas. Anderson of 20 Pearl Ave., Hillburn, N. Y., was a confirmed drunkard. His case was about as bad as it could be, but a little over twelve years ago his devoted wife, after years of trying, finally succeeded in stopping his drinking entirely.



Write to this woman if you have a relative or friend who drinks

Not only did she save Mr. Anderson but she stopped the drinking of her brother and several of her neighbors as well. All this she accomplished by simple home treatment which she now desires every man and woman who has a relative or friend who drinks, to know all about, for she feels that others can do just as she did.

The treatment can be given secretly if desired and without cost. she will gladly and willingly tell what it is. Therefore every reader of this notice who is interested in curing a "dear one" of drinking should write to Mrs. Anderson at once. Her reply will come by return mail in a sealed envelope. She does this gladly in hopes that others will be benefited as she was. One thing she asks however, and that is that you do not send money for she has nothing to sell. Simply address your letter with all confidence, to Mrs. Margaret Anderson at the address given above and she will reply by return mail in a sealed envelope.

which gives us no reciprocal strength in time of need.

To my mind it is certain that in not many years the areas on which the United States is the predominant national will reach from Canada to the United States of Columbia. There is also the great question of the admission of the A-B-C Powers to our diplomatic inertia, if I may so call it which is certainly a great question for the progress of the world. Their diplomats are men of high standing. Such men we can deal with. Whether we can deal with the people of those countries is another question. This leads to the suggestion that the Monroe Doctrine is leading to a Pan-American organization. We are all in favor of that Latin-American union on a proper basis. We are 100,000,000 and they are 60,000,000. Are you going to organize them into a union in which every state has one vote, in which there will be 21 votes against the United States? Is the United States going to yield in matters of interamerican consequences to such a vote?

There is not a man here who does not realize that if a Pan-American union were effected the people of the United States would never submit to that. If you are going to have a union, the decisions of which you are going to accept only as you feel like it. Pan-Americanism is not going to succeed.

Union of Trade to Consider.

Then there is the union of trade. We should like to have a unilateral system of trade with the Latin-Americans. Many men assured me, in no uncertain terms, that South America commercially is a squeezed orange and that people who want to trade with South America ought to assume their own uncollectible debts. Of course, South America has been hard hit by the war. The point is, however, if you are going to have a Latin-American union, can you have a separate commercial union? It has been said that a direct trade relation is to be established; that this has been pending since the Pan-American Congress 25 years ago. The United States has never taken a step to bring the Latin-American Powers into direct trade relationship, except to pass the Dingley and the Aldrich tariff laws. When this war is over these people are more likely to trade with other nations than with us.

There are certain things in our present Monroe Doctrine which are difficult to reconcile with the facts, and you must confront these difficulties; for there is no escaping them.

The people of the United States apparently do not look upon the people of Latin-America as their social equals. In many of the Latin-American states—in Cuba, in Hayti and in San Domingo—the negro population is in the majority. By bringing in those dependencies we are probably largely increasing a population of a kind that we already have in sufficient numbers in the United States. It is not conceivable that any of these, with perhaps the exception of Cuba, will ever be admitted to the Union, with two Senators and the proportionate allotment of Representatives.

Many of us have the feeling that the rank and file of those countries are a different and an inferior folk, no matter what country we came from. This does not add to the amenities of nations.

Monroe Doctrine a Necessity.

But, after all, the Monroe Doctrine is a necessity. We cannot let go of it, and it will never let go of us, because the dangers inherent in it are permanent. If Congress should abrogate the Monroe Doctrine, the next day there would be a general rush to grab territory. And that would soon lead to friction with our new neighbors and increase the probability of war.

Are there any Powers that are likely to look for enlargement in America, and thus disturb the balance of power? It may be said that up to the outbreak of the war the European Powers lived up to the Monroe Doctrine.

If any nation has such designs on our hemisphere, it must be a great naval power, for no other can reach far enough. Great Britain has already a plethora of colonies. No one can foresee what will be her future, but it is pretty certain not to be one of aggression. It is more likely that the United States will wish to persuade her to part with some of her islands in the Caribbean. No one expects the French to come across the sea. They already have all they can attend to with their ventures in Asia and Africa.

The only Power in Europe that does desire expansion is Germany. Is Germany likely at any time to covet American territory? So far as we can judge human nature, so far as we can judge our own nature, it is not unlikely that the Germans may some day wish to act beneficently toward some of the Latin-American countries to the south of us and rescue them from the danger of bankruptcy and dire demoralization, thus rendering those services of civilization which the United States has hitherto performed in absorbing five of them.

Let us hope that the Lord will give us strength to throw a few stones at those who covet territory sufficiently near us to jeopardize the Monroe Doctrine, and heavier stones than they can throw.

Cites the Case of Japan.

Now as to Japan. To the Japanese we say: "You are my brother, a man, a highly-bred man." Nevertheless, high-bred men may have an ambition to expand their power which will be prejudicial to the United States.

The only word that needs to be spoken today is that you cannot have your Monroe Doctrine without paying for it. If we wish to make sure that our security is not invaded by the placing of colonies alongside of us upon the American continents, there is only one way, and that is to put ourselves in such a condition of military, of naval, of commercial and transportation preparedness and, what is more important, in such a condition of governmental efficiency, national, state and municipal, that if any hand reaches across the sea to the shores of America we can say: "Hitherto shalt you come, but no further; and here shall thy proud waves be stayed."

PLUTO CONCENTRATED SPRING WATER

PLUTO

"A saline physic does not disturb the digestion like many vegetable purgatives, such as cascara sagrada and castor oil."

Arthur F. Hurtz, M.D., F.R.C.T. Guy's Hospital, London.

Don't underestimate the dangers of constipation. Prof. Metchnikoff has pronounced the poisons generated in the intestines as the chief causes of the majority of human ills.

In cases of chronic constipation where a physic is required, Pluto Water acts gently, pleasantly and certainly. The bowels are flushed clean of all their disease-producing contents and healthy activity is promoted.

Pluto Water, America's Physic, is bottled at French Lick Springs and for sale at your druggist, clubs, cafes, hotels and on trains. Remember there is only one Pluto Water. Look for the little red devil on every bottle—it is there for your protection.

'KING SOLOMON,' HEALER, DIES

Former Associate With Dowie in Australia Led Religious Sect.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—James William Wood, a self-styled "King Solomon," who, a quarter of a century ago, headed the religious sect known as "The Army of the Lord," died today, at the age of 85. During the early 80's Wood was a revivalist in Australia, associated with "Prophet" Dowie in the trusteeship of a Baptist chapel, but later he came to England and engaged in faith healing. Being of striking figure, of patriarchal appearance, with leonine face and white beard, he deeply impressed those with whom he came in contact, even people of wealth and position. He acquired a building at Brighton, which he called "The Sanctuary of Jehovah," and, presiding there as "King Solomon," he established his sect, "The Army of the Lord."

Many enthusiasts sold all their possessions in order to go to live within the circle of his influence. Wood donned robes of purple and gold and sat on a throne, while his followers, men, women and children, danced before him in a central space until they fell exhausted at his feet. This and other sorts of emotional extravagance, however, became so repulsive to outsiders that riots occurred and Wood and his sect were finally forced into obscurity.

IRISH SOCIETIES WILL RETURN TO WINE AT BANQUET

First Annual Feast of Friendly Sons of St. Patrick to Be Held at the Buckingham Friday.

The first banquet of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, the recent amalgamation of several St. Louis Irish societies, at the Buckingham Hotel, next Friday evening, will be christened with the sparkling wine of the grape, thereby marking the return to a custom in vogue at these festal occasions for many years.

The custom was discontinued when the Sons of Erin combined with the Irish-American Society, which entertained women guests at its banquets This was several years ago. Recently the united organization de-hyphenated itself by uniting with the Knights of St. Patrick, whose banquets also were wont to bubble not alone with wit and oratory .

The amalgamated organization will honor the Irish patron saint for the first time next Friday. The anniversary falling on Friday this year, the banqueters will eschew meat and substitute fish. There will be no women guests.

The speakers and their assigned toasts follow: The Rev. John A. McClory, S. J., of St. Louis University, "The Glories of Ireland and the Character of St. Patrick;" Daniel G. Taylor, "The United States;" W. D. Vandiver, "Imperial Missouri;" Mayor Henry W. Kiel, "Our City." Interspersing the program of oratory will be stories by Jack Ryan and Irish music, vocal and instrumental.

Dr. William P. Glennon, brother of the Archbishop, is president of the new society; Gerald B. O'Reilly, treasurer; R. T. Conroy, secretary, and the Rev. Francis J. Gilfillan, pastor of the New Cathedral, chaplain. The committee in charge of the banquet includes these officers and John S. Leahy, A. B. Murphy, Frank P. Furlong, Dr. John McH. Dean, Edward Devoy, John J. Dowling, Charles G. Mulligan, Walter F. Burke, Jeremiah Sheehan, John J. O'Connor, C. M. McDonald, Thomas F. Bowdern and M. J. Mulvihill.

PLANS BEGUN FOR CELEBRATION OF STATE CENTENNIAL IN 1920

Historical Society Members Meet and Decide to Appoint Preliminary Committee to Further Move.

R. M. White of Mexico, Mo., president of the Missouri Historical Society; Floyd C. Shoemaker, secretary; Walter Williams, Columbia; Burd B. Wright, Kansas City; Prof. Isadore Loeb, Columiba; J. L. Torrey, Fruitville, and Walter B. Stevens, St. Louis, constituting a committee of the Missouri Historical Society, met at the Planters yesterday and took up arrangements for the celebration of the centennial of the State of Missouri.

A resolution was adopted providing that a committee be appointed to be known as the Missouri State Centennial Committee of One Thousand, to be composed of five representatives of each of the Counties and the City of St. Louis and members from the State at large, representing the vocations, industries and institutions of the people of the State.

All of the arrangements for the celebration will be made by this committee, which will meet at Kansas City in the fall. The first step will be to get the celebration before the legislature with a view to having the Governor issue a proclamation for the observance.

The celebration will be in 1920. It will probably take the form of pageants and home-comings in the different counties and in St. Louis, in preference to a great central event.

ENGLISH GOVERNMENT WON'T LET 10,000 IRISH POLICE ENLIST

DUBLIN, March 11.—There is much irritation in Ireland over the action of the Government in refusing to the members of the Royal Irish Constabulary facilities to enlist. There are 10,000 of these policemen in Ireland. They are men of splendid physique and enough of them to form two battalions. Dublin Castle, which controls them, offers no objection. It is the Treasury which stands in the way. The policemen, if they enlisted, would be exchanging 25 shillings a week for a shilling a day. The Treasury, which has met this difficulty in the case of other public servants, and the Government, which has urged on private employers the duty of setting their men free for the army by guaranteeing them all or part of their wages, will not, in the case of the Irish police, follow their own example and precept. There is thus a deadlock. John Redmond, in the presence of the Lord Lieutenant and Chief Secretary, at a public meeting, has condemned this action of the Treasury. It is a serious hindrance to recruiting in Ireland, since it is difficult to persuade people in the country districts of the urgency of the need for men when they see the police kept back, though at the present they have very little to do.

DECORATIONS FOR DEMOCRATS

B. M. L. Wants Flower Boxes on Windows When Convention Meets.

A special committee of the Business Men's League, of which John B. Denvir Jr. is chairman, is sending circular letters to all the business firms between Fourth and Twelfth streets and Chestnut street and Washington avenue, asking them to co-operate in the movement for the beautification of the downtown section before the Democratic national convention in June, by having flower boxes placed at the windows and shrubs on the floors of their places of business.

Some firms have already notified that committee of intended compliance with the request, and it is expected that the response will be general.

WOMAN WHO PREFERS JOURNALISM TO OFFICE

MISS ANNA E. NOLEN.

MISSOURI WOMAN WHO BOUGHT PAPER QUITS RACE FOR OFFICE

MONROE CITY, Mo., March 11.—Miss Anne E. Nolen, who recently purchased and assumed personal charge of the Monroe City Semi-Weekly News, has withdrawn as a candidate for City Collector, for which office she had previously announced. In a notice in the current issue of her paper she gives her new duties as the reason for her withdrawal. The notice reads:

As I am now in charge of the Semi-Weekly News, I shall withdraw from the race for City Collector, having decided that it will be necessary to devote my undivided attention to my new business. Respectfully, ANNA E. NOLEN.

Miss Nolen, who is 26 years old, had been society editor and a reporter on the News for seven years. In an interview with a Post-Dispatch reporter after she bought the paper, she said the News would continue to be Democratic in politics, but that its main object would be to work for the advancement of her town and community.

COCOANUT OIL FINE FOR WASHING HAIR

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.—ADV.

WAR HAS ADDED TO FREAK FOODS ON WORLD'S MENU

Potato Flour Bread and Artificial Protein Join Soup Cubes and Pudding Powder.

WASHINGTON, March 11. — War stringencies have called forth a number of unusual foods, among them a bread made largely of potato flour, artificial protein cakes, green bone meal preparations, together with innumerable foods manufactured in the laboratory in tabloid form. So soup cubes, pudding powders, meat essences and vegetable extracts—always more or less prominent in the kitchen of the European housewife—have, according to reports from the belligerent countries, received a tremendous stimulus through the war.

War may create scarcity of the articles on a community's accepted menu and, yet, there may be plenty of food about for those who eat it. For example, there may be an abundance of snails and grasshoppers on hand, while a people, thoughtless of these delicacies, starve for meat. Showing somewhat of the range of foodstuffs, when we consider the world by and large, a bulletin just given out by the National Geographic Society at Washington enumerates a few of the freak foods in other countries. It reads:

"There is no accounting for the freaks of human appetites. The Roosevelt story of how he got the best work out of the men with sharp-filed teeth by promising them the choicest bits of raw hippopotamus and rhinoceros steak for speed in skinning will be recalled by many who read the articles in the magazines at the time of his African expedition.

"Capt. Robert H. Bartlett, Commander of the Karluk, which carried Stefanson to Arctic waters, says that, on his return from Herald Island to northern Siberia, he found raw polar bear meat tasting better than any piece de resistance he had ever eaten in the home country.

Frenchman Likes Snails.

"The Frenchman likes his snails and wonders how anyone who accepts oysters can refuse them.

"In Canton, China, rats sell for 50 cents a dozen, and a dog steak brings more per pound than a leg of mutton.

"The Chinese mandarin pays $30 a pound for birds' nests from which his soup is concocted.

"In parts of the West Indies the palm worm is stewed in fat.

"Certain African tribes are as fond of caterpillars as an American is of reed birds on toast.

"The Turks are as disgusted with oysters as we are with the fish the Corsican relishes.

"Eating earth, or geophagy, is a common thing in many parts of the world. In some parts of Europe a butter is made of fine clay, and in other regions various kinds of earth are sold in the open market. The Persians use some varieties of soil in making their sweetmeats.

"In Mexico the eggs of certain species of flies are used by the Indians in making food paste, which is regarded as a great delicacy.

Like Decomposed Fish.

"Some of the Arctic tribes allow their fish to decompose, when it becomes to them the same savory delicacy that limburger or harzer cheese is to us, while, in point of true fragrance, the palm remains to the fish.

"The Arabs, and many other of the near-Eastern peoples, prepare their bread in sheets almost as thin as tissue paper and find these crisp, tasteless things pleasing.

"In Central America, where creeping things are regarded as clean and reasonable, the lizard, the Iguana, forms a choice article of food.

"Among the tribes of Southern Russia mares' milk, soured into acrid, strong-tasting beverage, constitutes the chief article of diet, and the Westerner, who at first finds it nauseating, comes to form a strong attachment for this drink.

"In Syria, Mesopotamia and in Palestine the locust now and again graces the table in a roasted condition, and those who have eaten him pronounce his meat full of the most acceptable flavor."

GERMAN INTRIGUE TO ESTRANGE JAPAN AND U. S. ALLEGED

Mikado's Foreign Minister Tells America's Friends Friendship of Two Countries Will Increase.

TOKIO, March 11.—It is the belief of the Japanese Foreign Minister, Baron Ishii, that "a certain European Power" in the past has endeavored to create differences between Japan and the United States to further its own ends.

This opinion was expressed by the Foreign Minister in a statement before the Association of America's Friends. He gave it as his belief that the efforts of this European Power were exerted for the purpose of serving its own aspirations for dominance. As this Power is now occupied with its own troubles, the Baron said, the source of intrigue has been removed.

Relations between Japan and America have never been so good as today, he continued, and their friendship will become even more cordial, as should be the case.

The semi-official newspapers point out that there is no reason at present why Japan should emphasize the excellent relations with America, but they assert that there has been German intrigue for the purpose of affecting Japan's relations with both America and Great Britain and that it is necessary to call attention to it.

$450,000 From Postoffice Workers.

LONDON, March 11.—The voluntary contributions of postoffice workers throughout the country are bringing in an income of $450,000 a year to be devoted to the aid of the 50,000 postal servants now serving with the colors and their dependants.

The Post-Dispatch is the only evening newspaper in St. Louis that receives or publishes news gathered by the Associated Press.

ANNA CASE

The Miracle Girl

IN New York there are two phrases always used in conjunction in describing Anna Case: "A wonderful voice and a raving beauty." She is of surpassing physical charm—and she has a voice—such a voice, fresh and silvery; a soft caress, and yet youth's virileness in every note.

Hear Anna Case

on concert tour or at the Metropolitan in New York. Miss no chance to hear this miraculously endowed American girl. The story of her life reads like a romance. She is the miracle girl of music.

It was Anna Case who first sang in comparison with Edison's Re-Creation of her voice to test his new art—to determine whether the Wizard had in fact achieved his ambition to Re-Create the human voice so perfectly that a singer's performance could not be distinguished from his record of it. Anna Case was the first to prove this to the world. Today over one hundred thousand of the most critical and cultured music lovers in America have heard similar tests. The musical critics of more than one hundred of the leading newspapers in this country have confessed that their trained ears cannot distinguish, by actual and direct comparison, an artist's performance from Edison's Re-Creation of it. Booklet of critiques will be furnished on application.

Men's Rewards and Penalties Are Automatic

Over-Activity Results in Lowered Vitality.

Cadomene Tablets (3 grain) are true constructors of cell and tissue. They give fresh stimulus to the appetite and wonderfully aid digestion of daily food, carrying new vigor and strength to the nervous system, upbuilding the blood and generally revitalizing the whole organism. We need Cadomene Tablets during times of heavy mental and nervous strain and physical deficiencies as a natural and healthful means of adding to the fuel of the nerves and so preventing possible breakdown.

Cadomene Tablets do not contain anything foreign to the system. They are simply and solely a natural healthful product, intimately combining the most important ingredients for the blood, cells and tissues. The system easily and promptly takes hold of these ingredients and they are brought to benefit, to build, renew and rejuvenate every part of the body with new life and strength and cause proper natural functioning of the various organisms.—ADVERTISEMENT.

The Importance of Healthy Kidneys

In the removal of waste material from the body, the kidneys are called upon to perform a very important duty. The failure of these marvelous and delicately constructed organs to properly do their work means retention in the system of poisonous matter. This poisons the system, and if permitted to remain results in severe backache, headache, torpid liver, constipation, and eventually Bright's disease.

About 40 years ago Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy, a combination of herbs and other healthful ingredients was discovered; its value in strengthening the kidneys and liver was at once appreciated. And today it stands as one of the standard remedies in the treatment of diseases of the kidneys and liver. Many persons suffer from diseases of the kidneys unknowingly. The use of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy will invariably improve your health, and make you feel that life is really worth living.

It is sold by all druggists in 50c and $1.00 sizes. A sample free if you write. Warner's Safe Remedies Co., Dept. 245, Rochester, N. Y.

CATARRH TRUTH

Told in a Simple Way

No Apparatus, Inhalers, Salves, Lotions, Harmful Drugs, Smoke or Electricity

Heals Day and Night

It is a new way. It is something absolutely different. No lotions, sprays or sickly smelling salves or creams. No atomizer, or any apparatus of any kind. Nothing to smoke or inhale. No steaming or rubbing or injections. No electricity or vibration or massage. No powder; no plasters; no keeping in the house. Nothing of that kind at all. Something new and different, something delightful and healthful, something instantly successful. You do not have to wait and linger and pay out a lot of money. You can stop it over night—and I will gladly tell you how—FREE. I am not a doctor, and this is not a so-called doctor's prescription—but I am cured and my friends are cured, and you can be cured. Your suffering will stop at once like magic.

I Am Free—You Can Be Free

My catarrh was filthy and loathsome. It made me ill. It dulled my mind. It undermined my health and was weakening my will. The hawking, coughing, spitting made me obnoxious to all, and my foul breath and disgusting habits made even my loved ones avoid me secretly. My delight in life was dulled and my faculties impaired. I knew that in time it would bring me to an untimely grave, because every moment of the day and night it was slowly yet surely sapping my vitality.

But I found a cure, and I am ready to tell you about it FREE. Write me promptly.

RISK JUST ONE CENT

Send no money. Just your name and address on a postal card. Say: "Dear Sam Katz: Please tell me how you cured your catarrh and how I can cure mine." That's all you need to say. I will understand, and I will write to you with complete information, FREE, at once. Do not delay. Send postal card or write me a letter today. Don't think of turning this page until you have asked for this wonderful treatment that can do for you what it has done for me.

ALL-WOMAN CAST TO PRESENT PLAY "AS YOU LIKE IT"

Men to Have No Part Except to Direct Performance for Christian Hospital Benefit.

Twenty-six young women, of whom 17 are to impersonate men's roles, will produce "As You Like It" at the Victoria Theater next Friday night for the benefit of the Christian Hospital, 3540 North Grand Avenue. The proceeds will go to the hospital's free dispensary and charity ward fund.

No men will take part in the performance, except to direct it. The preparations and rehearsals are being conducted by Harry R. McClain, formerly a Shakspearean actor. Frederick Fisher, director of the Pageant Choral Society, will have charge of the music. "As You Like It" abounds in beautiful incidental music, both instrumental and choral.

The leading role of Rosalind will be interpreted by Miss Lela Courson. Miss Ruth Kelso will appear as Jacques and Mrs. Esther Sudholt Meyers as Touchstone.

Others in the cast will be Misses Eva Hain, Myra Lynch, Hazel Schultze, Nellie Peters, Mildred Kirsch, Mary Albert, Blanch Kaminer, Lenora Link, Mabelle H. McKee, Velma Scott, Grace Hamilton, Norma Nees, Mary Agnes O'Neil, Amy M. Schrock, Florence Thias, Katherine Snodgrass and Blanche McGregor and Mmes. Madeline Anderson Mattingly, Hazel Barre and Frank P. McClure.

Many prominent St. Louis women are on the list of patronesses, who are working hard to insure the success of the performance. The Christian Hospital has the only free clinic in the northern part of the city.

ELMAN AT THE ODEON, MARCH 30

Russian Violinists's Program Will Include Several Old Favorites.

Mischa Elman, famous Russian violinist, will give a recital at the Odeon on March 30. Elman accepted no engagements last season, taking what his managers called "a $100,000 vacation." He brought his father, mother and three sisters over from Europe, and, with his wife and children, lived at a New York hotel. His St. Louis program will include several new compositions, as well as old favorites. It follows:

I.
Concerto, G minor	Vivalcl
Allegro, Adagio, Allegro.
II.
Concerto, F sharp minor, Op. 23	Ernst

Italians Use Paper Rolls as Fuel.

MILAN, March 11.—The Italians fighting above the snowline find wood so scarce that boy scouts are visiting every house, collecting wastepaper for fuel. The sheets are spread flat and fed into a machine which rolls them tightly into a roll of about an inch in diameter. These rolls can be dropped into a knapsack and when fire is wanted three or four of the paper rolls suffice.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 11.—A new trial was denied to C. Victor Brown and Henry Spellman, negroes, convicted of murdering Dr. C. Franklin Mohr, on Aug. 31, by Judge Stearns in the Superior Court today. It is expected an appeal will be taken to the Supreme Court.

CARNIVAL FOR BENEFIT OF THE CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL

Will Be Given at Dreamland Next Saturday Afternoon; Program of Special Dances.

A carnival will be given at Dreamland next Saturday from 3 to 6 o'clock, for the benefit of the St. Louis Children's Hospital. The program will include Grecian dances by Virginia Betts, Alice Clifford and Florence Hemsley, a toe dance by Helene Higgins, a figure dance by Margaret Eakin, the "Huffer" and "Mussett" dances by Kathleen Wheeler, an early English country dance by eight little girls, and a Greek interpretative solo dance by Miss Mergaret Houser.

Following the figure dancing, there will be a grand march. It is expected that 2000 children will be in line. Then there will be general dancing, culminating in a serpentine and confetti carnival.

The committee in charge is composed of Mrs. Frank Clifford, Mrs. Wade Hampton Bush, Mrs. Lee Cox, Miss Laura Decker and Miss Donella Sutton.

The same committee will raise a fund for educating crippled children of St. Louis. A request has been sent to President Wilson for a small donation to use as a nucleus for the educational fund.

MAN GETS 4400 VOLTS, BODY FALLS, DIES IN HOSPITAL

Efforts of Companions to Rescue County Lineman Fail—Was Soon to Marry.

Hubert F. McPherson, 23 years old, a lineman for the Electric Co. of Missouri, was killed yesterday when he was working on a pole at Page avenue and Hanley road, St. Louis County. His hand came into contact with a wire carrying 4400 volts of Keokuk dam power.

McPherson was to have been married next month to Miss Vinita Blackwell of 4517A Ashland avenue.

With other linemen, he was removing a cable from a line of poles on Page avenue. When he was on a pole, 25 feet above the ground, he grasped the wire.

Gets Full Voltage.

One of his feet rested on an iron angle brace on the pole. He received the full force of the voltage.

His companions on the ground saw that he was held to the wire by the current. Carrying out a system of rescue used in such cases, they threw up a long rope over a wire, drawing it down until the ends were even.

While men held one end, another threw up the other end of the rope with such force that it wrapped about his legs, the purpose being to draw him from the wire and leave him suspended until he could be rescued.

Body Falls to Ground.

In an unexplained manner the rescue plan did not work and McPherson fell to the ground, striking on his shoulders. He was alive when picked up, but unconscious. He was taken to the Missouri Baptist Sanitarium, where he died a few minutes after his arrival.

Physicians said that he was killed by the electric voltage, but that he suffered internal injuries in the fall which otherwise might later have caused his death.

MAKE YOUR OWN LIQUORS AT HOME

Anyone Can Now Make Their Own Liquors at Home and Save Money.

A well-known distiller of Cincinnati, O., has just produced a Concentrated Extract, with which anyone can now make right at home any Whiskey, Liquor or Cordial, at a saving of over fifty per cent of the liquor dealers' prices. It's very simple and easy. A few minutes does the work, requiring no apparatus, no boiling, no experience whatsoever. It is said that the liquors are far superior to those that can be purchased at most liquor stores, and as a result of this discovery thousands of people all over the country are already making their own liquors at home. The legality of his method has been carefully investigated by the highest authorities and found to comply with the laws in every respect. No one now need be without their favorite liquor, as it can be made right at home or anywhere else, in a jiffy just when wanted. The news of this amazing discovery has startled the country and he has already received thousands of letters of praise. Anyone can try a quart of his favorite liquor free by writing to M. W. Prickett, 2171 Universay Bldg., Cincinnati, O., and asking for his interesting booklet "Secrets of Making Liquors at Home," which he will send free to anyone sending their name and address.—ADV.

ST. LOUIS MAN ACCUSED OF MURDER AT QUEBEC, CANADA

While Member of Dominion Battalion, Is Charged With Killing Confectioner in Store.

QUEBEC, March 11.—James Kane, son of Mrs. J. L. Kane, 3920 Maffitt avenue, St. Louis, a member of the Thirty-third Dominion Battalion, was arraigned in the Court of Sessions here today on the charge of murdering George Pergantes, proprietor of an ice cream parlor in this city, on last New Year's morning. He was committed to stand trial before the Court of King's Bench at a sitting in April.

Kane enlisted last fall at London, Ont. He is 25 years old. He entered Pergantes' shop at 1 a. m., Jan. 1, and after buying a glass of grape juice, it is alleged, he drew two revolvers, shouted "hands up!" and fired three shots at Pergantes, who died three hours later. The crime was traced to him by a belt he dropped, on which was lettered the name "Oliver." It was found that Kane and another soldier named Oliver had exchanged belts.

MOTHER! LOOK AT YOUR CHILD'S TONGUE

Give "California Syrup of Figs" If Cross, Feverish, Sick, Bilious, Constipated—They love it

Watch Children! Guard Against Colds, Grippe, Sore Throat and Sickness by Keeping Liver and Bowels Free from Poisons

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to consider their own health, consequently their bowels become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has the grippe or a sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is ofttimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. See that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Don't merely ask for Syrup of Figs, but ask for "California Syrup of Figs." Remember, "California."—ADV.

Careful St. Joseph Mothers Treat Children's Colds Externally

They Say Internal Dosing Harms Delicate Little Stomachs—"Outside" Applications Better.

Careful mothers everywhere realize that internal medicines are injurious to the delicate stomachs of the little folks. Still croup and cold troubles must have some form of treatment. The answer to this problem is the Southern "external" treatment Vap-O-Rub. This was introduced in St. Jo, Mo., for the first time last winter, and a number of ladies were presented with complimentary jars by their druggists on condition that they give Vap-O-Rub a thorough test. Here are the reports from several of these ladies:

Mrs. Sam House, 1206 Prospect Av., writes: "My little daughter had diphtheria last fall, and now every little cold she takes settles in her throat. We have thought twice she was going to have diphtheria again, but during one of her bad spells my druggist sent me a jar of Vap-O-Rub. I used it for four nights on her throat with such good results that now I don't like to be without it. I have used it on myself and my husband for bad colds and have found it just fine."

Mrs. John Paynter, 2432 S. 17th St., writes: "My druggist sent me a trial jar of Vap-O-Rub, which I soon had occasion to try on my 'croupy' Baby. Before putting her to sleep for the night, I applied the salve over her chest and throat with my fingers. The results proved very satisfactory, and now I would not be without it."

Mrs. M. A. Myers, 2943 Sylvanie Av., says: "When our three-year-old boy had a severe cold, about a month ago, I tried a jar of Vap-O-Rub. I rubbed it on his chest and let him inhale it, and he was relieved almost immediately, and got better in a few days. I think your remedy is the best thing for colds we have ever used."

Vick's Vap-O-Rub comes in salve form, and when applied to the heat of the body the ingredients are vaporized by the body warmth. These vapors, inhaled all night long, carry the medication with each breath through the air passages, to the lungs. Vick's will be found better than internal medicine for all forms of cold troubles—from head colds, catarrh and asthmatic troubles—down to deep chest colds, bronchitis, sore throat or incipient pneumonia. Three sizes—25c, 50c and $1.00.

SEARCH IS MADE FOR CASH BOOK OF BEVERLY STEVENS

Volume Was in Custody of Max Israel, County Prosecutor's Clerk, Who Disappeared.

A search is being made for the cash book kept by Beverly C. Stevens, former real estate operator of Clayton, who is under a penitentiary sentence for deed of trust frauds.

The book was in the custody of Max Israel, who departed from Clayton hurriedly Feb. 14 last, after resigning as clerk to Prosecuting Attorney Ralph. Since Israel's unexplained disappearance the book has been missing.

Attorneys A. B. Chandler and E. W. Mills, who represent plaintiffs in several civil suits brought by former clients of Stevens, made a demand for the book at the Prosecuting Attorney's office yesterday. They were told it could not be found.

The book contains a record of moneys received by Stevens from his clients in payment of principal and interest on deeds of trust. It has been used by plaintiffs in several civil suits against him.

Lawyers say the book would be of great value in showing that Stevens received interest payments on deeds of trust which it was alleged in his criminal prosecution he diverted to his own use.

It was at first thought the book was being used by some attorney who had a suit against Stevens, but a canvass of all these attorneys showed this was not the case.

Prosecuting Attorney Ralph yesterday said the book would not be essential in prosecuting criminal cases still pending against Stevens.

COMBING WON'T RID HAIR OF DANDRUFF

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.—ADV.

TO SAVE EYES

Is the Object of This Free Prescription—Try It if Your Eyes Give You Trouble.

Thousands of people suffer all the time with their eyes simply because they don't know what to do. They know a home remedy for every other ill, but none for their eyes. They abuse their eyes and neglect them, the trouble being too slight to drive them to an eye specialist, who would, anyway, charge more than they could afford to pay. Finally they may go to an optician or some cheap store, and often get glasses they do not need or which after being worn two or three months do their eyes more harm than good.

Here is a simple prescription for such cases: 5 grains optona dissolved in 2 ounces of water, use three or four times a day to bathe the eyes. This makes a healing, cooling, soothing lotion that should be used daily to cleanse, strengthen and preserve the eyes. It sharpens the vision and quickly overcomes inflammation and irritation. Weak, watery, overworked, tired eyes are greatly benefited by its use.

Many reports show that wearers of glasses have discarded them after a few weeks' use. It is good for the eyes and contains no ingredient which can injure the most sensitive eyes of infant or aged. Any druggist can fill this prescription; any physician who knows the formula will tell you it is absolutely harmless.—ADV.

200 TO SING VERDI'S REQUIEM

Symphony Orchestra Will Accompany Pageant Choral Society.

The Pageant Choral Society of 200 mixed voices, assisted by the entire Symphony Orchestra, will present Verdi's "Requiem" Tuesday night at the Odeon, in honor of the dead in the European war.

An unusually attractive quartet of principals has been engaged—Mrs. Marjorie Dodge Warner of Chicago, soprano; Mrs. E. George Payne, St. Louis, mezzo-soprano; Albert Lindquest, tenor, New York, and Charles E. Galagher, basso, Cincinnati. Frederick Fischer will conduct.

To Pick Jewish Orphan Home Site.

There will be a mass meeting at the Shaare S'fard Church, Fifteenth and Wash streets, this afternoon, to determine where they shall erect a home for the Jewish Orphan Society. The society has raised $5000, which will be used for the orphan home.

HOW I LEARNED MUSIC AT HOME

Couldn't Read a Note, But Now Plays Two Instruments

Anyone Can Learn by Note at Home, Free.

Mr. W. S. Whitman of Washington, D. C., writes this interesting letter: "When I took my first lesson I did not know the first thing about music. I found your method not only easy and perfect, but interesting, and the interest increasing with each lesson. No dry, hard exercises, but easy, interesting music. I have studied two instruments with you and have sent friends to you, and in every case the lessons have been of the most satisfactory character."

200,000 Others Have Learned

The letter from Mr. Whitman is only one out of thousands received. They prove that teaching music successfully by the home study method is a positive proved fact. Thousands who never knew one note from another before taking our lessons have developed into expert musicians—many have themselves become teachers and earn their living instructing others.

You, too, can learn to play by note—Piano, Organ, Violin, Guitar, Banjo, Mandolin, Cornet, Harp, Cello or to sing. Under our Special Limited Offer of free weekly lessons, you pay only for music and postage, which is small. No extras. Beginners or advanced pupils. Everything illustrated, plain, simple, systematic. Free lectures each course. Sixteen years' success. Write for Free Booklet today. Now!

GERMANY SEES NO REASON TO DISCUSS DEFENSIVE ARMS

Secretary of Foreign Affairs Tells Post-Dispatch Man No Armament Can Be Used Defensively and Not Offensively.

Von Jagow Says Germany Is Not Attempting to Change International Law in Ship Issue With U. S.

Declares British Admissions That Merchantmen Are Instructed to Fire on Sight Are Conclusive.

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and the New York World.
(Copyright, 1916, by Press Pub. Co.)

BERLIN, March 10.—(By wireless to Sayville, N. Y., March 11.)—On the ground that so-called "defensive armament" on merchant ships lies not on the caliber of its guns but in the extent and purpose and use of such armament, the German Government cannot see its way clear to discuss with Secretary of State Lansing what he may consider legitimate defensive armament.

Berlin's contention is that there is no such armament as can only be used defensively and not offensively.

The German Government seems disposed to stick to its standpoint that under modern conditions there can be no legal defensive act on the part of a peaceful merchant ship against an attempt to search it to ascertain its character by a recognized warship, legality of which attempt is recognized by international law. Germany is not endeavoring to change international law, but is merely calling attention to the fact that time and conditions already have brought about such a change, and now that the situation is presented for the first time, asks for a decision on such change in accordance with the principles that rule equity and justice in every country.

These are some of the impressions I gathered today in a talk with Herr von Jagow, German Secretary for Foreign Affairs.

Basis for Contentions.

"The best evidence in law is admission," declared Her von Jagow. "We have proof of the highest kind; namely, admissions made by the other side, to the effect that British armed merchantmen do fire at sight on German submarines which may approach near enough for the legitimate purposes of ascertaining the nationality and character of a ship or, as the Government of the United States insists, to stop and search it.

"The London Times of Feb. 10, in arguing for heavier guns for merchant ships, confirms the offensive character of the secret instructions from the British Admiralty to British merchantmen to act offensively and gives several cases of such offensive tactics. The Times says the P. & O. steamer Casgar, when off Malta on its way to India, saw a submarine's periscope and fired at it, obliging the boat to dive. It reappeared on the opposite side of the liner and was again fired at, if not hit. When the submarine dived it was seen no more.

"A second instance was that of the French ship Plata, which on Jan. 27, sighted a submarine half a mile away. Fire was opened from the stern of the steamer and the hostile craft, believed to have been struck in a vital part, soon dived and made off. The Clan MacTavish, though it did not meet with success, points to the readiness with which merchant seamen can attack when threatened."

Herr von Jagow was asked whether these instances could in any possible way be construed as "defense."

"How does this conform to the specific declaration and promises made to Secretary Lansing by Ambassador Spring-Rice on Aug. 25, 1914?" said Herr von Jagow, "that the arming of British merchantmen is solely a precautionary measure adopted for the purpose of defense against attack by hostile craft, and his assurances that British merchant vessel will never be used for purposes of attack."

Herr von Jagow seemed to think that if the American Government closed its eyes to obvious deliberate violations of the promise made by the British Government, Washington must be consistent and not object to Germany taking counter measures.

"There seems to be some misunderstanding of my views expressed to you recently," said the Foreign Secretary. "We are not seeking to change any rule of international law in this particular during the war. The necessity for a new decision, however, of international law has arisen, and arisen only since the commencement of the war.

Question Never Arose.

"During a long period after the Paris declaration of 1856, when privateers were abolished, the question of arming merchant ships never arose because it never became acute, just as

ROOSEVELT'S WEST INDIA TRIP A GASTRONOMICAL TRIUMPH

Colonel, After Eating and Eating, Tells Friends Aboard Ship That He Is Tiring of Publicity.

NEW YORK, March 11.—The voyage of Col. Roosevelt through the West Indies was a gastronomical triumph, according to 40 passengers on the steamship Guiana, which arrived in New York today. It fell to their lot to be with the Colonel when he smashed the banquet records of the tropics. The outburst of entertainment and feasting began at Point au Pitre, Guadelupe. The French authorities, upon the arrival of the Colonel, declared a public holiday and set loose a series of fetes.

But it was at the Island of Martinique that the supreme height of hospitality was reached. The French officials had planned wonderful entertainments in the way of dinners. They cabled to France for instructions and were told to go the limit. At St. Thomas, in the Danish West Indies, the Colonel attended a fancy dress ball. He wore his pongee shirt. At St. Croix a public holiday was declared and there was more feasting.

Col. Roosevelt told several of the passengers he was tiring of publicity.

THIEVES ARE STEALING EVEN GASOLINE OUT OF AUTO TANKS

Ten Gallons, Valued at $2.15 Extracted From Machine Left Standing Near Odeon.

Gasoline has taken its place alongside the pearl necklace and the diamond stud as a temptation to thieves in St. Louis. They are stealing it out of the tanks of automobiles which are left standing in the street. At the price at which it is selling it has become desirable loot.

Joseph M. O'Reilly, real estate dealer at 723 Chestnut street, was the first to make formal complaint as to this new kind of theft. Attention was called to it in the Police Journal yesterday.

O'Reilly went to the Symphony concert at the Odeon a week ago last night, leaving his automobile at the curb near Grand and Finney avenues. After the concert he started home in the machine, but had gone only a block when the engine went dead. Investigation showed the gasoline tank was empty, though it had contained 10 gallons of gasoline, valued at $2.15, when he left home.

TEN MEXICAN GENERALS WITH 100 MEN CAPTURE A GERMAN

They Obtain Ransom of 10,000 Pesos but Are Pursued by Troops of Carranza.

TORREON, Mexico, March 11.—Ten Mexican Generals in command of only 100 men recently raided San Juan Guadalupe in Zacatecas and captured a German named Weiner, whom they held for ransom at 10,000 pesos. His compatriots here raised the money and he was released.

As soon as Weiner was freed, Gen. Gonzales, in command of the Carranza troops, sent a brigade under Gen. Ellzono in pursuit. Three Villa men were killed in a running fight. All trains arriving here are protected by military escorts.

ASYLUM WARD RAISES PEANUTS

They Are of Such Good Quality They Bring 10 Cents a Pound.

Three bushels of peanuts, raised last summer by Lewis Miller, a ward of the Illinois State Hospital for the Insane at Alton, are being retailed by the Alton stores at 10 cents a pound. At this rate they will bring $9, a part of which will go to Miller.

Miller formerly was at the State Hospital at Anna, where he developed a desire for growing peanuts. When he was transferred to Alton last spring he insisted on planting his usual peanut patch. He was given a plot of ground and other wards helped him cultivate it. The nuts are of such good quality that there has been a large demand for them and hospital officials said yesterday they would encourage other patients to plant peanuts.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., March 11.—The President and Mrs. Wilson, on a week-end cruise aboard the yacht Mayflower, spent an hour today walking about Newport News. Toward sunset the yacht dropped down to Old Point and anchored for the night.

The Mayflower stopped near the German prize ship Appam, which the President's party viewed with great interest.

The Mayflower's wireless will keep the President in constant touch with the Mexican situation.

ASSESSOR HOPES TO OPEN TAX BOOKS BEFORE MARCH 20

Schramm Declares He Is Handicapped by an Inadequate Clerical Force.

BOARD TO MEET THEN

Appeals by Taxpayers to Be Heard and Personal Property Returns Investigated.

An effort will be made by Assessor Schramm to complete the assessment books sufficiently to open them for public inspection before Monday, March 20, when the Board of Equalization will meet to hear appeals by taxpayers and to investigate personal property returns that are considered too low.

Under the new charter, the Assessor may keep the books closed until the third Monday in March, whereas it was compulsory under the old charter to open the books to the public by the second Monday, thus giving taxpayers a full week in which to determine at what their realty and personal property was assessed.

The Board of Equalization is obliged to end its session by the Saturday of the fourth week after it convenes, and it is possible that in a rush of business many appeals might have to be ignored for lack of time to consider them. If taxpayers could inspect the books before the board session begins, their appeals could be filed early and a greater number could be disposed of.

Clerical Force Inadequate.

When a Post-Dispatch reporter asked Assessor Schramm yesterday why he had advertised that the books would not be open until March 20, the assessor said it was because his clerical force is inadequate to complete the work before that time. For the last three years it has been impossible to complete the books within the time allowed by law, Assessor Schramm said, and it has been necessary, in many instances, for clerks to refer to plat books and other records so as to give desired information to inquiring taxpayers.

The change in the date for opening books was made by the Board of Freeholders without suggestion from him, Assessor Schramm said. He said it was evidently the intention of the freeholders to allow his office the greatest possible time for completing the books when it was stipulated they should be opened "on or before the third Monday in March."

Public Hearing Tomorrow.

A public hearing will be conducted at 8 p. m. tomorrow in the Board of Aldermen chamber, by a special committee appointed Friday in response to a message from Mayor Kiel, to consider the form of a protest to the State Board of Equalization against the low assessment of property in the counties, as compared with the assessment of property in St. Louis.

Announcement of the estimated assessment of real and personal property in the State this year was made last week by the State Board of Equalization and indicates that St. Louis will pay about 37 per cent of the general taxes of the State, although St. Louis' population is only 20 per cent of that of the State. The total assessment for the State is estimated at $1,734,070,331, and the assessment of St. Louis is estimated officially at $642,138,790.

The basis of assessment in St. Louis is 70 per cent of the actual value of real estate, while in some counties it is said to be as low as 10 per cent of the actual value.

CIVIC LEAGUE DRAFTS 2 NEW TAXATION BILLS

Recording Tax on Mortgages and Commission to Study Problems Proposed.

The Civic League, through its Municipal Finance and Taxation Committee, is drafting two measures intended to prevent injustice in the taxation of property in Missouri. These measures, which will be introduced in the Legislature next year, will provide for a recording tax on mortgages similar to that now in force in New York, and for the creation of a tax commission to undertake the scientific study of taxation problems and to equalize the burdens.

The League, however, looks upon the proposal of a tax commission as of greater importance. Dean Isidor Loeb, of the University of Missouri, professor of constitutional law, presented to the League a report showing how a tax commission could be created by statute, and what powers it could exercise.

Power of the State.

"It is of course obvious that the power of equalization cannot be taken away from the State Board of Equalization," said Prof. Loeb, "but this power, as interpreted by the Supreme Court, is of a narow and limited nature. The entire machinery for the assessment of property is left by the Constitution for regulation by the General Assembly. This body has provided by statute for assessment by

50,000 MEN NEEDED TO ROUND UP VILLA, IS ARMY'S OPINION

Officers on Border Believe Task Is Hopeless With Only 5000 Troops.

WILL CARRANZISTAS AID?

This Problem and Likelihood Bandit May Become Hero, Worries U. S. Observers.

By Clair Kenamore.
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBUS, N. M., March 11.—The military expedition to Mexico for the purpose of capturing Villa has little chance of success, according to men of excellent judgment in the border army. It also has a very good chance of being well whipped.

Under certain contingencies 5000 invaders entering Mexico would administer a sound drubbing to the army of 3000 which Villa now has with him, if the Americans could ever find him and force a battle. But if the Americans ever reach him, which is doubtful, he will probably have a much better force than that.

Villa, bandit leader and rebel against the government of Carranza, and Villa, the defender of Mexico against the "gringo" invasion, are likely to be entirely different figures. Villa, it is feared by army men, will recover his great popularity in that role and in all probability men will flock to him. He probably will be able to arm and equip them. He has strong and wonderful methods of doing this. When his needs become great he finds the money. Certain gentlemen of European lineage are under close surveillance by United States secret service men, suspected of supplying these funds.

Have Hammer, but No Anvil.

"Using our expeditionary forces as a hammer, we would be able to crush Villa, if we had the anvil," said an army officer today. "But the shadowy, uncertain Carranza line upon which we must drive him is like a rubber anvil.

"We will be operating in a hostile country. Villa will have the active or passive assistance of almost every citizen. We will be forced to assume that virtually everybody we see is a Villa spy. His information of our movements and force will be accurate, swift and complete. Our information of him, on the other hand, will be very misty."

Villa is presumed to be at Guzman, which is south of this point. There are no railroads there and a column, to take a "hot trail," as Mr. Lansing said, would of necessity go the way that Villa went.

Cavalry could do this, but an imposing train of army wagons and automobile trucks would be necessary to keep it in supplies. Our army will not live off the country as Villa does and the country over which Villa has passed will not be in condition to supply another army soon.

Mexicans Trained and Hardened.

The attitude of the Carranza troops, whatever action the Carranza Government takes, is another question. Few Americans believe that the soldiers will not turn against the invaders.

Americans like to think that their soldiers are worth from two to five Mexicans, but there is unfortunately nothing at hand to support this except our confidence in ourselves.

Mexico has been in a state of war for five years. Her men are trained and hardened soldiers and their immediate "shot" courage is high. They fail in continued stress under trying conditions. The men wounded and captured at Columbus, except one boy, were good, big men, as Mexicans go, well clothed and armed with excellent mausers.

If our force of 5000 men runs across Villa with 7000 or 8000 men and both commanders elect to fight, there will be SOME fighting. The Americans may win and they may not. They may drift back to the border to await reinforcements.

Army officers point out that a force of 5000 or 10,000 men will be woefully inadequate for an operation of the magnitude of this, unless the Carranza Government and army earnestly aid us. Considering the feeling which has been growing for five years, the intense bitterness, racial and otherwise, which exists between Americans and Mexicans, it is almost impossible for our army men to conceive of a Carranza force meeting an American force on the soil of Mexico and rendering assistance.

Necessary to Hold Territory.

Assuming that every Mexican must be treated as an active or passive friend of Villa, it will become necessary under the ordinary and usual custom of war to occupy and hold and absolutely control the territory entered until the object of the expedition is accomplished.

Five thousand cavalry could not do this. That number is barely sufficient to continue the chase. Additional troops must be found to hold the territory entered, keep open the lines of communication with the base and to support the advance.

The most plausible plan, and the one that Villa's strategy probably will try to circumvent is for three columns to enter Mexico. One of these will take the trail of his forces retreating from Columbus. One either side of this movement will be columns designed to cut off his retreat east or west. This leaves the south open. These expeditions to the east and west will have railroad facilities for a part of their journey.

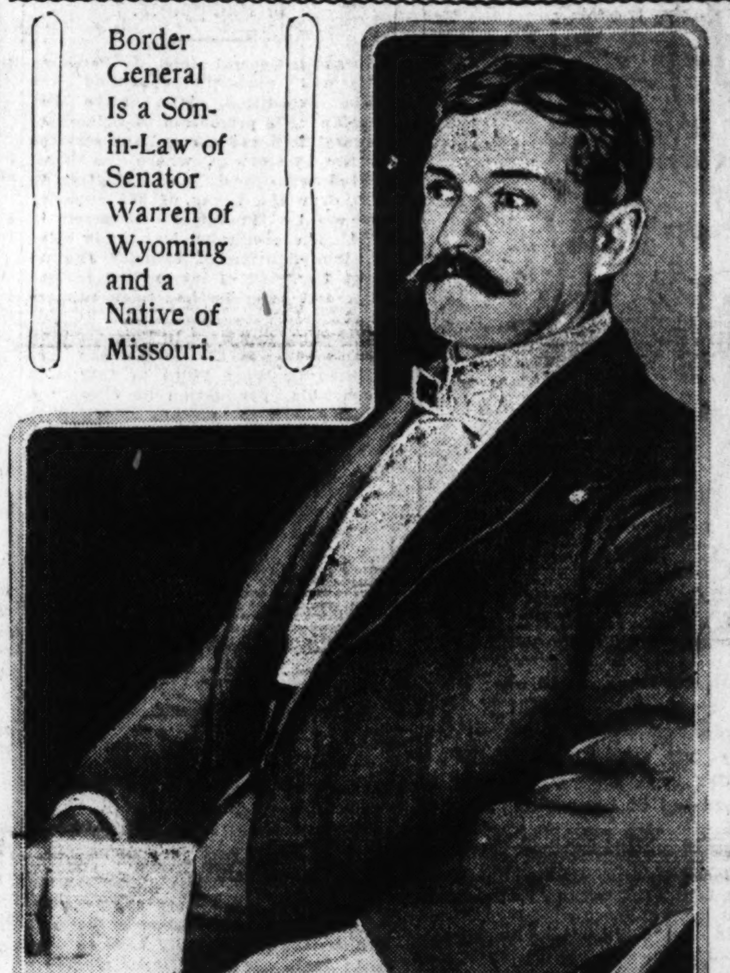
He Will Probably Command U. S Troops in Hunt for Villa



Border General Is a Son-in-Law of Senator Warren of Wyoming and a Native of Missouri.

BRIG. GEN. PERSHING.

CARRANZA REPLY TAKEN AS CONSENT TO U. S. PLANS

His Rrquest for Permission for Troops to Enter This Country Believed to Bo Way of Acquiescing in Hunt for Villa.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—The opinion in official circles here concerning the request of Gen. Carranza that he be allowed to send troops across the American border if necessary in the pursuit of bandits is that it is the First Chief's way of acquiescing to the sending of American troops into Mexico after Villa and his bandit followers.

The receipt of the request, which was dated at Guadalajara, March 10, and transmitted by Consul Silliman, removed the only real concern which the administration has experienced since the decision of the President and his Cabinet to cross the border, the belief being general now that no real objection to the expedition will be interposed by Carranza.

While the diplomatic representatives of the Latin-American countries believe President Wilson's action in sending troops into Mexico will have the indorsement of practically all the American republics, they fear unpleasant complications.

Carranza's View Important.

The consequences of the expedition, and particularly the attitude Carranza assumes will, it is explained, go a long way toward moulding Pan-American opinion. Whether the Latin-American countries view the expedition as "armed intervention" or merely a punitive measure will depend on the position Carranza takes.

The majority of the diplomats have contented themselves with informing their respective governments of the President's action and his scrupulous care not to encroach in any way on the sovereign rights of Mexico.

Domicio da Gama, the Brazilian Ambassador, said today he would not be in a position to comment on the affair until he received advices from Brazil. Senor don Eduardo Suarez Mujica, the Chilian Ambassador, characterized the situation as too delicate to comment on.

Senor Don Ignacio Calderon, the Bolivian minister, expressing his view and that held by several of his conferees, said:

"I think privately that the action taken by President Wilson is a most justifiable act. If the United States locked supinely on while Villa made raid after raid it would lead to absurdity and place the United States in the position of inviting the raids. No country here or in Europe would have its borders crossed again by bandits of the Villa type.

"Villa's acts are an insult to the good name, the good sense and the spirit of sovereignty of all the American republics. So far as I can remember there has never been a similar case in the history of the American Continent. This man Villa, claiming the presidency, turns bandit and marauder. How can it be argued that owing to particular conditions he should go unpunished? I hope he will be captured soon as possible and that there will be no further complications."

Text of the Statement.

The text of Gen. Carranza's request made through Jesus Acura, his secretary for foreign affairs, follows:

"In due reply to your courteous note dated yesterday and transmitted today through Mr. John W. Belt (Silliman's secretary) I have the honor to inform you that having brought the above note to the attention of the First Chief of the Constitutional Army and depository of the executive power of Mexico, he has directed me to say to you, to the end that you may, in turn, transmit it to the Department of State of the American Government that he learned with regret of the lamentable incident which occurred in the town of Columbus, N. M., on account of the assault it suffered yesterday from the bandits led by Francisco Villa.

Force Sent After Villa.

"That although there has been competent forces in the State of Chihuahua to re-establish order and afford protection to nationals and foreigners ever since Francisco Villa appeared in the mountains of the above State, at the request of the Governor of the State and of the Constitutionalist Consul at El Paso, Tex., the first chief ordered the timely departure of 2500 men, commanded by Gen. Luis Gutierrez, with instructions actively to pursue the bandits who had just crossed the line into American territory, which they undoubtedly did, compelled by the tenacious pursuit of the above mentioned forces.

"The above lamentable incident is similar to the incursions which were made in the states of Sonora and Chihuahua by Indians from the reservations of the Government of the United States. Incursions into the State of Sonora occurred more or less about the year 1800, when Geronimo, the Indian chief, who died not many years ago in Fort Mount, Ala., led a numerous horde and invaded a part of the north of the State of Sonora, committing many murders and depredations of life and property of Mexican families, until, after a long and tenacious chase by American and Mexican forces, the band of malefactors was annihilated and its chief was captured.

"The incursion into Chihuahua, led by the Indian chief, Victoria, commanding about 800 Indians, took place between the years 1884 and 1886. Then the bands of marauders committing also many crimes went into the country as far as the villages of Tejolochic or Tres Castillos, very near the capital of Chihuahua and during the first formal encounter between them and Mexican forces, after having lost their chief, they were dispersed.

Cites Former Precedent.

"On these two occasions through an agreement between the Governments of the United States and Mexico it was decided that the armed forces of one and the other country might freely cross from the territory of one to the other in pursuit and for the purpose of punishing the above named bands of marauders. Recalling these precedents and the good results for both countries on account of the above agreement, the Government presided over by the first chief, anxious to exterminate within the least possible time the hordes led by Francisco Villa, who has been recently placed beyond the law, and to capture him to apply condign punishment, replies to you as confidential agent and addresses the Government of the United

FUNSTON SECRETLY MAKES PLANS FOR PURSUIT OF VILLA

He Is Instructed Not to Start Until Fully Ready and to Try to Strike Swiftly and Surely.

HE CALLS FOR MORE CAVALRY FOR BORDER

Believed to Mean That He Will Employ Four Regiments Now There, Comprising About 5000 Men, as Part of Expedition Into Mexico.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—Maj.-Gen. Funston, under orders from President Wilson to hunt down Villa's bandit army in Northern Mexico, was moving his troops at the border tonight behind a veil of rigid secrecy.

War Department officials, who had given the border commander a free hand in working out details of the expedition, made it clear that the Secretary regarded it imperative to success that all information which might aid Villa in eluding the American forces must be guarded scrupulously.

It was apparent only that the military plans contemplated a drive into Mexico that should be both quick and certain. The War Department is willing to take no chances by weakening the border patrol and Maj.-Gen. Funston's orders were not to move until fully prepared.

Secretary Baker said tonight that the department had no report that any troops had crossed the border.

Late tonight Funston asked the War Department for four additional regiments of cavalry for patrol duty on the border. Major-General Scott, chief of staff, immediately issued orders for the First Cavalry (Monterey, Cal), the Eleventh Cavalry (Fort Ogelthorpe, Ga.) and the Twelfth Cavalry, Robinson, Neb., to proceed at once to the border. The Fifth Cavalry, which is divided into three squadrons, stationed at Fort Meyer, Va.; Fort Sheridan, Ill., and Fort Leavenworth, Kan., was ordered to hold itself in readiness to move. Funston said the Fourth Regiment was not needed immediately.

Army officers estimated it would take from three to five days for the three cavalry regiments to reach the border. The regiment from Monterey, Cal., probably will be the first to arrive. While no announcement was made, the order was construed to mean that Major-General Funston intended to employ the four cavalry regiments now on duty along the border, both to the east and west of Columbus, as part of his expeditionary force, which, it is understood, will be under the direct command of Brigadier-General Pershing. A regiment of mountain artillery, with its 24 guns packed on mules, also is available in that district, and this force, with necessary engineers to repair railroad bridges destroyed by the bandits and possibly with aeroplane scouts, probably will constitute the expedition.

Probable Size of Force

The force would number, if composed of four cavalry regiments and a battalion of mountain artillery, approximately 5000 fighting men exclusive of engineers and other auxiliary troops. In a recent report to the Department, Major-General Funston estimated Villa's force at 3000, although some officers here have placed the figure as high as 5000.

It is taken for granted by officers here, however, that the Villa bands have already scattered among the hills and they do not look for a pitched battle, which, they say, would mean certain annihilation of the bandits.

Secretary Baker and his chief subordinates remained at the War Department until late tonight receiving dispatches from Major-General Funston and doing everything in their power to back up his plans. Many of the dispatches were forwarded by wireless to President Wilson, down the Potomac on the Mayflower. But whether the troops had entered Mexico or just when they might move across the border the officials would not say.

Major-General Funston himself has urged that all secrecy surround the movement of troops, so he may have an opportunity to surprise the bandit chieftain.

While extensive troop movements were in progress along the border during the day the State Department received from Gen. Carranza, head of the de facto government of Mexico, a request for permission to send his troops, should occasion arise, across the border into the United States in pursuit of the bandits. The note immediately was forwarded to President Wilson on the Mayflower and tonight he sent word that he would consider it until his return to the capital Monday morning and then would confer with Secretary Lansing before making any decision.

There was every indication that officials viewed Gen. Carranza's request in a favorable light. It was suggested, however, that such a reciprocal arrangement probably never would result in a single Carranza soldier entering the United States, for officials feel that with the tightening of the border patrol the possibility that any fugitive bandits will cross is remote. At the same time it is felt that acquiescence by the United States in the proposal of the de facto government would go far toward gaining the sympathy of public opinion in those parts of Mexico which are under the control of the recognized government.

Gen. Carranza's note relieved the apprehension of some administration officials, who had considered that there was a possibility that he might object to the presence of American troopers on Mexican soil. The communication indicated that no objection would be raised under such a reciprocal arrangement as was suggested. A reply probably will be sent some time Monday.

Chief Cause of Delay.

It generally is expected that the American forces will by that time be on the trail of the bandits who raided Columbus. One of the chief causes of delay has been the necessity of replacing the cavalry troops which have been performing border patrol duty. Movement of troops have been in progress ever since Major-General Funston received his orders to catch Villa, but their exact nature may not be known for several days.

Discussion in congressional circles today indicated further that Congress stands squarely behind the President in his determination to run down the Villa marauders. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee met and unanimously indorsed the President's action. In the House, Representative Mott of New York, a Republican member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, introduced a joint resolution justifying the President "in the employment of armed forces of the United State" and setting forth that "the United States disclaims any hostility to the Mexican people or any purpose to make war on Mexico." There was no general discussion of the subject on the floor of either house.

Two or Three Days Needed to Organize Force to Pursue Villa

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 11.—Instructed by the War Department at Washington that he was not to personally command the troops that will cross the Rio Grande into Mexico to search for Francisco Villa, Major-General Frederick Funston today began to arrange the details of the expedition and to plan for the safeguarding of the entire Mexican border.

During the day the General conferred frequently with his staff am Houston, Southern Department headquarters. A close censorship was established, however, on proceedings. All announcements were made by Major-General Funston himself. From him came this information:

That an officer subordinate to him, a Brigadier-General, would command the punitive expedition.

That this officer would have complete charge in the field and would not be hampered by unnecessary instructions.

That it would take two or three days to organize the force or forces that will go in pursuit of Villa.

That the first aero squadron, stationed at Fort Sam Houston, will be a part of the expeditionary force.

That a close watch will be kept at all border points for any symptoms of disorder that will necessitate the movement of troops.

Major-General Funston, for military reasons, refused to state how large the expeditionary force would be; the time the forward movement would start; whether there would be one or several forces, and the point or points at which the Rio Grande would be crossed when the search began.

Funston in General Command.

Although Major-General Funston was willing to personally lead the force searching for Villa, it was explained here that the War Department thought it best to keep him at Southern Department headquarters, where he would be in touch with and could direct the entire border situation.

If there should be more than one expeditionary force, the common direction will fall to Major-General Funston.

Another reason assigned was that the entire routine of the Southern Department would be interrupted if the commanding General were in the field. Funston said, too, that his place probably would have had to be filled by an officer of lesser rank, not in touch with the border situation. It is expected, however, that he will make frequent trips to the positions occupied by the invading troops.

The movement of troops from departments other than that commanded by Major-General Funston toward the border already has been initiated, it is understood.

The utmost secrecy regarding their exact destination will be maintained. Major-General Funston has insisted on this precaution to the War Department. Army officers at Fort Sam Houston believe the border is infested with Mexicans friendly to Villa who will do all in their power to keep him informed.

Estimates of the time required to capture the former Constitutionalist leader are not obtainable, but there was a feeling at Southern Department headquarters that the chase would be similar to the one which had as its object the seizure of Aguinaldo in the Philippines, years ago.

Army officers are intensely interested in the part the first aero squadron will play in the pursuit. No American aero squadron ever before has had actual military service. Machines were sent to Vera Cruz and there has been aerial scouting done along the border, but this is the first real test of the "fourth arm" of the service.

It is not known when the squadron will leave San Antonio, but it has been announced that it will be ready by tomorrow afternoon.

Weather conditions now are perfect for flying and it is thought that the start of the journey will not be delayed any longer than is necessary.

Capt. Benjamin D. Foulois, commanding the 10 officers under him who comprise the "fliers" of the squadron, and the 30 troopers completing the detachment, worked hard today preparing for their departure. A big part of the equipment will go forward by train.

All of the officers under Capt. Foulois, with the exception of Lieut. A. R. Christie, will go to the front. Most of them are veteran aviators. Several of them participated in the flight of the first aero squadron from Fort Sill, Ok., last November, when the squadron was transferred to Fort Sam Houston.

Capt. Foulois and Lieut. J. E. Carberry, T. S. Bowen, I. A. Rader and J. Chapman are the present members of the squadron who made the flight from Fort Sill. Other members of the squadron are Capt. T. F. Dodd and Lieutenants H. A. Dargue, W. G. Gorrell, W. G. Kilner and R. H. Willis.

Capt. Foulois Veteran Airman.

Capt. Foulois is one of the army's pioneer airmen. He was with Orville Wright on the first cross-country flight in America of any consequence—that from Fort Meyer, Va., to Alexandria in 1909. He was an officer of the Seventeenth Infantry, when he entered the flying corps. He is married and has a family.

The squadron is under-manned, as its full complement should be 20 flying men. The equipment, in addition to the eight aeroplanes, consists of 20 heavy motor trucks and five motorcycles, the latter being used for rapid transportation of gasoline and of parts to crippled machines.

The squadron uses Curtiss biplanes with motors of from 80 to 100 horsepower. Each machine weighs about 1350 pounds and will carry 450 pounds or an observer with each pilot.

Twenty-five aeroplane guns and a quantity of ammunition will go forward with the motor trucks, it is understood.

The engineering detail comprises one-third of the total United States army engineering corps and the order to entrain indicates that heavy engineering work is expected ahead of the expeditionary force.

Each company of the battlion is composed of from 140 to 150 men.

The ambulance detail consists of 12 ambulances. It finished entraining tonight, but the other details probably will not be entrained before tomorrow afternoon.

Ambulance No. 7 probably will leave before morning.

Telegraph Company H of the Signal Corps is expected to leave tomorrow night, and it is said three troops of cavalry and Batteries A, B and C of the Third Artillery, Major Leroy S. Lyon commanding, will be entrained about the same time.

Pershing Issues Statement to Quiet Mexicans Around El Paso.

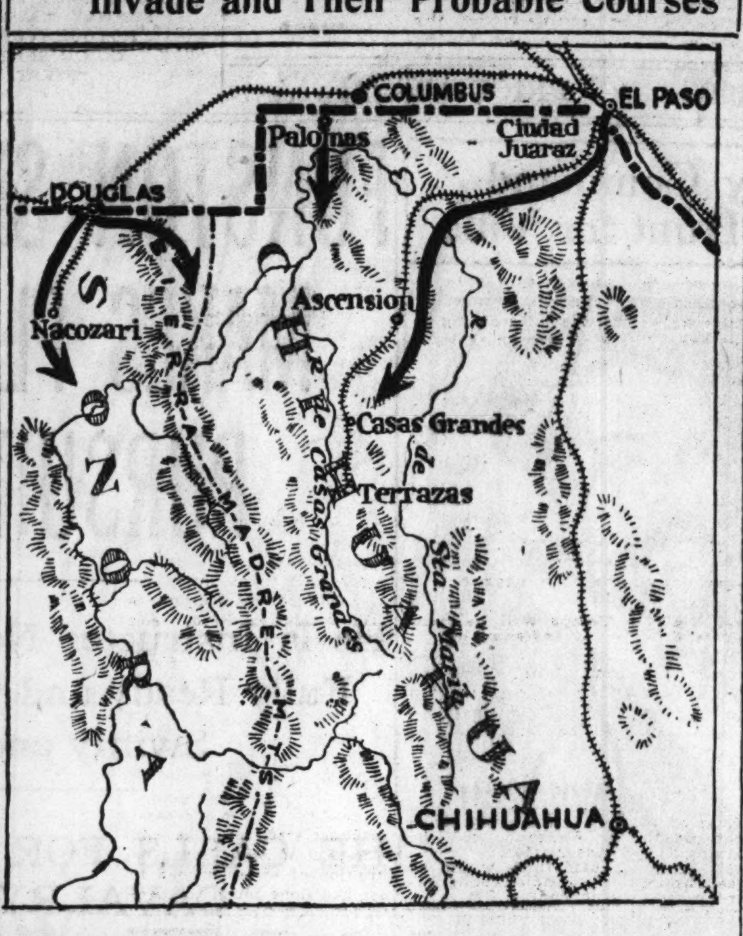
EL PASO, Tex., March 11.—Pursuit and capture of Villa is the sole purpose of the punitive expedition into Mexico, declared Gen. John J. Pershing, commandant at Fort Bliss, and one of the leaders of the expedition, in a statement issued today, to quiet Mexican people in this section. The statement follows:

"It should be deeply impressed upon everybody that the only purpose of the entry of American troops into Mexico at this time is the pursuit and capture of Villa and his band of brigands.

"It is a most friendly act of assistance on our part. This should be fully recognized by all true friends of the de facto government on both sides of the line.

"It is no time to indulge in idle theories about invasion. I give the Mexican people too much credit for common sense to think they will not gladly accept our aid in eliminating an international outlaw."

Map of Mexican States U. S. Troops Will Invade and Their Probable Courses



WHILE the American army of invasion is being moved in secrecy, to avoid giving the bandit, Villa, timely information, it is almost certain that it will cross the border at the points indicated on the map by arrows, and the topography of the country makes it practically necessary to take the courses indicated. It will be an enveloping movement, with the mountains between the States of Sonora and Chihuahua, in which Villa is expected to hide, as the main objection.

MEXICANS FLOCK OVER BORDER TO ESCAPE CONFLICT

EL PASO, Tex., March 11.—The Mormon colony of Casas Grandes, Chihuahua, is no longer in danger from attack by bandits, according to Gen. Gabriel Gavira, commandant at Juarez. Gavira stated that sufficient reinforcements had been sent into the district to protect the foreigners and that the refugee train held in readiness to leave for the North, probably would not be sent.

The only train expected tonight from the South was a special carrying Gen. Luis Gutierrez from Chihuahua to Juarez, where he is to confer with Gen. Gavira.

In El Paso some apprehension was aroused among the authorities by the large number of Mexicans crossing into Texas, but investigation showed that they came to get out of the range of any conflict. Many declared they had seen enough of war.

Rumors concerning Villa recruiting agents operating in Juarez have not stood the test of inquiry.

The border is closely patrolled by the Americans now in an effort to catch any contraband arms that may be passing through to the Villistas. The regular army of Mexico is given every facility in the way of obtaining supplies, and Gen. Bertani has placed a large order in El Paso.

While preparations for the expeditions against Villa were being rushed at Fort Bliss, officers made the rounds of the automobile saleshouses in El Paso, listing motor trucks. One company of infantry left for Ysleta and the two others made ready to go to Deming, N. M., the center of a district which has suffered much from brigandage in the past. The two mountain mule batteries at the fort are awaiting orders to move over the roadless haunts of Villa. The company operating the field wireless expects to be among the first to leave for the front. There are at present no aeroplanes in this part of the country, but they are expected, since weather and atmospheric conditions are ideal for air scouting.

Reinforcements are expected here before the expedition gets under way, to relieve for active srvice the seasoned men now on patrol on the border.

The forces on duty in this section consist of two mule batteries of the Fourth Artillery, a field battery of the Fifth, nine troops of the Eighth Cavalry, with the Thirteenth at Columbus and the Sixth, Seventh, Sixteenth and Twentieth Regiments of infantry, beside signal corps and hospital detachments.

Artillery at Nogales Conceals Drill in Order Not to Excite Mexicans.

NOGALES, Ariz., March 11.—Patrols along the international boundary near here were doubled today. Wild rumors foretelling invasion of the United States, as well as invasion of Mexico, were carried through the crowds which filled the streets in Nogales, Ariz., and Nogales, Sonora, just across the border.

Both towns were tranquil tonight. The Carranza soldiers at Nogales, Sonora, strolled the streets or lounged about the plaza, where band concerts were given. On the American side an artillery drill by American soldiers was conducted back of the town, hidden from the view of many Mexican refugees. This measure, it was said, was taken as a precaution against exciting peaceful Mexicans. Col. William H. Sage is in command here.

Troops Ordered to Bisbee to Prevent Mexican Outbreak.

DOUGLAS, Ariz., March 11.—Companies L and I of the Eleventh Infantry were ordered today to Bisbee because of threatened trouble there between American and Mexican residents, as a result of a bomb explosion last night in which two Mexicans were injured.

Trains bringing approximately 1000 Carranza infantry and cavalry arrived at Naco, Sonora, tonight. These commands will start overland early tomorrow for Agua Prieta, from where they will be distributed at various points along the Sonora and Chihuahua borders, in an effort to assist the American troops in their task of rounding up Villa forces, according to Mexican officials.

St. Louis Telegraph Operators May Go to Mexico to Rush War News.

A number of St. Louis' telegraph operators will probably go to the Mexican border within the next few days to aid in handling the mass of press dispatches which will be coming from that section while American troops are in Mexico. Some of the telegraphers will follow the American troops into Mexico, others will remain in border news centers.

Carranza Reply Taken as Consent to U. S. Plans

States requesting the necessary permission for Mexican forces to cross into American territory if the incursion which took place in Columbus should, unfortunately, be repeated in any other point of the boundary line. The Mexican Government would greatly appreciate a prompt and favorable reply from the Government of the United States.

"Please accept, Mr. Confidential Agent, the assurances of my high consideration. JESUS ACUNA,

"Secretary in charge of the Department of Foreign Affairs."

An official translation of Gen. Carranza's dispatch given out at the State Department makes it read at the conclusion:

"Addresses the Government of the United States requesting the necessary permission for Mexican forces to cross into American territory in pursuit of those bandits, acknowledging due reciprocity in regard to forces of the United States crossing into Mexican territory if the raid effected at Columbus should unfortunately be repeated at any other points of the border."

Administration officials regard Gen. Carranza's proposal as favorable. It seems to indicate that he will not protest against American troops on Mexican soil, as had been feared. Practically, such a reciprocal arrangement probably never would result in a single Carranza soldier crossing the line, as the possibility of bandits taking refuge in American territory is considered remote.

It is realized that such an arrangement would go far to satisfy Gen. Carranza and permit him to comply with popular sentiment in Mexico.

Gen. Carranza's note will be answered after it has been laid before President Wilson.

The reply of the United States will probably say that Carranza's suggestion will be considered, if at any time it should become necessary for his forces to pursue bandits into American territory through the lack of a sufficient number of American troops to do the work. It probably will be pointed out that American troops are to pursue Villa bandits in Mexico for the sole reason that Carranza forces are not there in sufficient numbers to relieve the menace and that if a similar situation should arise in the United States his offer of co-operation would be accepted.

GEN. PERSHING IS A NATIVE OF MISSOURI

Man Likely to Command Troops in Mexico Won Promotion in Philippines.

Brigadier-General John J. Pershing, who will probably command the Villa expedition, is a native Missourian. His promotion to Brigadier-General followed the gallant services in the Philippines, where he first served as a Captain, and was given to him over the heads of 862 superior officers by President Roosevelt in 1900. His promotion was made after an investigation of charges against Capt. Pershing of misconduct in Manila, and after he had been exonerated.

Pershing was born in Laclede, Linn County, Mo., in 1864. He was appointed to West Point in 1882, and upon his graduation he chose the cavalry service and was assigned to the Sixth Cavalry in 1886.

In 1905 he was married in Washington to Miss Frances Warren, daughter of Francis E. Warren, United States Senator from Wyoming.

Ten years later, while Gen. Pershing was at El Paso, Tex., in command of the Eighth Brigade, Mrs. Pershing and their three daughters, Helen, Anne and Margaret, 8, 7, and 6 years old, were suffocated during a fire in their quarters at the Presidio in San Francisco. Warren Pershing, 5 years old, was rescued by servants.

Pershing's career during the Philippine uprisings, was one of continued brilliancy. He reduced 10 native forts and won numerous victories against great odds. He first distinguished himself as a Captain in the Fifteenth Cavalry, stationed on the island of Mindanao, by leading numerous expeditions against the Moros. For three months the dispatches regarding his work were simply a recital of victories against a foe with whom it was unusually hard to deal.

In 1911, when the Moros started a new uprising, Gen. Pershing was sent against them again. Battles were fought almost daily by his men against superior forces. Losses were heavy upon both sides, but he finally disarmed the Moros. It was during this campaign that he was made Governor of Mindanao, in addition to retaining his position in the army. He continued to act as Governor until 1914, when he returned to the United States.

Pershing served for several years as Military Attache at the American Embassy at Tokio and he has been decorated by the Mikado. He has been mentioned at times for appointment as superintendent of the United States Military Academy at West Point.

One of the early exploits credited to Pershing was in 1889, when in command of Troop A at Fort Wingate, he set out with 10 men to rescue some cowboys from 100 well-armed Zuni Indians. Pershing succeeded in rescuing the cowboys and quieting the Indians.

In August, 1885, Pershing, then a lieutenant, was complimented by Gen. Miles because he had marched his troop with its pack train 146 miles in 46 hours, bringing in every man and horse in good condition. In 1896 he was officially commended for his "judgment and discretion" in a campaign against the Cree Indians.

In writing to a friend regarding some of his engagements in the Philippines, Pershing described the capture of Bacolod, where 100 Moros and only three Americans were killed, as follows:

"Our main obstacle in reaching the fort was a ditch 35 feet wide and 40 feet deep. The fight began in a rainstorm and it was necessary to bridge the ditch with fallen trees and bamboo. Our lines advanced in the face of a heavy fire against two fronts of the fort, putting out of business every Moro that appeared.

"When our lines were within fifty yards the bridge was completed by the men assigned to the work, the trees having been cut previously and hauled as near the ditch as possible. Thirty minutes later the assaulting infantry swung across and clambered up nearly in line to the top of the parapet. Here they were met with kampilan and kris and a bloody hand-to-hand fight occurred, one soldier against two Moros. It was, as a whole, a scene never to be forgotten."

GOVERNORS TELL FORCES STATES COULD FURNISH

Fourteen Report Strength of National Guard if Needed in Mexico.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 12.—The New York American this (Sunday) morning prints the following dispatches to the editor of the paper from Governors, giving their estimates of the number of guardsmen their respective states could furnish for use in Mexico:

TOPEKA, Kan., March 11.—Kansas can furnish two regiments, two additional companies of infantry, one battery artillery and one signal corps, all fully equipped and ready for service.
ARTHUR CAPPER, Governor.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 11.—Upon call of the President Illinois will mobilize within three days eight regiments of infantry, one regiment of cavalry, one signal corps and two batteries of artillery, fully armed with modern Federal equipment.
E. F. DUNNE, Governor.

RICHMOND, Va., March 11.—The Adjutant-General reports that Virginia could put in the field at once 225 officers and 3250 enlisted men, fully armed and equipped.
H. C. STUART, Governor.

COLUMBUS, O., March 11.—Present strength of national guard, 8000; equipment on hand.
FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 11.—Fifteen hundred equipped men can be furnished by Tennessee.
TOM C. RYE, Governor.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 11.—Three thousand immediately, 6000 in 10 days; equipment on hand for 3000.
SAMUEL M. RALSTON, Governor.

MADISON, Wis., March 11.—Wisconsin can put into the field 3300 officers and men, fully equipped.
E. L. PHILLIP, Governor.

BATON ROUGE, La., March 11.—Organized strength at present 1100 men, fully armed and equipped for field service.
L. E. HALL, Governor.

SALEM, Ore., March 11.—Oregon National Guard is fully equipped and would be ready promptly in accordance with the mobilization plans outlined by the War Department. Present peace footing about 1700 men. Raised to war strength would mean approximately 3000 men.
JAMES WITHYCOMBE, Governor.

SOUTHINGTON, Conn., March 11.—Connecticut could furnish 3900 National Guardsmen within 48 hours, fully equipped, except as to horses.
MARCUS H. HOLCOMB, Governor.

RALEIGH, N. C., March 11.—Actual peace strength, 225 officers and 3026 men. All organizations can be recruited to war strength within 10 days. All organizations are fully equipped for field service and entire personnel ready to respond instantly for service of our country.
LAWRENCE YOUNG,
Adjutant-General.

NEW YORK, March 11.—The New York State National Guard can furnish 15,000 men at first call, leaving necessary troops at home stations within the State for protection and recruiting up to full war strength.
CHARLES S. WHITMAN, Governor.

CARRANZA HAS MADE LITTLE PROGRESS TOWARD STABILIZING GOVERNMENT

He Is Hard Pressed to Meet Expenses; Paper Theoretically Worth 50 Cents American Gold Brings 3 to 5 Cents.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

CITY OF MEXICO, March 6.—Nearly five months have elapsed since the Carranza Government was recognized by the United States. Is Carranza getting anywhere?

Carranza, when questioned by Washington on the subject of what he could do toward restoring normal conditions in Mexico if recognition should be accorded him, promised to pacify the country, to restore and maintain railway communication, to reopen mail service, to protect foreign interests, and as speedily as circumstances might permit, to re-establish constitutional government.

There is a vast difference between Carranza and his government and constitutional government in Mexico. Carranza is not now governing constitutionally; he is governing by decree. His government is a military government pure and simple. Certain functions of the civil arm of the Government, such as some of the judicial processes, have been resumed. But that is about all.

Carranza has promised to swing away from government by decree and the imposition of the power of the military arm as speedily as may be. Conditions probably will postpone this consummation indefinitely.

Zapata Not Affected.

Before the wheels of the Carranza band wagon scarcely had begun to turn under the propulsive force of Washington's recognition, seats were at a premium. Villa lost heavily by the landslide to Carranza. Zapata was not affected. Carranza had been able to do no business with the Oaxaca leaders. Neither has he succeeded in imposing his authority upon the disagreeable and chronically dissenting Zapata to any conspicuous extent.

The Indian strain in Oaxaca is robust, fierce, warlike and independent.

Gen. Pablo Gonzales has started out to rid Morelos of the Zapatistas and bring the State under Carranza's authority. If Gonzales succeeds he will accomplish more than any of the dozen or so commanders—Porfirista, Maderista and Huertista—who have tried in the last five years.

Thus it may be seen that in the way of restoring peace Carranza has up to this time accomplished something, but to a considerable extent through the operation of the band-wagon principle among those who, before recognition, either opposed him actively or were lukewarm toward his cause.

Carranza has opened up the railways. Traffic is now proceeding subnormally—very much subnormally as to speed, equipment, number of trains in service, etc., on a majority of the principal railroads in the republic. The lines are in a woeful plight for lack of care, engines and material of all sorts.

Vain efforts have been put forth to obtain credit for equipment and materials—20 to 30 million dollars' worth is needed—or a loan for that purpose in the United States.

Carranza is notoriously in straits financially. The financial situation grows worse daily.

Revolutionary paper currency is the chief of the ills that beset Mexico financially. No one knows the total of the paper money that has been ground out by the constitutionalist printing presses since 1913.

Villista or other issues that have officially been repudiated by Carranza now have no value. The Carranzista paper, with a theoretical par value of 50 cents American gold per peso, now brings from 3 to 5 cents per peso. Probably it will go lower.

The Government organs, and to some extent the officials also, in their deliverances on financial subjects say that manipulations by the banks and the "coyotes" or exchange dealers, are responsible for the depreciation of the value of the Carranzista paper. That statement will hardly hold water. The paper has no greater value because, literally, there is nothing behind it save the promise of a revolutionary Government to pay.

Confident expectations of relief and of appreciation in the quotations of Carranzista paper are expressed by the Government as a result of the placing in circulation of the new 250,000,000 issue of notes which have been printed in the United States. Bankers and financiers say that these expectations are not well founded.

The plan is to exchange the new money for the old at a proportion of 1 peso of the new to 4, possibly 5, of the old. If this is done it will serve merely to make a bad matter worse.

While the revenues of the government—a goodly proportion of which by decree must be paid in Mexican gold—are large, even in their present depleted and curtailed total, Carranza is hard put to it to pay even the bills that must be paid for running the government. And only expenses that cannot be shirked are being settled.

It is an open secret that Carranza now understands that there isn't the ghost of a show for him, or any one else who may come to head the government, to obtain in the United States the loan that must be had as a necessary factor in adjusting the finances of the republic. Business, as a whole, is profoundly depressed all over the republic. There is virtually no development or promotion work under way, save in the oil industry.

People Not Starving.

Fairly authentic and complete reports from all parts of the country do not indicate that the population, regardless of lack of work, high prices of necessities and other handicaps, are either starving or in immediate danger of starvation. Poverty has increased and the people seem to struggle along without being reduced to the extreme stress that other peoples more wonted to a better scale of living than the Mexicans would have reached long before this under similar circumstances.

It would be folly to essay a prediction as to the chances of Carranza maintaining himself. Thus far he has. Whether he is weaker or stronger with the people than in October is a question. No one can tell.

Taking it by and large, and without going too much into detail, it does seem that, on the face of the facts as they now exist, there are more thumbs in Mexico turned down for Carranza than there are turned up—meaning by upturned thumbs the facts that speak for the progress he has made in the direction of stabilizing the government since recognition, and by down-turned thumbs those that indicate retrogression or standing still.

City Gets $500,000 for Phone Sale.

CHICAGO, March 11.—The City Council today authorized the sale of the Chicago Automatic Telephone Co.'s plant to the Chicago Telephone Co. for $6,300,000. The city is to receive $500,000 for permitting the sale.

59 U. S. SOLDIERS FOUGHT 900 VILLA MEN, KILLED 75

Small United States Force Also Recovered Much Loot Seized Across Border.

By Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, N. M., March 11.—The bandit Villa, according to an official telegram received at the headquarters of the Thirteenth Cavalry tonight, has moved southwest towards the Sonora State border in the general direction of the El Tigre mine district.

The town, in contrast to the nervousness which bordered on panic last night, was calm and quiet when darkness fell and the Thirteenth regimental band resumed its concerts tonight.

Col. H. J. Slocum's general reports of Villa's attempted invasion, completed today, showed as its outstanding feature that Villa, with from 1500 to 2500 men, was chased from the border 15 miles into Mexico by 59 officers and men of troops F and H under Maj. Frank Tompkins. This force fought four actions with Villa's rear guard of at least 900 men, killed at least 75 Mexicans, recovered a number of horses stolen from the cavalry by the bandits, and emerged with the loss of only two mounts killed, with no casualties.

During the pursuit, which Maj. Tompkins could not continue without rest and reinforcements, the Mexicans, apparently badly disorganized and fearful of a chase by the entire American forces, abandoned large quantities of loot stolen from the merchants of Columbus. The army corral here was crowded with cavalry and transport animals captured from Villa.

The death of Capt. Pablo Garcia and the serious condition of some other wounded prisoners in the post hospital caused a change in the plan made today to arraign them on formal charges of murder on account of the deaths of the eight American soldiers killed or fatally wounded during the battle. Agents of the Department of Justice said tonight that the charges would be held in abeyance until the prisoners were in condition to appear in a United States court.

Maj. Tomkins is to be transferred mendatory telegram, Col. Slocum urged the War Department to grant the requiset. He told how Tomkins' force brike up every formation Villa made to check the pursuit and particularly how Tomkins with 35 men under Capt. Rudolps Simper, out in advance, drove in a Mexican rear guard of more than 300 men before Villa ordered out an overwhelming force and checked the American advance.

"If we had had another troop or two," Col. Slocum said, "we would be in Mexico yet. The regiment behaved beautifully."

Military honors were paid to the seven troopers of the Thirteenth Cavalry killed. Capt. S. M. Lutz, regimental chaplain, held services in front of the post hospital.

The bodies were escorted to the train by the band and regiment. As the train departed for the East regimental trumpeters sounded taps.

Gen. Bertani, leader of the Carranza forces which reached Palomas, Chihuahua, six miles south of the border, last night, marched with the regimental officers. He had been sent by Carranza military authorities to join the funeral procession as a mark of respect to the American dead.

Drinks Acid After Quarrel.

Mrs. Nellie Reese, 38 years old, drank carbolic acid after a quarrel with her husband, James E. Reese, at her rooming house, 1018 South Eighth street, last night. At the City Hospital her condition was pronounced serious.

DRINK HOT WATER AND RID JOINTS OF RHEUMATIC RUST

Why rheumatism and lumbago sufferers should drink phosphated hot water each morning before breakfast

RUST OF IRON
RUST OF RHEUMATISM

Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken day after day leaves in the alimentary canal a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not completely eliminated each day becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels. From this mass of left-over waste material, toxins and ptomaine-like poisons, called uric acid, is formed and then sucked into the blood where it continues to circulate, collecting grain by grain in the joints of the body much like rust collects on the hinge as shown above.

Men and women who suffer from lumbago, rheumatism or sore, stiff aching joints should begin drinking phosphated hot water, not as a means to magic relief from pain, but to prevent more uric acid forming in the system. Before eating breakfast each morning, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will first neutralize and then wash out of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's accumulation of toxins and poisons; thus, cleansing, sweetening, and freshening the entire alimentary canal, each morning, before putting more food into the stomach.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to make any rheumatic or lumbago sufferer an enthusiast on the morning inside bath.

Millions of people keep their joints free from these rheumatic acids by practicing this daily internal sanitation. A glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate, drank before breakfast, is wonderfully invigorating; besides, it is an excellent health measure, because it cleanses the alimentary organs of all the waste, gases and sour fermentations, making one look and feel clean, sweet and fresh all day.

Those who try this for one week may find themselves free from sick headaches, constipation, bilious attacks, sallowness, nasty breath and stomach acidity.—Advertisement.

VERDUN FIGHTING ABATES; GERMANS GAIN NEAR RHEIMS

Berlin Reports Advance of Two-Thirds of Mile on Front of 1400 Yards by Storming Operations South of Ville-aux-Bois.

Intermittent Bombardment West of Douaumont; Artillery Exchanges Less Spirited West of Meuse.

Germans Declared to Have Been Mowed Down in Three Fruitless Attacks Near Douaumont Friday.

PARIS, March 11.—The following official communication was issued by the War Office tonight:

"In Belgium fires were directed against the trenches and underground works of the enemy in the region of Steenstraet and the environs of Bixschoote.

"In Artois, to the east of Neuville, we exploded a mine, the crater of which we occupied. Between the Somme and the Oise we bombarded German organizations in the region of Herbecourt, Laucourt and Beuvraignes. North of the Aisne a very lively cannonade has been maintained in the region of the Bois de Buttes, south of La Ville aux Bois.

"On the left bank of the Meuse the activity of the two artilleries was less spirited during the course of the day. On the right bank an intense bombardment is being maintained in the region west of Douaumont. It has not been so intense on the rest of the center or in the Woevre.

"The enemy did not attempt any infantry action along the whole of our front. According to the latest reports, the fruitless assaults launched yesterday against our trenches west of Douaumont were very disastrous to the enemy. The Germans attacked three times in columns of four, but were mowed down by our artillery fire and the fire of our machine guns. They were obliged to retire. leaving the ground covered with dead bodies.

"Today in the region of Douaumont one of our aeroplanes brought down a Fokker machine, which fell in flames inside the German lines."

There is still violent fighting for the possession of the Fort at Vaux, according to announcement of the War Office this afternoon. The Germans have made progress along the slopes leading to this position, but they have not yet reached the barbed wire entanglements in front of the fort. The Germans hold some houses in the eastern part of the village of Vaux, while the French are still in possession of the western part of the town.

The report says:

"North of the River Aisne the enemy yesterday, after having bombarded for several hours our positions between Troyon and Berry-au-Bac, moved out from Ville-au-Bois (near Rheims), and attacked the salient formed by our line at Bois des Buttes. After a very spirited fight we drove the enemy from the northwestern extremity as well as from the western section of the wood. This was territory the Germans had succeeded in occupying.

"West of the River Meuse the Germans last night delivered a strong attack southeast of Fethincourt against our trenches along the highway from Bethincourt to Chattancourt. An immediate counter attack gave us full possession of the important communicating trench which the enemy had penetrated.

"East of the Meuse the enemy has redoubled his efforts between the village of Vaux and the Vaux forts. The bombardment continued all night with great violence and there were further infantry assaults against the village. in ruins from shell fire. The Germans took possession of some houses east of the church in the village of Vaux. We are still in possession of the western part of the village and the efforts of the enemy in this direction all resulted in failure.

"As a result of several attacks against the fort itself, the Germans made some progress along the surrounding slopes, but their efforts to reach the barbed wire entanglements in front of the fort were checked by our fire.

"In the Woevre district there has been a continued and intense bombardment in the regions of Eix and Moulainville."

NORWEGIAN SHIP IS SUNK; SEVEN AMERICANS SAVED

WASHINGTON, March 11.—Consul Osborne at Havre reported today that when the Norwegian bark Silius, from New York to Havre, was torpedoed without warning in Havre roads on the night of March 9, seven Americans aboard were rescued.

The loss of the Silius was first reported last night from London. Three members of the crew were reported lost.

State Department officials seemed inclined to view the attack on the Silius as a serious affair.

So far dispatches have simply said the vessel was torpedoed without warning. No mention was made of the nationality of the submarine, and there was nothing to indicate whether a torpedo actually was responsible for the sinking of the vessel or whether she might have struck a mine. It was presumed, however, that the American Consul at Havre got his information from members of the crew, some of whom were Americans.

If the Silius was torpedoed, such an act was contrary to the assurances the United States has obtained from the Central Powers.

GERMANS STRIKING BLINDLY BY LAND, TO FOLLOW SOON BY SEA, NORTHCLIFFE SAYS

British Publisher Declares Nation Is in Position of Besieged City, and That Crown Prince Is Gambling With Human Life at Verdun.

LONDON, March 11.—Lord Northcliffe, who has just visited the Verdun battlefield, in a message to the Weekly Despatch, declares that Verdun is a great deal more interesting than important. The newspaper publisher continues:

"It does not need a personal visit to the battlefield to realize this. If the Germans think that an attack on the unarmed and dismantled forts of Verdun opens the road to Paris, they have a very faint notion of the French preparations and the French power of resistance."

Comparing the present German troops with those who fought early in the war, Baron Northcliffe says:

Teuton Captives Show Fight.

"Last week I saw German prisoners who had escaped the hellish fire of the French 75s' at Verdun. Where had gone those splendid stalwarts captured at the battle of the Marne? Much of the rank and file now left of the Germans is undersized and badly dressed, with faces that bear a look of fright that seems as if it would last a lifetime. Their appearance is such as to move a heart of stone. * * * With two exceptions among those with whom I spoke all were utterly weary of warfare and begged to be told when peace could be expected.

"The fact about the whole war is that Germany is in the position of a besieged city, and she is striking out blindly by land at Verdun. She will presently, I am convinced strike out by sea."

Turning to the actual fighting at Verdun, Lord Northcliffe says:

"Not a word is hinted in anything sent out from Germany of the horrible slaughter to which the German troops have been subjected this week. Thursday was a black day for Germans when, drugged with ether, the men came on in mass formation to be mown down by the French 75s' and machine guns, as usual.

Big Gamble With Human Life.

"Reports published in the English newspapers from Paris are to my personal knowledge, on the whole most accurate, and they show that for one or many reasons the Crown Prince is gambling with human life to an extent unprecedented even in this war."

Baron Northcliffe asserts that "if the Germans possess a number of guns of greater caliber than those used by the English and French they have no weapons in their army equal to the French '75,' or gunners at all comparable to the Frenchmen."

Discussing the western theater as a whole, Lord Northcliffe says that the "allied defensive wall right across France, in so far as attaining any definite military position is concerned, is absolutely impregnable. This remark may equally apply to the German line across France and Belgium."

New York Agents Say Only Four American Were on Silius.

NEW YORK, March 11.—There were only four Americans aboard the Norwegian bark Silius, according to agents of the line here, and they were members of the crew. She carried no passengers.

The Silius was a 1500-ton three-master, formerly the British bark Helly. It is reported that Capt. Syvertsen of the Silius was drowned and two sailors are missing. The rest of the crew was saved.

Russian Destroyer Reported to Have Been Sunk by Mine.

BERLIN, March 11—(By wireless to Sayville.)—The Russian torpedo boat destroyer Leitenan Pustchin has been sunk by a mine, according to a report from Sofia, Bulgaria, given out by the Overseas News Agency. Four officers and 11 sailors of the crew of the destroyer were rescued by Bulgarians.

The Leitenan Pushtchin was a unit of the Russian Black Sea fleet, and probably was lost in the Black Sea off the coast of Bulgaria. She was 210 feet in length and displaced 326 tons. Her complement in peace times was 67 men.

Berlin Says Carbeaux and Cumieres Woods Have Been Cleared of French.

BERLIN, via London, March 11.—Capture of French positions 1400 yards wide and about two-thirds of a mile deep, south of Ville-aux-Bois, near Rheims, was announced today by the War Office.

Rheims is about 60 miles west and north of Verdun.

The statement says:

"Saxon regiments stormed with very slight losses strongly fortified positions in the wood sectors southwest and south of Ville-au-Bois, 11 miles northwest of Rheims, over a width of about 1400 yards, and for a depth of about two-thirds of a mile. Twelve uninjured officers and 725 uninjured men fell into our hands. The booty consisted of one revolver cannon, five machine guns and 13 mine throwers.

"On the western bank of the Meuse (Verdun region) the last positions still held by the French in the Bois des Corbeaux and the Bois de Cumieres were cleared of enemies. Enemy counter attacks delivered with strong forces against the southern boundary of these woods and against the German positions further to the west broke down under the fire of our defense.

"On the eastern bank of the Meuse very lively artillery activity reigned, especially in the neighborhood northeast of Bras, to the west of the village of Vaux and of Fort Vaux and at several points on the Woevre plain.

county assessors and for revision of the acts of the county assessors by county boards of equalization.

"If now the General Assembly chooses to establish a State Tax Commission with general supervision over the acts of county assessors and county boards of equalization and with power of original assessment it appears that this will clearly be within its constitutional powers. The State Board of Equalization must continue in existence until changed or abolished by constitutional amendment or revision. Its powers, however, would be restricted to the narrow function of final equalization among the counties and it would have no incentive to change the figures established by the State Tax Commission.

"On the contrary, composed as it is of the chief officials of State administration, the board would doubtless be eager to sustain the acts of the State Tax Commission which would relieve the present inadequacy of State revenue. In any case, the State Board of Equalization could not change the assessment of any individual but could only raise or lower the assessment of counties."

GERMANS PUT LOSS IN VERDUN BATTLE AT FEW THOUSAND

Total Said to Include Operations From First Attack, but Not on West Bank of River.

By Associated Press.

BERLIN, March 10, via London, March 11.—The German losses in the Verdun operations up to the end of last week, though accurately and officially unknown, are said to reach a total of only a few thousand in killed, wounded and missing, according to a statement obtained from an authoritative source.

This total includes the losses in driving the first breach in the French position north of Verdun, the capture of successive ridges of this wood and the forest region down to the actual works of the fortress and the storming of Fort Douaumont, but not the operations on the west bank of the river.

It is interesting to contrast these figures, military officials point out, with the fantastic accounts in some of the French and English newspapers on men being mowed down so thickly by machine gun and shrapnel fire that they had no room to fall and were left standing in shocks.

Details of the attack on Fort Vaux, published here, show that the general attack began March 7. Heavy batteries, which by them had tested the ranges, kept the region of Douaumont under continuous heavy fire during the entire day, and after a period of intense gun fire an infantry attack was launched in the evening at 8 o'clock.

Covered by a hail of shells, which kept down the fire of the French batteries and infantry, German regiments pressed steadily forward until late in the night, when a brilliant storm gave them possession of Fort Vaux.

50,000 Men Needed to Round Up Villa Is Army's Opinion

The middle one will have an all-overland journey.

Can't Be Cut Off From South.

To the south, Villa's only resistance will be the Carranza troops, an unknown quantity in the present condition and a doubtful one at best. It is pure fancy to presume that any American expeditions can get under way in time to cut Villa off from the south. Villa rode with an army of approximately 3000 men from Colonia Hernandez, Chihuahua, to attack Columbus, in eight days. It was more than 400 miles as he went. Our men will hardly be ready to entrain for the south within eight days of the time he started south again. So it is fair to presume he could again reach the refuge of his mountain home before our men take up the chase.

The San Andreas country is known as the Villa stronghold, and if our men are able to run him to bay, it probably will be there. That is where Villa has the most friends, where he has always fought best and where he and his men know every path, ravine, canyon and spur.

If such is his desire, he can easily reach this country to make his stand against the "gringoes."

Some of the younger officers of the army, stung by the attack here and not worn in the wars, hold that the correct military move would be to take the five regiments of cavalry most available and start immediately on the trail from Columbus, relying on supplies and communications to be arranged after their departure.

Our Troops Have Advantages.

They say in defense of this that with their superior horses, they could overtake him and force him into battle within a week. There is little chance o' Gen. Funston looking with favor on such a plan. He might have as a captain, but it is too devil-may-care for a general.

Officers are chary of suggesting what number of men would be necessary for the job of taking Villa, but they say that an expedition into Mexico under present conditions should have no fewer than 50,000 men. If all goes well and Carranza helps out, 10,000 men might do it, but they would need a lot of good fortune.

Given a sufficient number of men, it is not believed that the job will last long. Our troops will have all the equipment and advantages of modern warfare. Undoubtedly aeroplanes, of which Gen. Funston has a high opinion, will do much work; motor cars will convey provisions and forage and in every department the task will be pushed with all expedition.

Now that he has become an enemy, officers do not seem to have nearly as high an estimate of Villa's military prowess. They acknowledge he is keen, slick, cunning, but say he has no hold on the broader aspect of war. I have not met an officer who expects Villa to be captured. They believe he may be killed, but captured, never.

WOMEN TO TRAIN FOR WAR SERVICE IN NATIONAL CAMP

First School to Be Established on Outskirts of Washington May 1, to Run Four Weeks.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—The call of the woman's section of the Navy League has brought to its standard women from all over the United States.

Comes now the National Service School, sponsored by the Navy League, where girls and young women may be trained along lines of the instruction appertaining to war services which they can render. Inspiration to this was drawn from the Plattsburg camp, where military instruction was given to their brothers. The camp, which is to be established on the outskirts of Washington, will open on May 1, to continue four weeks at least, perhaps longer.

If the experiment proves successful, branches of the National Service School will be established in important cities of the country. Baltimore and Philadelphia have already applied to the Executive Committee for assistance in founding similar camps, and that it will succeed may be presaged from the fact that already, some two months before the school is to open, there have been more than 150 enrollments. The recruits include the daughters of officials, young women of the army and navy contingent, society girls and girls who will shut up their typewriters to spend their fortnight's vacation under military discipline.

Army tents have been requisitioned for the use of the resident pupils, and the camp will be conducted along regulation military lines, with set schedules of classes, drills, etc., for resident and day pupils. The main object of the training is to give an opportunity to American women to acquire sufficient special training to be of use in time of war or national calamity.

No student will be enrolled for less than two weeks, and plans are being made to accommodate 500 girls, 200 resident students and 300 day pupils, each fortnight. The school will be open to all native-born women above 18 years of age, whose applications are acceptable to the committee in charge and who are members, or intend to become members, of the woman's section of the Navy League.

Three Training Camps Will Be Held This Summer at Indianapolis.

CHICAGO, March 11.—It was learned today that Fort Benjamin Harrison at Indianapolis has been selected by the War Department as the place for training camps for the Central States next summer and fall instead of Fort Sheridan. This was made known today in an announcement by Col. D. A. Frederick, commander of the department which has headquarters in Chicago to the Training Camp Association.

Col. Frederick said there would be three camps held at Indianapolis beginning July 5 and ending Oct. 5.

ROUND TABLE CLUB HEARS ADDRESS BY COLLIER'S EDITOR

Mark Sullivan, in Interview, Refers to President Wilson as "Incorrigible Idealist."

Mark Sullivan, editor of Collier's Weekly, spoke last night before the Round Table Club on "Modern Aspects of the Press." The address was delivered at the St. Louis Club. Reporters were not admitted.

Sullivan afterward said that as the Round Table Club rules forbade the presence of reporters, he would have to decline giving out even a summary of his speech.

Joseph Pulitzer Jr., editor of the Post-Dispatch, Percival Chubb, leader of the St. Louis Ethical Culture Society and William Marion Reedy, editor of the Mirror made short talks.

In an interview with a Post-Dispatch reporter earlier in the day, Sullivan declared that the country should stand behind President Wilson in his armed merchantman stand. The mere fact that submarines have changed certain aspects of naval warfare, he said, ought not to decrease the rights of non-combatants but should increase them.

He declared that the elimination of Secretary of State Bryan and the substitution of an abler man in the Cabinet had done much to correct some of the early errors of the national administration. Terming President Wilson an "incorrigible idealist," he criticized the executive's Mexican policy, declaring that the very guns that Villa is using were allowed to be passed into Mexico by President Wilson.

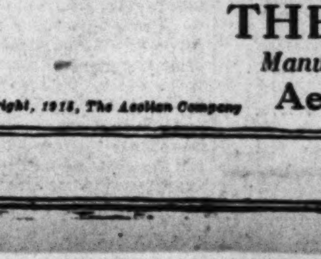
The editor pronounced himself strongly in favor of the federalization of the militia. "The time has come," he said, "for us to cease to be a mere collection of states. We must become nationalized in spirit—we must stand together as one. A national press can be of great aid in this movement."

How to Prevent Acid Stomach and Food Fermentation

By a New York Physician.

"My experience has forced me to the conclusion that most people who complain of stomach trouble possess stomachs that are absolutely healthy and normal. The real trouble, that which causes all the pain and difficulty, is excessive acid in the stomach, aggravated by food fermentation. Hyperacidity irritates the delicate lining of the stomach abnormally, causing that full, bloated feeling. Thus both acid and fermentation interfere with and retard the process of digestion. The stomach wall is usually healthy and normal, but irritated almost past endurance by these foreign elements—acid and wind. In all cases—and they comprise a great majority of all stomach difficulties—the first and only step necessary is to neutralize the acid and stop the fermentation by taking in a little warm or cold water immediately after eating, from one to two teaspoonfuls of bisurated magnesia, which is the most effective antacid and food corrective I have ever found. The excess acid will be neutralized and the fermentation stopped almost instantly, and your stomach will at once proceed to digest the food in a healthy, normal manner. Be sure to ask your druggist for bisurated magnesia rather than magnesia in any other form."—ADV.

"Children's Corner"



"IT'S bedtime and the little folks are waiting for their 'Good night treat'. So I sit down at my Pianola and play that charming little thing of Debussy's—'Children's Corner'. First comes the 'Snow-is-dancing' part. I press my feet upon the pedals softly, and gently comes the suggestion of the falling of the snow. I never could play this on the piano, but now by a touch of the time lever and a little graded pressure on the pedals, I can put a world of feeling into it. Now I try the 'Little Shepherd' part, and mercy! you can almost hear the little fellow piping to his sheep! The effect is exquisite, and yet I am getting the soft little bursts of tone simply by swinging a simple lever back and forth. It all seems so simple, and yet it is wonderful, too! The delicate musical effects possible only to fine musicians I have gained at the cost of a little practice. The few simple devices on the Pianola allow me to play with a feeling that no mere player piano ever could equal.

"It is marvellous how these patented devices of the Pianola make it differ so greatly from all the other instruments which its success has brought upon the market."

The PIANOLA

Enables you to play the piano well

Have you ever stopped to wonder why the Pianola has become so well-known in such a short time? Perhaps you do not know that in every civilized country in the world it is just as popular as it is here.

It is because the Pianola is really a marvellous instrument with which you can not only play the piano—but play it with truly musical feeling. This is the important part, and this is why the Pianola has been endorsed by every great musician of the world, and why it differs so immeasurably from all the so-called player pianos which try to imitate it.

We are sole representatives of the genuine Pianola in this city, and we handle no player-pianos besides the Pianola line. We would like to play the Pianola for you, show you wherein it differs from the player-pianos sold at other stores—and we cordially invite you to visit our Warerooms at your convenience.

BABY WEEK ENDS WITH CLINICS AND A FASHION SHOW

Local Leaders in the Movement Gratified by Interest Shown in All Events.

LECTURES WELL ATTENDED

Prizes in Contest for a Perfect Infant Will Be Awarded This Week.

The first "Baby week" held in St. Louis ended yesterday with two clinics at the Grand-Leader and a "fashion show" in the Musical Arts Building, Boyle avenue and Olive street, where 12 children, ranging in age from 2 to 8 years, paraded in the very latest garb for children, before 300 women.

Leaders in the movement said St. Louis responded heartily to the cause of child welfare, sponsored throughout the country by the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor and the Gen- for children, before about 200 women.

About 500 babies were taken to the clinics, and hundreds of mothers attended lectures there and at the Baby Welfare headquarters, 308 North Eighth street. Twenty-five physicians and numerous nurses gave their services to the cause. Lectures were given to mothers at the branch public libraries and at the public schools nearly every afternoon and evening during the week. A special program of lectures for negro mothers was arranged at Sumner High School yesterday afternoon by the Woman's Council, which planned and organized the local Baby week observance.

A feature of the week was the show window displays of stores. Three department stores kept trained nurses at their stores daily to advise mothers.

Prize Baby Contest.

A perfect babies' contest at the Jewish Educational Alliance, Ninth and Carr streets, Tuesday and Wednesday, brought 300 infants contesting for honors. These were weighed, measured, mentally tested and otherwise inspected by the doctors and the prize winners will be announced next Wednesday.

Mrs. Philip B. Fouke of 4944 Lindell boulevard, general chairman of the week, expressed herself as gratified at the interest shown by St. Louisans in the movement. "Baby week quickened the interest of the general public toward the giving of all babies a better chance at life," she said. "We have shown the public what has been done at the privately operated clinics and have drawn all classes together in the interest of bettering childhood."

Mrs. Philip N. Moore, a vice chairman, said she considered the greatest result was the bringing together of citizens in the interest of the younger element when the latter needs it most.

City Aid Needed.

Dr. Gustav Lippmann of 4668 Berlin avenue, speaking at the Grand-Leader clinic yesterday, said that the week's activities brought before the city officials the need of the municipality taking over the baby clinics, or at least paying physicians to superintend them. At present, the city only furnishes the nurses, while the clinics are financed by private subscription.

"Baby week has taught citizens to care for babies in an altruistic way," he said. "Such clinics should be a preventive institution, where mothers could take their young and be warned against the dangers to which childhood is heir."

The very latest dancing frocks, middy suits, afternoon dresses and play rompers were viewed on living models at the fashion show held under the direction of Miss Katherine Van Buren. Three-year-old Willa Schacht, daughter of Mrs. William Schacht of 3969 DeTonty street, danced a few movements of a solo dance; Waynetta Haverstick, six-year-old daughter of Dr. G. W. Haverstick of 4259 Maryland avenue, interpreted Mahler's dance, "The Awakening," and Martha Helen Biggs, 6 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Biggs of 4069 Westminster avenue, was seen in a schottische.

T. R. OFF ILLINOIS BALLOT

Colonel's Disavowal of Primary Candidates Is Accepted.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 11.—Secretary of State Stevenson today removed from the primary ballot the names of six candidates for delegate to the Republican National Convention who expressed a preference for Theodore Roosevelt. The action followed the receipt here of a disavowal from Col. Roosevelt in what he considered regular form.

Secretary Stevenson a few days ago refused to honor the request of Roosevelt to eliminate prospective candidates on the ground that a properly executed instrument of disavowal was not sent with the request.

REQUEST OF STATE SENATOR FOR BAR LICENSE OPPOSED

Rose Hill Improvement Association to Protest Against Saloon at 6072 Maple Avenue.

State Senator Joseph H. Brogan's application for a saloon license at 6072 Maple avenue, after four applicants had been refused licenses within two years because residents in the block had remonstrated, will be contested at a hearing before Excise Commissioner Rumsey, March 18, by James E. King, attorney for the Rose Hill Improvement Association.

Senator Brogan, who conducts a saloon at 2500 North Fifteenth street, says he will not attempt to force a saloon on the neighborhood if the residents object to it, but will not withdraw his application if "only a few cranks" object.

King has conducted proceedings against four applicants for a license, and twice has been successful before Commissioner Rumsey, and twice before Rumsey's predecessor, Circuit Judge Anderson. He said a remonstrance is being circulated by residents in the block.

THREE CHARGED WITH ARSON WILL GO ON TRIAL TOMORROW

State Is Ready to Take Up the Case of the Fire at the Gilmore-Bonfig Decorating Co.

The cases of Harold Gilmore, Julius R. Bersch and Harry C. Imel, charged with arson in the second and third degrees, will be called for trial in Circuit Judge Kimmel's court tomorrow. Circuit Attorney Harvey announced yesterday that the State will be ready for trial and that Herbert O. Baker of Webster Groves, a former employe in Bersch's insurance agency, who confessed to taking part in arson plots and told his story to the grand jury, will be used as a prosecuting witness.

These three defendants and Edward Millner, alias Ben Miller, were indicted jointly in connection with the destruction by fire July 24, 1915, of the Gilmore-Bonfig Decorating Co., 4455 Olive street. After the fire it was learned that there was $35,000 insurance on the establishment, and a grand jury investigation was made.

500 NATIVES WERE KILLED BY U. S. MARINES IN HAITI

First Semi-Detailed Story of Intervention in Rebellion Given by Colonel Commanding.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, March 11.—Authorizing an interview which gives the first semi-detailed story of United States intervention last fall in the rebellion in Hayti, Col. Littleton W. T. Waller, Senior Colonel of the U. S. Marine Corps, today admitted that the forces which he led to the island killed 500 natives.

This is the first statement dealing with casualties on the other side that has been given in this country. The only report on this feature of the situation that has been issued from Washington said 22 United States sailors had been killed.

Col. Waller verified the accuracy of a story in a Philadelphia paper which was based on a talk with him and said in part:

"The estimate that no less than 500 Haitiens were shot down by the American troops before order was restored is based on the number of known dead and the number of wounded who died for want of medical treatment. The Haitiens absolutely defied the Americans and employed all the schemes of guerilla warfare to kill off the marines and bluejackets who were detailed to land duty from the several United States battleships that lay at anchor in Haitien waters.

Machine Guns on Concealed Enemy.

"Of the 500 rebels who were not killed outright by the American bullets, about 350 succumbed to disease contracted as they lay wounded in bushes. At times the American officers, in self-defense, were compelled to turn the full force of the hot machine guns directly into a place of concealment from which rebel bullets were wildly emerging. In only a few instances did the rebels face the American troops in regular battle line, and after they felt the true aim of the khaki-clad boys they depended entirely on sniping.

"The Haitiens neither knew nor cared to learn how to save the lives of their injured. The wounded lay for days suffering agonies, the Americans learned after peace had been restored. None but little parties of rebels who were with the wounded men knew of the injuries, and the injured ones' companions seemed not to care what became of them.

"Seven strong forts were taken, one by means of a thrilling hand-to-hand engagement, in which American bayonets proved superior to those of the revolutionists. All the forts were located at the tops of mounts and hills, and all were plentifully supplied with soldiers who knew little of military life.

"Twenty-two Americans were shot down or died from wounds, all of them practically shot from ambush. Not a man was lost in the vicious fights at the forts, so efficient were the maneuvers of the veteran Colonel."

When Col. Walker first reached the island the rebel leaders promised to desist from fighting, but as soon as he returned to Port au Prince, fighting was resumed in the North. A force of 500 men was sent there and fighting stopped until November, when a Sergeant was shot and killed from ambush.

Campaign Follows Death of Sergeant.

Col. Waller was notified of the killing and felt justified in making a campaign. He had been ordered not to shoot until shot at, so here was his opportunity. He ordered an aggressive campaign when he took up his headquarters at Letrou, in the midst of the fighting. From there he dispatched companies of marines into the mountainous sections, where many of the revolutionists had fled and many an interesting engagement was fought.

Then he gave an order that certain forts should be taken during the early part of November. Most of them were easily taken and blown up when the rebels fled at the first machine gun fusillade, which could never have damaged the forts.

In the taking of Fort Capois, however, they met more stubborn resistance. It was Maj. Smedley D. Butler, son of the Pennsylvania Congressman, who led the assault with 135 men. The Major had reconnoitered about the fort area and wirelessed Col. Waller that he was ready to take it. The machine guns again were brought into play at the base of the mount, but instead of using them to any great extent, Maj. Butler ordered a charge.

The marines shot up the hill in gala mood. Fifty of them climbed the parapet and engaged the defending Haitiens in a bitter hand-to-hand grapple, with bayonets clashing. The leader of the rebels soon became convinced that American training is superior to that of the Haitiens and ordered a surrender to save his men.

Missing Woman, 82, Is Found.

Mrs. Jane C. Hall, 82 years old, mother of Miss Mary Virginia Hall, a teacher in the Divoll public school, who had been missing since Friday morning was found by the police at Laclede and Channing avenues late yesterday and taken to the city hospital. YOUTH KILLED WITH DAGGER BY SISTER-IN-LAW

Accident, Declares Mrs. Ethel Brogden When She and Dead Man's Wife Are Arrested.

Walter H. Brogden, 20 years old, of 2014 Olive street, was stabbed and killed with a two-edged dagger at 1:30 o'clock this morning at the doorway of his home by his sister-in-law, Mrs. Ethel Brogden, 21 years old, who also lives at that address.

Mrs. Brogden, who is the wife of R. W. Brogden, and the slain man's wife were arrested. In a corner of Mrs. Ethel Brogden's room the police found a stained dagger. At police headquarters Mrs. Brogden said the youth ran against her and that the stabbing was accidental.

She admitted she had had trouble with her brother-in-law about some letters. A woman who lives across the street said she saw two men and a woman standing in the doorway at 2014 Olive street and that, as the men started to walk away, one of them fell. The woman then ran screaming into the house. The house is a rooming house conducted by Mrs. S. E. Scales. Brogden was rushed to the City Hospital but was dead when the ambulance arrived there.

MAN KILLED BY PEACEMAKER IN SALOON QUARREL

Dies From Bullet Wounds Received in East St. Louis Altercation.

Milby Bowen Jr., 20 years old, was shot last midnight in a saloon at 1000 South Fourteenth street, East St. Louis by Ora Mason, 30 years old, who interfered as a peacemaker in a quarrel between Bowen and Clarence Dixon, 20 years old, of 1324 Russell avenue, East St. Louis. Bowen died 15 minutes later at St. Mary's Hospital. He lived at 918 Piggott avenue.

Mason, after the shooting, ran out of the saloon, pursued by Dixon.

At 2:30 this morning Mason walked into police headquarters and surrendered. He made a statement to the police and confessed to the whole affair.

Joseph Dixon, an older brother of Clarence Dixon, said Bowen and the younger Dixon first had a dispute in a dance hall over the saloon. They went down to the saloon, still quarreling. They had about become reconciled when Mason walked up and asked what the trouble was. Clarence Dixon replied it was none of his business.

Mason is said to have then drawn a revolver, which Clarence Dixon grabbed. As Bowen advanced toward the struggling men the revolver was discharged, the bullet striking Bowen in the left side.

Bowen ran to the sidewalk and as he staggered past a window it is alleged that Mason, no longer at grips with Dixon, raised the revolver and fired through the window, the second bullet also entering Bowen's left side. When Dixon started after Mason the latter fired three shots at Dixon. Bowen fell in an alley nearby and was taken to the hospital.

FATHER OF ST. LOUIS DENTIST 'UNDOUBTEDLY DEAD' IN TURKEY

A dispatch to the Post-Dispatch last night from Washington told of the result of inquiries made in Turkey, at the request of Representative Igoe of St. Louis, as to the safety of the parents and other near relatives of Hovanes H. Karian, a St. Louis dentist. The family was living in the Armenian town of Rusenig when the war began.

Igoe was advised by the Secretary of State yesterday, the dispatch said, that according to a cable from the American Consul at Harput, Turkey, Karian's father, Hagop Karian, was "undoubtedly dead." His mother, brother, sister and other members of the family it was stated, are living safely and comfortably at Deielzor.

The Consul stated that he received word from Mrs. Karian that the present situation of the family was brought about "through the personal kindness of the Sultan." No further details as to this, or as to the cause of the elder Karian's death, appeared in the dispatch.

Karian, who has an office in the Navarre Building, and who rooms at 1009 Pine street, last heard from his parents in a letter dated July 20 last.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Color, Gloss and Attractiveness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a 50-cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Weyth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—ADV.

AMERICAN SHIPS ON BLACK LI[illegible] BY GREAT BRITAIN

All But Two of Them Owned by the Trans-Atlantic Co., Headed by Richard G. Wagner.

LONDON, March 11.—The latest blacklist of neutral shipping prescribed to British charterers by the trade division of the Admiralty, on the charge that they either represent Teutonic capital or have indulged in unneutral activities, contains the names of 125 ships and includes 13 vessels flying the American flag.

The bulk of the American vessels on the black list still is represented by boats owned by the American Transatlantic Co., of which Richard G. Wagner of Milwaukee, Wis., is president, the ships of that company barred numbering 11.

The only American additions to the list are the schooner Edgar W. Murdock, owned by Carleton, Norwood & Co., of Rockport, Me., and the steamer Maverick, owned by J. F. Craig of San Francisco.

Since the issue of the preceding list 24 vessels have been removed. The Spanish and Brazilian flags are no longer represented. Sweden still heads the list and other Scandinavian countries are liberally represented. The number of Dutch ships listed shows a considerable increase.

MISSOURI NATIONAL GUARD OFFERS ITS AID IN MEXICO TO THE WAR DEPARTMENT

Infantry, Cavalry and Artillery, Consisting of About 4000 Men, Could Move Within 48 Hours, Says Adjt.-Gen. O'Meara.

The services of the Missouri National Guard, consisting of artillery, infantry and cavalry, were formally offered to the War Department for employment in Mexico, in a telegram sent yesterday from Jefferson City by Adjutant-General John B. O'Meara, acting in accord with Brigadier-General H. C. Clark of Nevada. The telegram requested that if it is decided to send any extra troops to the border that the Missouri militia be accorded an early right to go.

The Adjutant-General told a Post-Dispatch correspondent at the capital last night that the Missouri troops have all the necessary equipment except horses and that it could be ready to move, if necessary, within 48 hours.

The Missouri militia consists of four regiments of infantry, a battalion of artillery, composed of three batteries of four guns each, one troop of cavalry, a signal corps, hospital corps and a complete staff of general officers, making about 4000 men in all.

Would Go to Concentration Camp.

In the event the guardsmen are called they probably will get five days in which to arrange their personal affairs. At the end of that time they will go to some concentration camp, where they will be examined physically, and those that are accepted will be mustered into the service of the United States. They will then be formed into brigades and divisions and probably will be sent to a larger concentration camp for final training.

Of the four infantry regiments, the First, with headquarters in St. Louis, has an active force of 900 men. The second, headquarters at Pierce City, has 813; the Third, headquarters at Kansas City, has 828, and the Fourth, headquarters at St. Joseph, has 897.

The full strength of each regiment is 1200 men. In the event they are called for duty recruiting officers will be left at the various headquarters to enlist enough men to insure the full complement.

The Signal Corps, headquarters at St. Joseph, has 162 men; the Ambulance Corps, headquarters at Kansas City, has 47, and Troop B, St. Louis, has 125 men.

Equipment in Readiness.

Adjutant-General O'Meara said that the equipment of all these forces is in readiness and is the same as that used in the United States army. The infantrymen are armed with the new Springfield rifle and each battery has four modern three-inch guns.

In addition, he said, there is a complete outfit of clothing, tents, ammunition, bedding, drugs, ambulances, munitions and provender wagons, kitchen tents, stoves and all the other requisites for taking the field.

Gen. Clark, who is at the head of the state military organization, told a Post-Dispatch correspondent at his home at Nevada last night that he did not think state troops would be called out unless it becomes necessary to intervene in Mexico. He declared, however, that the entire organization is in such a state of efficiency that it could entrain within 21 hours of receiving notice.

"If there should be intervention," Gen. Clark said, "it is almost certain that the National Guard will be called out, as the regular army has only 25,000 men available in this country."

Missouri's Offer First In.

That Missouri troops will be among the first state organizations called into the national service, if any are called, was indicated by dispatches from Washington saying that Col. Arthur B. Donnelly of St. Louis had offered the First Regiment for service before any similar offer had been received from any other state militia.

Officers and enlisted men at the First Regiment Armory, Grand and Manchester avenues, were enthusiastic over the prospects of "getting a shot at the Mexicans," as Capt. R. M. Rombauer of Company B expressed it. Capt. Frank M. Rumbold of Battery A and Capt. E. A. Heitkamp of Troop B both declared their commands could be gotten ready on short notice.

The First Regiment is composed of 12 companies, forming three battalions. Capt. Rombauer's is the smallest of the St. Louis companies, having only 65 men, but he said it was well equipped. He enumerated the following as part of the company's supplies on hand:

Khaki and olive drab uniforms, dress uniforms, service hats, leggings, flannel shirts, bed sacks, woolen blankets, ponchos, shelter tents (one-half of a tent to each man), rifles, bayonets, canteens, knapsacks, haversacks, cartridge belts, cups, knives, forks, meat cans, spoons, first-aid packages, mattocks, picks, shovels, wire cutters, hand axes, large tents, etc.

Battery A Ready for Duty.

Capt. Rumbold said that Battery A's 125 men were ready for duty but that there was room for 50 more good men. The battery has four guns, eight caissons, battery and forge wagon, store wagon, carpenter's and horseshoer's tools, leather to repair harness, extra straps and buckles, six months' "war supply" of extra parts for the pieces, three transportation wagons, tents and cooking outfit. Each man has his uniform, two pairs of trousers, two changes of underwear, socks and shoes, a knapsack, haversack, knife, fork, spoon, cup, revolver and cartridge belt, hat, two pairs of gloves, meat can, first-aid package, slicker and half of a shelter tent with a pole and five pegs.

All the St. Louis military commands drill at least once a week. On Thursday nights the First Regiment officers meet at the Armory, where they go through saber drill and hear lectures on military matters. The term of enlistment in the militia is three years. The average training of today's personnel is about 18 months.

Troop B Ready for Action.

Troop B, Missouri's only cavalry command, is ready for Mexican service on 24 hours' notice, its commanding officer, Capt. Heitkamp, said. All that would be necessary is that the United States Quartermaster's Department in St. Louis furnish some 55 horses, and these, according to Capt. Heitkamp, the Government officials can provide in a day.

The troop has all the rest of its equipment, including rifles, sabers, revolvers, clothing, tents, hospital equipment, horse equipment, blankets, ammunition and field wagons. Its 65 men are well drilled and there is a waiting list of 40 or 50 recruits from whom enough can be enlisted to make the full complement of 80 men.

The company is preparing for a regular inspection by Maj. M. M. McNamee of the Fifteenth Cavalry, which is to take place March 24. Capt. Heitkamp declared his troop is composed of picked men because more have offered to enlist than could be used. The troop drills twice a week at its armory, Oakland and Macklind avenues, where it has seven acres of parade ground. A United States Army Sergeant assists the Captain and noncommissioned officers.

The troop is directly under the command of the Adjutant-General and is attached to no regiment. Capt. Heitkamp is the only commissioned cavalry officer actually in the State service. On a week's hike during the State encampments last summer the troop came through an endurance test in which the men were in the saddle 13 hours a day without injury to a single man and with all the animals except one horse in good condition. The men enlist for three years and several are serving a second enlistment.

Adjt.-Gen. O'Meara Says Col. Donnelly's Offer Was a Breach of Discipline

JEFFERSON CITY, March 11.

A POST-DISPATCH correspondent learned tonight that Col. Arthur B. Donnelly, commanding the First Regiment, at St. Louis, probably will receive a reprimand because of his offer telegraphed to the War Department to send the regiment to Mexico.

Adjutant-General O'Meara, discussing Col. Donnelly's offer of the First Regiment without consulting the head of the department here, said:

"I consider the action of subordinate officers in making such an offer without the sanction of the department a grave breach of discipline. It is worse. It was both impudent and uncalled for. It would not have been more imprudent for a Lieutenant of the First Regiment to offer to send troops out than for the Colonel of the regiment to make such an offer without the sanction of his commanding officers."

Last year the Post-Dispatch printed 10,294 Agent Wanted Ads, 3540 more than appeared in the Globe-Democrat, Republic, Star and Times combined.

FALL TENNIS AND GOLF PERMITS

Issue of Them by Park Commissioner Will Begin Tomorrow.

Park Commissioner Cunliff will begin to issue free tennis and golf permits tomorrow to those who apply in person at headquarters on the third floor of the Municipal Courts Building. The rush for reservations began several weeks ago, and already there have been applications for 185 golf and 295 tennis permits.

The golf links will be equipped this summer with small dressing rooms in addition to the 19 that were available last year. These rooms are rented at $5 for the season, and there is a waiting list of about 30 already. The charge last season for lockers was $2, but this summer the department will reduce the price of upper lockers to $1.50, because they are not in as great demand as the lower ones. More than half of the 1028 lockers already have been reserved.

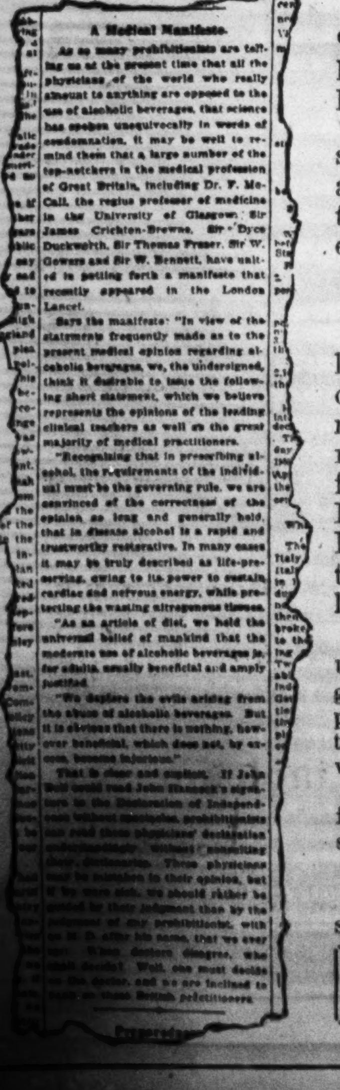
High Medical Authorities Recommend Moderate Use of Alcoholic Stimulants



A Medical Manifesto.

As so many prohibitionists are telling us at the present time that all the physicians of the world who really amount to anything are opposed to the use of alcoholic beverages, that science has spoken unequivocally in words of condemnation, it may be well to remind them that a large number of the top-notchers in the medical profession of Great Britain, including Dr. F. McCall, the regius professor of medicine in the University of Glasgow; Sir James Crichton-Browne, Sir Dyce Duckworth, Sir Thomas Fraser, Sir W. Gowers and Sir W. Bennett, have united in putting forth a manifesto that recently appeared in the London Lancet.

Says the manifesto: "In view of the statements frequently made as to the present medical opinion regarding alcoholic beverages, we, the undersigned, think it desirable to issue the following short statement, which we believe represents the opinions of the leading clinical teachers as well as the great majority of medical practitioners.

"Recognizing that in prescribing alcohol, the requirements of the individual must be the governing rule, we are convinced of the correctness of the opinion so long and generally held, that in disease alcohol is a rapid and trustworthy restorative. In many cases it may be truly described as life-preserving, owing to its power to sustain cardiac and nervous energy, while protecting the wasting nitrogenous tissues.

"As an article of diet, we hold the universal belief of mankind that the moderate use of alcoholic beverages is for adults usually beneficial and amply justified.

"We deplore the evils arising from the abuse of alcoholic beverages. But it is obvious that there is nothing, however beneficial, which does not, by excess, become injurious."

That is clear and explicit. If John Bull could read John Hancock's signature in the Declaration of Independence without spectacles, prohibitionists can read these physicians' declaration understandingly without consulting their dictionaries. These physicians may be mistaken in their opinion, but if we were sick, we should rather be guided by their judgment than by the judgment of any prohibitionist, with an M. D. after his name, that we ever saw. When doctors disagree, who shall decide? Well, one must decide on the doctor, and we are inclined to [illegible] these British practitioners.

The reproduction shown here was clipped from the editorial page of one of the leading dailies. It expresses the sentiments of some of the world's famous physicians on the value of alcoholic stimulants.

When physicians of such wide repute place themselves on record as advocating the moderate use of alcoholic stimulants for medicinal purposes, it is fair to assume that their decisions must be based on knowledge rather than theory.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

has always been recommended for use in the moderate dosage of a tablespoonful in equal amounts of water or milk before meals and on retiring, and the benefits derived from its use has been testified to by many grateful users. Unprejudiced physicians readily prescribe Duffy's when a reliable tonic-stimulant is indicated. Duffy's is also used in many of the reputable hospitals throughout the country because of its purity and reliability.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is absolutely pure and unadulterated, as it is made from the choicest of health giving grains and processed in such a manner as to remove all possible injurious elements. Its widespread sale cannot be attributed to advertising alone, as a product must possess merit to warrant the confidence of the buying public.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey taken as directed assists in benefiting the digestive organs upon which bodily health depends by stimulating the flow of gastric juices, so necessary to digestion.

Give Duffy's a fair trial—join the ranks of those who "Get Duffy's and Keep Well."

DONALD THOMPSON, NOTED WAR PHOTOGRAPHER, BADLY BURNED

Powder Placed in His Pipe—Had Been Warned Not to Show Anti-German Views.

DES MOINES, Io., March 11.—Donald Thompson of Kansas, noted war photographer, is in the Des Moines general hospital, his face badly burned and the sight of one eye probably destroyed as a result of an explosion of powder placed in his smoking tobacco. Thompson recently has been showing moving pictures of war scenes, including some dealing with alleged German atrocities in Belgium. The photographer early this week received a letter warning him to discontinue showing these pictures.

Yesterday Thompson left a pouch of tobacco on the dresser in his hotel room while he was at lunch. When he returned he filled his pipe from the pouch and still held the pouch in one hand while he struck a match. The match ignited the powder in his pipe and in the pouch also.

New Jersey Moose Elect Delegates.

TRENTON, N. J., March 11.—The Progressive party of New Jersey today selected delegates and alternates at large and district delegates to the national convention of that party, to be held at Chicago in June. The delegation is uninstructed.

Q-BAN DARKENS YOUR GRAY HAIR

Try It! Harmless, No Dye, but Darkens All Your Gray Hair Evenly—Stops Dandruff.

Make this experiment. Look in the glass, see how gray, faded, dry streaked with gray or just turning gray, your hair is and how it makes you look old. Now apply Q-Ban Hair Color Restorer to your hair and scalp like a shampoo. Do this for only a few times. Look in your glass again. See how all your gray hair and entire head of hair has turned to an even, beautiful, dark shade with not even a trace of gray showing. You look ten years younger, and all your hair is now fluffy, soft, glossy, lustrous, beautifully dark and fascinating. Q-Ban is absolutely harmless, no dye or sticky mess and sold on a guarantee to darken all your gray hair or money refunded. Only 50c for a big 7-oz. bottle. At Johnson-Enderle-Pauley Drug Co., 7 drug stores, or Wolff-Wilson drug store, St. Louis, Mo. Out-of-town people supplied by parcel post. Call, write or telephone.—(ADV.)

NEXT FUR SALE HERE TO SURPASS THAT IN LONDON

More Than 1,500,000 Skins Will Be Offered at Auction Opening Week From Tomorrow.

More than 1,500,000 skins from all parts of the world have been listed for Funsten Bros. & Co.'s third and last fur auction sale of the present season, to begin a week from tomorrow and continue throughout the week. P. B. Fouke, president of the company and auctioneer of the furs, said last night that he expected this sale to amount to $2,000,000, making the total fur business of St. Louis for the season ending May 1, more than $7,000,000.

Two previous auction sales, attended by buyers from all the large American cities and from the principal fur markets of Europe, were held this winter by the Funsten company. The last sale, from Jan. 12 to 15, brought $1,050,000 for more than 700,000 skins. That was the largest auction of furs held in America up to that time. Early last winter an auction of furs for the United States Government brought about $250,000. The daily business on sealed bids of the Funsten company and other large St. Louis fur dealers this winter has run into large figures.

Fouke said St. Louis is rapidly getting to be the greatest fur market in the world, gaining by leaps and bounds in volume of business upon London, heretofore acknowledged the fur trade center.

London Sale to Be Surpassed.

A comparison of the number of skins listed with the Funsten company for the coming sale and the number listed with London's largest fur auction house, C. M. Lampson & Co., for its March sale, to be held about a week after the St. Louis sale, showed considerably more furs will be sold here. This is the first time a St. Louis sale has surpassed the corresponding London sale.

Half the number of furs to be sold here are muskrat. The London house also has 1,000,000 muskrats listed. The Funsten firm has 135,000 each of skunk and opossum and 100,000 raccoon. Lampson has 280,000 skunks, but only 70,000 opossums and 40,000 raccoons. Of silver foxes, the highest-priced furs on the market, Funsten has 300 and Lampson has only 50. Fouke has been informed that the Lampson people expect their sale to total $1,000,000.

300 Buyers Expected Here.

The Funsten company also has 1700 white foxes and 1400 cross foxes, while the London house has none of the former and only 200 of the latter. These also are costly furs. For this sale furs have been shipped to St. Louis from many parts of the world. Thousands of foxes, ermine, sables and martens have come from Russia. Canada has furnished some fine foxes, wolves and bear. The muskrat, skunk, opossum and raccoon come in greatest numbers from the American states.

It is expected that at least 300 buyers will be here. They will begin to arrive about Wednesday and will inspect the furs, which have been graded and assorted in lots at the Funsten warehouse, First and Olive streets. The auction will be held at the Funsten Fur Exchange, Second and Elm streets.

No Such Thing as Defensive Arms, Berlin's Contention

the United States did not take up its position as expressed by its President, Thomas Jefferson, that merchant ships should be armed on account of the presence of privateers until the coming of the war between England and France, which brought about a situation calling for a decision.

"Although undoubtedly doing away with pirates and privateers ipso facto, it did away with the necessity of arming merchant ships, and thereafter merchant ships really had no legitimate excuse to be armed. The necessity for the rule having been done away with, the rule itself ceased to be operative, though the contingency for the concrete application of this proposition did not arise until the present war."

Herr von Jagow pointed out that in the war between Germany and France in 1870, the Turco-Grecian, Spanish-American, Russo-Japanese, Balkan and other wars, nothing happened on the sea to bring the question up. The Foreign Secretary expressed the belief that had the question been brought up during peace times a majority of the nations undoubtedly would have taken the view that conditions today no longer justified armed merchantmen and would have recognised the change of the day accordingly.

"The only remaining excuse for arming merchant ships by the English is that submarines have fired without warning on Swedish merchant ships. This was done, as already explained, because British ships fired upon submarines on sight and in retaliation against England for stopping food for the civil population, although Germany offered that this food be distributed to civil population direct under the auspices of the American embassy. This food blockade has already been declared illegal by the Government of the United States.

"The imperial Government, however, might be willing to concede where such retaliation, however justified as reprisal for an attempt recognized by the United States as illegal to starve its women and children—that such retaliation shall not be carried out in that form when it affects the rights of neutrals."

Considers Discussion Useless.

I gained the impression that Herr von Jagow considers useless negotiations on questions of defensive armament, holding as he appears to, that there can be no armament wholly defensive and which may not be used offensively, and that the German Government is disinclined to recede from that standpoint.

Returning again to remark that Germany does not want to change international law, but merely calls attention to the change that half a century of time has made in law, and that a decision should be made in accordance with such change, the Foreign Secretary said:

"International law, written, except when it appears in treaties or conventions, such as Paris and various Hague conventions or otherwise great entente, depends upon immemorial customs and the general principle of law recognized by all nations. The principle that the reason for a rule ceasing the rule itself falls, is a principle firmly incorporated in the equitable system of law of both England and the United States. The German Government in this matter not only appeals to the sense of reasen of the United States and its Government, but to those principles of equity and justice on which the whole system of American law and justice are based."

Price of Glass to Be Raised.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 11.—The leading machine widow glass interests today announced a general increase of from 10 to 15 per cent in the prices of all grades and sizes of window glass for the United States and Canadian markets, effective at once. It was stated that the hand factories would likely follow this lead without delay.

AVIATOR HOLDING AMERICAN FLIGHT RECORD IS KILLED

W. C. Robinson Falls 13,000 Feet When Trying for Altitude Mark in Iowa.

GRINNELL, Io., March 11.—W. C. (Billy) Robinson, an Iowa aviator and head of the Grinnell Aero School, was killed this afternoon when his biplane, in which he was trying for an altitude record, plunged to the ground from a height of about 13,000 feet. As the machine struck the ground the petrol tank exploded and the resultant fire destroyed the plane and burned the aviator's body almost beyond recognition.

The accident occurred near Evart, Io., 10 miles from this city. Robinson was 32 years old and left a wife and four children. He had lived at Grinnell practically all his life. He had been flying about six years and was holder of the American record for sustained flight, which he won a year ago, flying without a stop from Des Moines to Chicago. Over the latter city he became confused owing to a heavy fog and finally landed several miles to the south, near Hammond, Ind. He flew about 400 miles in 4 hours and 26 minutes.

FOR A BAD COUGH

Here is a fine old-fashioned recipe for coughs, colds or catarrh trouble that has been used for many years with great success. Get from your druggist 1 oz. of Parmint (double strength) and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and 4 oz. of granulated sugar. Take one tablespoonful 4 times a day.

No more racking your whole body with a cough. Clogged nostrils should open, air passages of your head clear up so you can breathe freely. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has a stubborn cough, or hard cold or catarrh in any form, should give this perscription a trial. —ADV.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets.

The secret of keeping young is to feel young. To do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle.

Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action, yet always effective.

They bring about that exuberance of spirit, that natural buoyancy which should be enjoyed by everyone, by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

You will know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets by their olive color. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

ORPHAN BOY, 14, FATALLY BURNED IN STARTING FIRE

Sister Seriously Injured in Trying to Save Youth's Life at Madison.

Charles Eskew, 14 years old, an inmate of the Christian Orphans' Home, St. Louis, died yesterday afternoon in St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Granite City, from burns suffered in the morning in a gasoline explosion at the home of his sister, Mrs. Harry Klum, in Madison.

Mrs. Klum, who is 29 years old, was seriously burned in trying to save her brother. Her face, hands and shoulders were scarred, and most of her hair was burned off.

The boy, who went to his sister's home Friday night to stay over Sunday, got up at 7:30 to start a fire in the kitchen range. He is supposed to have mistaken gasoline for kerosene, and when he poured the liquid upon lighted kindling wood, an explosion shattered the range and set fire to the boy's clothing.

He ran into Mrs. Klum's bedroom, and she sprang up, in her night dress, and, with her hair unbound, threw the bed clothing about him. The fire enveloped her, but her husband succeeded in putting out the flame. His hands were burned. The house took fire and was considerably damaged.

A similar accident happened at another house in Madison at about the same time, when Vietsak Novietski, 24, a laborer for the American Car & Foundry Co., used gasoline in trying to kindle a fire. The clothing was burned from his legs, but a woolen undershirt saved the upper part of his body. He suffered severe burns, but is expected to recover.

$5,000,000 to Teach Common People.

BUDAPEST, March 11.—One of the most notable charities since the beginning of the war is the gift of approximately $5,000,000 by Frau Irma Krall, who died recently, for the education of the common people. Frau Krall, wealthy when she married for the first time, enhanced her fortune with each of her five marriages, and died worth many millions.

TEACHERS CALL MASS MEETING

Will Assemble Tomorrow to Urge New State Constitution.

GRINER PITCHES GREAT BALL AND CARDS WIN, 6--4

Working Last Five Frames of 12-Inning Contest, Right-Hander Allows Only One Hit—Steele Also Ready to Start Season.

HALL IS CLOUTED BY SAN ANTONIO BATTERS

"Sea Lion" Is Found for Four Runs in First Session by Texas Leaguers, but Holds 'Em Safe for the Next Two.

Special to the Post-Dispatch

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 11.—If "Nancy" Stair, a lanky San Antonio southpaw, had not gone wild in the eighth inning, passing Bob Bescher with the bases full, the Cards would have tasted defeat this afternoon. That pass forced Walt Cruise over with the run that made the count four all. Then there was nothing doing on either side in the run-making line until the twelfth when Huggins' henchmen pushed a pair of markers over the pan on some wild heaving by the Bronchos. That gave the Cards the verdict, 6—4.

A riotous first inning, in which "Sea Lion" Hall played the part of the "goat" to perfection, gave the local tossers a bevy of four runs. Those Bronc's sure did fatten up on Charley's offerings in that fatal frame. They hit everything he served up. Some of them must have had a personal grievance against the "Sea Lion," the way they cracked his shins with line drives. After getting his pins in the way of a couple of smashes, "Sea Lion" concluded discretion was the better part of valor and fell back on the old formula of "pitch and duck."

The Bronchos, though, got all the runs out of their system in the first inning and were very, very tame thereafter. Hall handed them ciphers in the second and third and Bob Steele and Dan Griner, who finished up the game, refused to let the locals even come close to a run.

Dan Griner Is in Form.

Steele went to the hill in the fourth and held the Bronchos to one hit in the four sessions he showed, that one bingle being a hopper that got away from Jack Miller by means of a bad bound. Dan Griner worked the last five frames. Balenti's two-base clout in the ninth was the only bingle registered off Dan.

The big fellow sure looked good. The way the Bronchos clawed at his "spitter," which he let loose today for the first time this season, was anything but pleasing to the San Antonio enthusiasts. Dan whiffed six men.

The Cards started out like a Texas norther at its best, chasing two markers over in the first and another in the second. After that they went runless until the eighth. Then the base on balls to Bescher with the sacks loaded enabled Hug's men to tie it up. After that it was merely a question of whether the Cards would be able to score again before dark. There wasn't any danger of the Broncs getting a run with Griner on the job. Hug's men broke it up in the twelfth, being aided by a couple of wide heaves.

Another game is carded for tomorrow. Lamline and Jasper are slated to hurl. The score:

Infield Must Hold Up.

"If my infield stands up under fire we will have a good ball club this year, always supposing that the pitching staff works as well as it should," said Manager Miller Huggins of the Cardinals tonight.

"But if the infield doesn't stand up, well———." Huggins paused here as if the mere contemplation of such a prospect was too unpleasant for comment.

"The two weeks we have been in camp," continued the manager of the Cards, "have served to show me several things. For one, I have a most promising shortstop in Roy Corhan. Again I have a likely looking young catcher in Tony Brottem. Likewise, Bob Steele, southpaw, and Charley Hall, righthander, look like two of the best pitchers I have picked up in a long time. Then again, let me

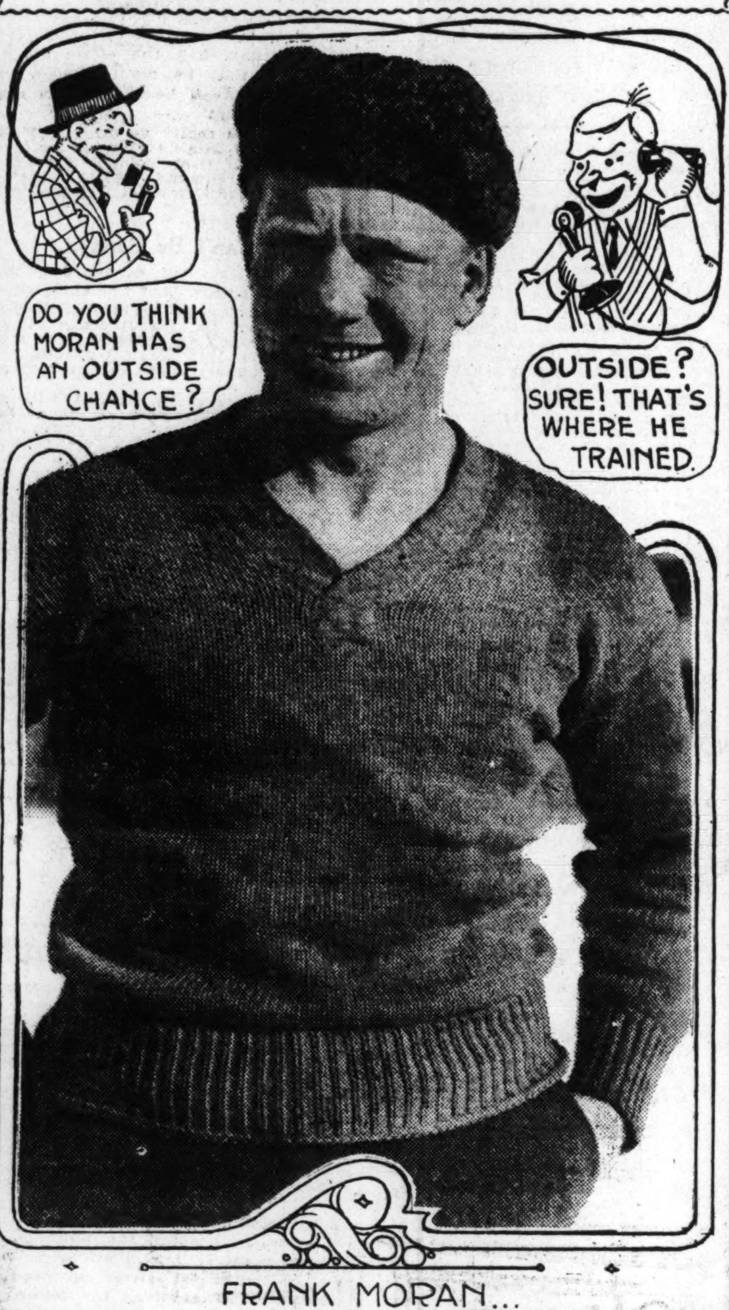
Moran in Great Condition, This Recent Picture Seems to Show



DO YOU THINK MORAN HAS AN OUTSIDE CHANCE?
OUTSIDE? SURE! THAT'S WHERE HE TRAINED.

FRANK MORAN...

Public Pays to See Reich Spar Willard, but Match Is Called Off by Jones

As a Result New York Boxing Commission Puts Ban on All Future Training Exhibitions by the Champion, to Which Admission Fee Is Charged.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 11.—Jess Willard added another notch of unpopularity to the butt of his old blunderbuss, today, by refusing to spar with Adonis Al. Reich, at the Pioneer Sporting Club.

There was a pretty row over it. Frederick Wenck of the State Athletic Commission roared like a Maine moose over the affair. Wenck, defending the common people with might and main, insisted that Willard box Reich or he and his handlers, managers and sponsors could consider all future two-bit matinees at the Pioneer Club very null and void.

The place was packed to suffocation and there were constant cries for Reich. Wenck sought out Jack Curley, one of Willard's ring managers, and said he wanted to know WHY the great gathering that had trooped into the Amsterdam Opera House to see the bout was to be disappointed.

"See here, Jack Curley," said Wenck, "this bout has been advertised freely for a whole week. I tell you now, and I tell you right to your nose, that Willard will have to go through with the promised setto or I will prohibit all future training on the part of Willard."

"Ah, dear sir," wailed Jacques, "I know nothing of the matter. Poor old Tom made the arrangements, whatever they are, and he is sick in bed. I have no authority to order Jess to do anything, without Tom Jones being right here to make it a quorum. You understand my position in the matter, I take it."

"I don't understand yours, Jones' or Willard's. The people in this house have paid honest money for honest treatment, and I'm here to see that they are not bunked."

Wenck cast a fatherly eye over his dear common people and pitched his roar an octave higher. He called Jess out of the improvised ring and said:

Wenck Interogates Jess.

"I want to know, sir, whether you intend to box with Reich this afternoon?"

"It is all pigeon English to me, Mister Commissioner," added Jess. "I don't know a thing about it. My hands are tied. I couldn't make any changes in my sparring staff without the nod from those higher up."

"Then you refuse to spar with Reich, is that your answer?" asked Wenck.

"I'm half afraid it is," ventured Willard.

"Then I suspend all these public training bouts, Mr. Willard," snapped Wenck. "You'll do no more training for gate receipts."

"I'm very much obliged to you, sir," said the great big fellow in a meek little voice. With that, Willard climbed through the ropes and resumed his daily grind, safe from the official ban for the afternoon, at least.

Jack Curley excused Willard's action, in refusing to put the gloves on with Reich, by saying that Jess was Oregon-booted, like himself, in the matter of doing things without the offcial O. K. of the grip-racked barber of Kewanee.

"Jess would rather do his work in a private room of the New York Athletic Club, than out here in public. He doesn't like it and he would still be working in Chicago, if Rickard hadn't made him come on to finish his training here."

"Won't the impression go broadcast that he was a bit timid about sparring with Reich?" was asked Curley.

He's Afraid of Losing, Jack.

"That is so much silly rot. Jess Willard isn't afraid of anything on the earth above nor in the sea below. I know that because Jess told me so."

Tom Jones, manager of Jess Willard, who engaged Al Reich to act as a sparring partner to the champion for the sum of $50, is confined to his bed at his hotel, but over the phone he offered the following explanation of Willard's failure to box with Al Reich today:

"I have been laid up for the last few days and Jess and I have not discussed his training plans in that time. I engaged Reich to act as sparring partner for Jess, beginning this Saturday, but I never at any time announced that Jess would box with Reich Saturday or any other day. That's entirely up to the champion."

Moran Boxes Two Heavies and Is Full of "Pepper;" Sends $33.57 to Charity

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
NEW YORK, March 11.

WHILE battling chaos reigned supreme at the Pioneer Sporting Club this afternoon, all was as quiet and serene as an Eskimo fishing hole at Frank Moran's quarters.

The husky blond boxed with Bill McKinnon and Bartley Madden, and when his daily work was done he counted up the gym gate receipts, amounting to $33.37, and sent the money down to the Holy Name Mission on the Bowery.

Moran worked with a will, his week's lay-off leaving him as full of "pep" as a rookie starting for the front.

Moran said that he would box today, and barring accident will work daily from now on.

Cleveland Stock Transferred.

CLEVELAND, O., March 11.—Transfer of the Cleveland American Association club was formally made here today when the Bankers' Committee having in charge the interests of President Somers turned the property over to the Cantillon-Timme Co. Announcement was also made that the club has taken a lease of 10 years on Swayne Field at Toledo.

MURPHY DEFEATS WHITE IN CLEVER EIGHT-ROUND GO

St. Louis Boxer, at His Best, Outdoes Chicago Rival in Every Period.

VISITOR NEAR KNOCKOUT

But Experience and Generalship Save Him From Disaster in Pinches.

By Harry S. Sharpe.

Jimmy Murphy, boxing true to the good form he has been displaying in recent bouts and looking stronger and bigger than formerly, won from Frankie White of Chicago at the South Broadway Athletic Club last night, outfighting the Illinois boy in every round and outpunching him in most of them.

That was what won for him. Had boxing skill, speed and ring generalship been the deciding factors, White would have been handed the palm.

The weight agreed upon for this bout was 116 pounds ringside, and when they stepped on the scales each one balanced the beam at exactly that figure, dressed read for the ring. This is heavier than Murphy has been in the habit of weighing, but it suited him just right last night.

It was not too high or low for White, either; but he was not in the good condition Murphy was and showed the need of more training. This probably was because he took the bout on short notice, substituting for Eddie Coulon, whose match with Murphy was declared off a week ago.

White on Defensive.

White, seeming to realize his disadvantage right from the start, boxed a defensive contest; that is, he boxed it with the evident intention of staying the eight rounds. However, he didn't do this by covering up and running away, but he assumed tactics that had the appearance of action and aggressiveness by doing a lot of leading, feinting, dancing about the ring, and falling in upon Murphy for a clinch. One of the chief features of White's exhibition was the frequency with which he missed swings and uppercuts. Some of these were started at a distance that made it impossible for them to land, but they had the effect of driving Murphy back out of danger.

Murphy boxed carefully, and made nearly all of his punches count. He tried hard for a knockout and rocked White a number of times with left hooks and straight rights, but White, displaying splendid generalship, made a great pretense of not being hurt and added to the impression by some fast swinging of his arms and some lively stepping.

Murphy's punches were better placed and timed at all stages of the bout, and he was much stronger. White began to tire with the ending of the fourth round, and after that had to forsake much of his fancy boxing, but experience carried him through the second half of the bout, though he was almost finished in the seventh.

The only real knockdown of the bout came in the fourth round, when Murphy upset White with a hard right-hand punch to the jaw, but the Chicago boy was up before the referee could start his count.

"Kid" Bandy and Charley Dalwitz boxed eight rounds at 128 pounds that was a nip-and-tuck affair all the way. The boxing was only fairly good, but the hitting was hard. There were indications in the first round that the bout would be a rough one, but Referee Eddie Randall held a tight rein on the boys and compelled them to observe the rules with reasonable measure. Each of the boxers displayed a tendency now and then to transgress the rules by doing some holding, and hitting while holding, but the referee checked them at once. It was good work on the part of the official.

Arthur Burke, boxing for the first time as a professional, was knocked out in the seventh round of a bout at 122 pounds by Billy Cole. The latter knew too much of the game for Burke, and though the latter boxed well and showed great courage up to the time of his defeat, the ex-amateur received a good beating.

Burke's father was opposed to his son becoming a professional boxer, and only recently gave his consent after constant urging. Burke has been very successful as an amateur, but he will find the professional game a little harder picking.

At the conclusion of the bouts Referee Eddie Randall handed down his decisions, naming Murphy, Dalwitz and Cole as the winners.

Panzareta Sets A Record at Hot Springs Opening

Crowd of 5000 Is on Hand for Revival of "Sport of Kings" at Arkansas Spa.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 11.—Today was a "Red Letter" day in the history of this city, for it marked the revival of thoroughbred racing, and 5000 persons cheered lustily when the horses were called to the post for the first race and it was realized that the "Sport of Kings" was once more established here.

The crowd was a representative one, composed of people of high standing from all over the United States. The business houses in the city closed from 1 o'clock until 5, due to a proclamation by the Mayor.

For a feature, a handicap was provided and this fell to Panzareta, which ran a mile in 1m. 39s., a new track record. The previous mark was 1m. 39 2-5s. The crack mare was in front all the way.

Athletics Reach Camp.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., March 11.—Twenty members of the Philadelphia Athletics and 17 Brooklyn National players arrived here tonight on the steamer Commanche. The Brooklyn contingent left later for Daytona, where the team will train. Manager Connie Mack and Owner Thomas Shibe of the Athletics reached here Thursday with a number of players.

Amherst Paddlers Win.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 11.—Amherst's swimming team easily defeated Harvard's tonight. The score was 49 to 15.

Unequaled Substitute Strength May Land 1916 Pennant for Fielder Jones' Brownies

Both Right and Left-Hand Batting Teams Available

No Other Club in the Major Leagues Has as Many Capable Second-String Players as Ball's Outfit.

Even George Sisler, Rated the Most Promising Young Star in the Game, May Fill a Utility Position.

By W. J. O'Connor.
Post-Dispatch Staff Correspondent.

PALESTINE, Texas, March 11.

"HOW will the Browns face the barrier?"

If your pet ambition in life is to lose forever the friendship of Fielder Jones, simply slam that question at the Brown manager. He considers it nothing short of unvarnished impertinence, but we had the temerity to ask him on the eve of our departure from camp. If the look Jones gave us froze on his face he would be permanently disguised.

Albeit he knows the answer, but will cherish it as a secret until April 8. Throughout the spring series with the Cardinals it is his plan to disguise the personnel of his 1916 club by frequent changes. Four days before the A. L. season opens he will announce his lineup. In those final four days he will have morning and afternoon practice at Sportsman's, when the finishing touches will be put to the team which is destined to lead St. Louis fans out of the wilderness of second division.

When Jones started South on Feb. 28 he told the Post-Dispatch that he had a team the equal of any in the American League. "If the Browns don't win it will be MY fault, and in that case I'm through with baseball," said the man who has managed clubs in six pennant races without ever finishing below third place.

He has had a thorough look at his material in the two weeks spent at Palestine, two weeks of perfect weather and assiduous work. He now comes to bat with this statement:

Second String Men Strong.

"I THINK more of my club today than I did two weeks ago. I'll tell you why: I've got it on 'em all in reserve strength. I intend to carry the limit of players and my club should be less vulnerable than Achilles. There isn't a position that I can't plug in case of injury. I can stand for a lot of tough breaks that the other fellows can't."

From this we infer that Jones will tag along with nearly all the players now in camp, with the exception of one catcher and four or five of the pitchers. That materially minimizes the task of determining who will be with the club after the season opens but it doesn't indicate in the least what the first line of defense will be. To solve that there are two important things to consider:

Jones must proportion his batters so as to avoid having too many left-handed hitters. Some of the brightest stars on Brown firmament now swing from the portside. They must suffer.

The second thing to remember is that Jones hasn't weakened in his resolve to make a pitcher of George Sisler, although the Michigan Marvel is the one man whose batting and base-running stands out so far.

Therefore let's subtract Sisler's name from the list of candidates running for office in the outlying districts and try first to pick the gardeners.

Selecting the Outfield Easy.

EXCLUSIVE of Sisler there are: Marsans, Shotton, Miller, Tobin and Walker, naming them somewhat in the order of their importance. It is not unlikely that all these fly-chasers will be retained, but it is more a certainty that Shotton will continue in left field while Marsans will be assigned to center. Tobin and Walker are to jointly share the right-field berth, Walker to bat against southpaws.

Tobin has speed to recommend him. His arm is the equal of Walker's, and the world respects Tillie's whip. Miller hasn't the arm of either of these but he's more aggressive on the bases. All three are great fielders. The team is wonderfully well fortified in a defensive way in the outfield. Tobin, Marsans, Shotton and Walker have good arms and are death on fly balls, Shotton being the weakest member of the trio in this department of the game. Withal Bert is no slouch. But if he isn't up to snuff, Ward Miller who topped the Terrier hitters and led the outlaws in base-running, will be ready to step in.

The infield is a more troublesome problem. The argument between Babe Borton and Gene Paulette may be carried further, although the railbirds here agree that its eventuality will be a Borton victory. Bill coaxed more passes than any member of the Terrier team last season, and he carries a batting punch. So does Paulette, but Gene isn't exactly wise to Jones' scheme of play. If, however, Paulette is not needed, as present indications predict, he will be farmed out subject to recall in the fall. One thing in his favor is that he's a right-handed hitter. Jones will always need such things, as he's overloaded, now with the kithogues. But first base belongs to Borton almost as securely as second is the property of Del Pratt. There's no play there. McKechnie, who has been operating at the middle bag in practice games here will not be carried longer than is necessary, as he hasn't even signed with the team.

There's a stiff argument at short and another at third. In each instance it is a battle between right and left handed hitters. Because of the preponderance of left-handed hitters in the outfield, the right-handed sluggers on the infield have the edge.

That Lavan-Johnson Duel.

BUT the hardest job of all is to decide between Ernie Johnson and John Lavan. The latter has picked up in his hitting, as Rickey predicted he would. He led the American League shortstops in 1914, but fell down in 1915 to almost nothing. There are vital reasons why he

GEORGE SISLER...

Nothing could show the strength of the Browns' second-string men better than the fact that Sisler may be kept on the bench as a pinch hitter.

Browns' Best Lineup for First Series Game

FIELDER JONES refuses to name his opening day lineup, probably because he himself has his doubts. Furthermore, the pitcher used by the Cards would have some bearing on it. Here's a guess hazarded by the Post-Dispatch's correspondent at the front, presupposing that Huggins will work Leon Ames, who, according to Grover Hartley, a former teammate, is one of the greatest spring pitchers in the game today:

Shotton, lf.
Johnson, ss.
Borton, 1b.
Marsans, cf.
Pratt, 2b.
Tobin, rf.
Deal, 3b.
Hartley, c.
Groom, p.

Of course Jones purposely may conceal his hand in the spring series. But eventually he will come to this.

Meredith Sets New Record in 600 Yards Run

Penn Flyer Does 1m 21 2-5s in Beating Caldwell in Meadowbrook Games.

PHILADELPHIA, March 11.—James E. Meredith, the University of Pennsylvania and Olympic champion runner, hung up a new world's record at the annual indoor athletic meet of the Meadow Brook Club here tonight when he lowered his own figures for 600 yards from 1 minute, 23 2-5 seconds, to 1:21 2-5, and came within one second of equalling the outdoor record for the same distance held by Homer Baker. Meredith defeated David S. Caldwell and James B. Burke of the Boston A. A. and Homer Baker, unattached. Caldwell was second and Baker third. Meredith led all the way.

Summary:

600-yard, special invitation race—Won by J. E. Meredith, University of Pennsylvania; second, David S. Caldwell, Boston A. A.; third, Homer Baker, unattached. Time, 1:21 2-5, breaking the world's indoor record made by Meredith last year on the same track.

Two-mile intercollegiate championship relay—Yale, first (Barker, Rolfe, Cooper, Overton); University of Michigan, second; Cornell, third; University of Maine, fourth. Time—7m. 59s., breaking Middle Atlantic indoor record of 8m. 3 4-5s., held by Yale.

One-mile intercity relay—Boston, first (Halpin, Caldwell, Meaulx, Rose); New York, second; Philadelphia, third. Time—3m. 27s.

High jump—W. M. Oler, Yale, first, 6 ft. 2¾ in.; A. W. Richards, Cornell, second, 6 ft. 1 in.; Harry Barwise, Boston A. A., third, 5 ft. 11¾ in.

ERNIE JOHNSON WILL BE OUT FOR 2 WEEKS

ERNIE JOHNSON, who with Johnny Lavan is waging a battle for the regular short-stopping berth with the Browns, will be out of the game for two weeks, owing to an injury suffered in practice yesterday. This was the doctor's verdict after taking three X-ray pictures at Palestine, Tex., yesterday.

It was found that no bones were broken, but that the tendons were badly torn. A message to the injured player yesterday brought back the following reply:

"Three pictures taken. Nothing broken. Tendons all torn. Doctor says it will be two weeks before I can use it.

"ERNIE JOHNSON."

Billikens Again Lose to Normal Quintet, 39-33

Hansel With 19 Points and Ellsworth With 10 Are Stars for St. L. U. Five.

WARRENSBURG, Mo., March 11.—The St. Louis University five was defeated for the second time by the Normal basket ball squad at Dockery Gym tonight, 39 to 33. The score at the end of the first half was 18 to 18.

Hansel, St. Louis U. forward, and Ellsworth, center, played fast ball and held the Normals to a close score almost to the end of the game. Following is a summary of scores by players: Normals—Menz, forward, 6 goals, 17 free throws; Moles, forward, 5 goals. St. Louis U.—Hansel, forward, 6 goals, 7 free throws; Donohue, forward, 2 goals; Ellsworoth, center, 5 goals. Referee—Sproull, K. U.

Trendall to Box Jarabek at Next S. B. A. C. Show

Pair Have Agreed to Make 145 Pounds at 3 O'Clock for Bout of March 25.

Harry Trendall, pride of the patch, who in his last bout was knocked out by Ted Lewis, the English claimant to the welterweight championship in the seventh round of a scheduled eight-round bout held at the Coliseum, has been matched to meet Sailor Jarabek in the feature bout of the South Broadway A. C. show on March 25.

Jarabek has made a great showing in his bouts this winter and early in the season was returned the winner over Leo Kelly. Trendall, before his bout with Lewis, had been idle for some time, but now he wants to work his way back into favor among the local fans. The bout should be one of the best seen here this year.

Forfeits of $200 have been posted by the boxers guaranteeing weight and appearance. A clause has been inserted in the agreement that neither shall engage in a bout between now and the time of their match.

Trendall and Jarabek have agreed to do 145 pounds at 3 o'clock for their match. The other bouts have not yet been arranged by Match-maker Sofka.

C. B. C. ESSMANS BEAT ST. BARBARAS, 36—2

The C. B. C. Essmans added another victory to their string yesterday by walloping the St. Barbara basket ball five, 36 to 2. The Essmans play two games this week, the Clark Juniors on Wednesday and the Cote Brilliantes Friday. The latter game winds up the season. The lineup:

Essmans (36).	Position.	St. Barbara (2)
Carr (10)	Left forward	Billschneider
Rohan (4)
D. Moriarity	Right forward	Weber
Ganis (8)	Center	Muckeman (2)
Clark (14)	Left guard	Fischer

JONES DEFEATS EWING IN RACQUET TOURNEY

Drummond Jones defeated A. B. Ewing three games to none, in the only match played in the 1916 Racquet Club championship tournament yesterday. The scores were 15—1, 15—10 and 17—14. In the other match scheduled, J. D. P. Francis defaulted to C. A. Pierce. Matches are scheduled to be played throughout the coming week.

Princeton Wrestlers Beat Yale.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 11.—Princeton defeated Yale in wrestling here tonight four bouts to three. Princeton's victories were on decisions. Yale won two bouts on falls and one on decisions.

Manager Bill Carrigan of th ton Red Sox, world's champio terday escorted a squad of si ers to this city whence they last night for Hot Springs, team will do its preliminary tra ing for the coming season.

The Red Sox are the last of the league teams to settle down to work. rest of the Red Sox squad is not expe to join the early birds until another w has elapsed.

In Carrigan's party were the follo players: Anderson, McCabe, Haley, McN Leonard, Thomas (a St. Louis boy, wh developing as a catcher), Janvrin and M riksen.

Besides Carrigan, eight scribes, one toonist, Paul Lannin (son of the owner) two Boston rooters accompanied the pl ers.

Carrigan expressed [illegible] in progress of the Browns and [illegible] ed to hear from the St. Louis club in pennant race. He figured that every in the league, with the exception of Cle land and Philadelphia, had a chance to the flag the coming season.

Champion Willard Appears to Be the Guy That Put the "Stall" in Stalwart

LOSS OF M. A. A. A HARD BLOW TO AMATEUR BOXING

Club's Decision to Abandon the Game Will Weaken This Pastime Here.

ONCE LED THE COUNTRY

n Days of Old the Local Club Had Many Stars, and They Were All "Pure."

By Harry S. Sharpe.

AMATEUR boxing was given the hardest blow it ever received in St. Louis yesterday hen a representative committee of he Missouri Athletic Association letermined that the organization vould take "no more interest in mateur boxing."

This determination is due to the ax methods employed in the government of this sport, until now it is lassed as undesirable by the leading thletic institution of this city.

There was a time when this sport lourished in St. Louis, and several ears ago local clubs vied with each ther in developing the best boxers. Dual tournaments were held and intense nterest manifested in the results, and thletes considered it an honor to "make the team" of their respective lubs. Great rivalry existed between uch clubs as the Missouri A. C., South Broadway A. C., Columbian A. C., Knights of Columbus, Irish-American nd Stag, and fro mthese clubs could e drawn a team of boxers for every lass that would compare favorably with any in the entire United States. Some of these men won national hampionships, and wherever they vere sent to compete, their sportsmanship, clever boxing and knowldge of the rules won praise and pplause.

M. A. C. Fire Killed Interest.

Less than a decade ago tournaments vere given here in which as many as 15 nd 20 bouts were on the program for a ingle night, and some of the tournanents lasted two and three nights beore the finals could be disposed of. The wo clubs that were given greatest redit for promoting this sport and developing the cleverest boxers were the Missouri A. C. and the South Broadway . C. The tournaments these clubs ave may not have been remunerative om a box-office point of view, but the vertising the boys earned for their s more than counter-balanced this. It was not until the Missouri A. C. as destroyed by fire two years ago hat interest in amateur boxing began o wane, and now, on the second anniversary of the conflagration, the lub's successor announces that it has ffaced the sport from its field of operations and has "no more interest in it." The M. A. A. is not to be blamed for lacing the ban on amateur boxing, so ong as the sport and participants are ot to be given the same protection acorded other branches of athletics to eep it above reproach. The Amateur thletic Union must bear the brunt. his organization claims a jurisdiction ver boxing that it arrogantly and unairly exercises. This sport pays into s treasury more than any other single port does, and yet it receives less attention and its participants less protection than any other.

Amateur Rules Need Alteration.

The rules governing amateur boxng are a menace to every participant unless in the hands of experienced officials of calm and sound udgment. A striking illustration of his is found in the possibility, under hese rules, of a boxer being knocked ut three times in the same bout, even hough the contest is limited to three ounds. It is possible for him to be nocked out in every round. Compare this with the more humane provision of the professional rules, which ects that when a boxer cannot reond before the count of 10 he shall ot required to continue. This and any other shortcomings of the A. U.'s rules governing amateur boxng have been repeatedly brought to e attention of this powerful organation, but they have been consistntly ignored, and the rules today are ut little changed from what they ere when adopted in 1887.

The A. A. U. is responsible, too, r the decadence in amateur boxing ecause it has not insisted upon a niversal construction and enforceent of its rules.

This fact can be attested to by St. ouis boxers who were the victims of mproper interpretations and arbirary rulings in Seattle, San Francisco, New Orleans, Louisville and leveland.

Rules Broken, No Punishment.

When complaint was made of the reatment accorded our boxers in the tter city to the late James E. Sullian, secretary-treasurer of the A. A. ., the following reply was received:

> Certainly, the St. Louis boxers who went to Cleveland and were compelled to break the law have only themselves to blame. They should have refused to box four rounds, instead of three. The law is very clear on that.

But that is all that was done about and the officials and the club that ermitted it were held blameless. With such unconcern as this manisted it is no great wonder that arp practices will be indulged in y some unscrupulous few and now nd then a "ringer" used by someone o is more concerned in the winning out than in the preservation of r sport.

r boxing has been part of e curriculum of athletic clubs in Louis for many years. The writer n recall when men like Mark wing, Paul McSweeney and Dute abanne, flying the colors of the astime A. C. in the early 'nineties, rawled through the ropes to battle om mere love of contest and inred by the ambition to place their ub first in the winning column. here are many persons in St. Louis ho can remember, too, the amateur oxing tournaments given in Music all in the old Exposition building—ournaments in which there were veral hundred entries and took ree nights and parts of three days run off. These tournaments were en to all comers so long as they re amateurs; but they had to prove [illegible] were accepted.

CATCHERS: Four Good Ones Who Are Fighting for Jobs With Browns

Tangled C Quint Departs to Play in Title Tourney

Joern Will Be at Center for Columbian A. C. in Championship Series.

Bill Joern, the husky center, who played a few games with the St. Louis U. team during the past season, has rejoined the Columbian A. C. and will depart with the squad tonight for Mascutine, Io., where the basket ballers will stop prior to competing in the national A. A. U. championships in Chicago next week. Joern will play center for the Tangled C in the title games, with Marquard as substitute.

The C. A. C. lineup will be as follows: Capt. Rich von Dach, left forward; Artie Zachritz, right forward; Bill Joern, center; Ned Fisher, left guard, and Stanley Fitzgerald, right guard. Al Marquard, center, and Charley Zachritz and Clarence Beers will go along as substitutes.

A trophy valued at $1000 will go to the winner of the championship. The Illinois A. C. at present holds the title. What's more they have beaten the C. A. C. five in a game this year.

Paddy Fitzgerald, coach of the C. A. C. squad, was given a watch fob set in diamonds, rubies and sapphires by the Boosters' Club. The presentation was made by Capt. John Pickel.

Wisconsin Wins "Big 9" Basket Ball Title With Win Over Northwestern

CHICAGO, March 11.—The University of Wisconsin basket ball five won the championship of the Big Nine Conference tonight by defeating Northwestern, 24 to 21. Had Northwestern won, the season would have ended in a tie.

The result gives the Badgers 11 victories and one defeat and makes Northwestern's record nine games won and three lost. It is the fourth championship won in the last five years by Coach Meanwell's squads. In a previous game this season Wisconsin beat the purple, 22 to 18.

The standing:

Browns' Second-String Players May Bring 1916 Pennant Here

should come back this season, and early evidence has been given of his threatened "return."

But Lavan hardly ever will be the base-runner that Johnson now is. Jones regards Johnson as the best base-runner turned out by the Federal League which embraced Kauff, Campbell and Rousch. Johnson succeeds in a greater percentage of his thefts. In this issue he has it on Lavan. He may also shade Johnny afield. There'll be little to choose there. Both are working desperately and it is our hunch that they will alternate on the job next season, Lavan going in when there's a southpaw on the hurling hill, Johnson when the enemy nominates a right-hander. That would result in Johnson playing a majority of the games.

Deal is our pick for third although Austin will not be released. Jim's pepper is an asset and he can almost always talk his way into a berth. Deal is a right-handed hitter, a sure fielder and should regain his hitting strength. As yet he has not done so. But he's a cool, brilliant fielder, stronger than Austin by many parsangs in tagging runners and a good man on the hit and run. He's also a bunter, par excellence.

The catching staff will eventually be Hartley, Chapman and Clemons, who promises to punish the pill. Severeid will get the gate unless Jones retains a whole kaboodle of pitchers. But in the end Severeid will be passed along inasmuch as he does not measure up to the standard of the other three.

The Case of Sisler.

AND now about Sisler. He's the bane of every Brownie's existence. He's ever ready to jolt somebody loose from their moorings in the outfield. He's soaring vulture-like around first base while he's ready at any time to pitch. He is today a .300 hitter, a man whose speed and knack of bunting makes him altogether a dangerous factor in a ball game. He has a punch, too; can lam 'em a mile to the farthest fence, but let's have Jones' unsolicited solution of the Sisler problem:

"I saw Sisler coolly step away from a 'bean-ball' the other day and wallop it to left field for three bases in such a way as to convince me of his hitting ability," said Jones a few days ago. "Nine ball players in ten would have fallen away from the plate on the ball Sisler broke up the game with. There's nothing to it, he's a hitter."

But at another sitting, Jones, without mentioning Sisler's name, said: "You don't exactly entirely waste a good man by keeping him on the bench for pinch duty. My idea is that a winning ball club usually has only one chance to win a ball game. When the big inning comes it has its crucial moment. Then you must put over the punch. I think it pays to always have somebody who can deliver for you. Therefore, I believe that if you have a good hitter stashed away who can come through, you've got the edge. If that man is prepared to remain in the game and do the equal of his predecessor you are doubly fortified. That makes me think a whole lot of an all-around utility player."

That's Sisler!

It is impossible at this date to get a line on the pitchers. Plank hasn't thrown a fast ball, but he'll be one of Jones' dependable props. Wellman is the same old Weilman, while Davenport has his usual speed. Groom blossomed forth with his usual flash, and it is well to remember that he won nine of his first 11 games last spring. He's always good in the spring, particularly so this season.

Hamilton is better than he was last fall, but not as good as he was in his prime in 1914. Crandall is a glutton for punishment, but an unknown quantity in the American League. Baumgardner says his arm, thanks to Bonesetter Reese, is restored. He was very good before it went bad.

Koob lacks only experience. He has the stuff and the nerve. Of the newcomers McCabe and Fincher, before his eye was jabbed in a friendly melee around the hotel, look best. Of course they don't know the finer points of the game.

And now by a process of elimination we discover that the ax is hovering over the heads of Severeid, McKechnie, Paulette, Park, Phillips, Fincher and McCabe or Baumgardner.

There are 30 in the squad, since Marsans' arrival. Jones will carry 25 well into the summer. His task of releasing down the prescribed limit is comparatively easy.

Two Tallest Men in Baseball Are Members of Fielder Jones' Club

Staff Special.

PALESTINE, Tex., March 11.

STATISTICS on the Browns yield many interesting revelations. The squad is drawn from 15 states, the average age, exclusive of that freak of endurance, Eddie Plank, who is effective at 42, is 26 years; the two tallest men in baseball are on this club; there are three players who weigh over 200 pounds, 10 pitchers strike a height average of six feet one inch, there are six college graduates who have A. B.'s and one man (whose name we won't mention) who can't write his own name.

There are many professions represented, to wit: One surgeon, one electrician, seven farmers, two barbers, two coal miners (now reformed), one cowboy (real, woolly one—Davenport), one athletic director, one school teacher (Ernie Koob), who might get in practice teaching that unmentionable person how to write; a caterer and a man who speaks the Swedish language fluently.

There's a player whose home town is named after his father and only one native St. Louisan—John Thomas Tobin. But in the end it is the youth of the squad as a whole which has impressed Fielder Jones.

"If I can get a winning combination out of this bunch I should have a team that will endure as a contender for six or seven years without a change," said the Brown tactician the other day. The facts:

Amateur Players May Now Accept Pay for Services

Federation Also Decides to Bar Sporting Goods Men From Holding Office.

CINCINNATI, March 11.—At the first annual meeting of the National Baseball Federation held here today, several rules of importance were adopted. After four hours of arguing the adoption of a constitution and other business was completed after which the gathering adjourned.

The constitution limits the term of president of the Federation to two consecutive years and specifies that "no person interested in the manufacture or sale of sporting goods shall be eligible for election to any office in the organization."

The members of the federation were classified thus:

A player eligible to Class A is one who receives no monetary remuneration for his services as a player during the current season. A player eligible to Class AA is one who does not earn a livelihood by his services as a player.

The playing rules of the National League will be the rules of the federation and its affiliated bodies.

A resolution by Harry Hefflebein of Johnstown, Pa., calling for the appointment of a committee to call on the National Commission to ask for a "munificent" donation for amateur ball players was adopted. Hefflebein said the money would be devoted to developing ball players.

W. D. Gresham of Birmingham, Ala., W. B. Bickford of Chicago and Sam Karpen of Dayton, O., were elected members at large on the executive committee, with the four officers of the federation.

The following cities had representatives: Cleveland, Dallas, Tex., St. Louis, Birmingham, Ala.; Akron, O.; Johnstown, Pa.; Chicago, Louisville, Dayton, O.; Pittsburg and Toledo.

Harry Whitney Has Good Chance to Win Kentucky Derby Again This Year

LOUISVILLE, Ky., March 11.—Fifty-six nominations to the 1916 Kentucky Derby were announced today by the New Louisville Jockey Club. This list, while smaller than last year, comprises the cream of the American turf's 3-year-olds and includes 12 imported thoroughbreds.

Harry Payne Whitney, the New York sportsman, in a determined effort to land two successive Derby winners, has named seven eligibles, one of which is foreign bred. Turfmen are according him a royal chance for again shattering Derby precedent.

Spanish Club to Battle Ellerman Team in First Elimination Game Today

The first elimination contests to decide the winner of the Municipal League soccer championship will be played this afternoon. At Forest Park the Christian Brothers' College eleven, which won the title in the C. B. C. division, is scheduled to play the Yawitz team of Forest Park. The Spanish Club of Carondelet is down to tackle the Ellermans in the other clash at Fairground.

The other two aggregations that will fight it out for the title, the M. A. A. and St. Teresas draw an open date today. They are scheduled to battle the following Sunday, when the winners of today's game also will play in the semi-finals.

In the elimination games, the halves will be of 45 minutes' duration and in case of a tie after the regulation time two halves of eight minutes each will be played. Oliver Miller will referee the game at Forest Park today, while Phil Kavanaugh will handle the Fairground attraction. Both battles are scheduled to start 2:30 o'clock.

KAHANAMOKU TO LEAVE HONOLULU ON MARCH 22

SAN FRANCISCO, March 11.—Duke Kahanamoku, the Hawaiian swimmer, who holds various world's championships, will leave Honolulu March 22 to take part in swimming meets in the United States, according to advices received here today.

He will swim at St. Louis, Chicago and New York. In Chicago he expects to meet Perry McGillivray, A. C. Raithel, H. J. Hebner and other stars. In New York he will meet H. E. Vollmer.

Pittsburg Wrestlers Win.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 11.—Pittsburg Athletic Club wrestlers won the Middle Atlantic Association amateur championships in four of the seven bouts here tonight. The other winners were local men. Harry Jenkins of the Athletic Club, won the titles in both the 125 and 145 pound classes.

CARDS' FUTURE IS ENTIRELY UP TO INFIELD SHOWING

Advent of Corhan Brightens Outlook for Strong First Line of Defense.

say that my entire pitching staff is in better shape than it ever has been previously at this stage of the game. Lastly, I will say that it has been shown that San Antonio is the best training camp in the country. Not a drop of rain in two weeks is the best luck I've run into on a training jaunt since I began playing ball."

Just as Hug says, he has a mighty good looking short-stopper in this Corhan boy. Beyond a doubt he is the best man who has worked around that field for the Cards since Arnold Hauser was forced to quit. There's no question in the mind of anyone who has seen Roy pick up a hot grounder back of third or second and whiz the ball over to Jack Miller, that Corhan, as a fielder, has the class to hold down the short-stopping job as well as anyone would require. The question with Corhan is: Will he hit?

Corhan a Flashy Fielder.

Corhan, so far as we can judge, has a weakness for fishing after a low curve ball on the outside. He wields a long stick, thin in the handle, with all the weight in the end of the club. He holds his hickory long and takes a full swing. But even if he doesn't hit much more than his weight, Corhan will be an improvement over the men who have worked at short in the last few years.

Brottem, it would seem from his showing to date, has the ability to pole the ball. Whether he thinks as a big league receiver must think, and whether he can throw well enough to stay in fast company, cannot be said. But he can hit. Almost everytime he connects he hits the pill on a line. He puts a lot of snap into his swing with his wrists. Tony sure looks good right now.

This fellow Steele, if he can control his stuff, and he's done it to date, should be one of the best southpaws in the National League. He has tremendous speed and a fast-breaking curve. His slow ball is a "darb" and his motion with a man on first base is a source of everlasting worry for the runner.

Hall is another hurler whose future apparently hinges on his control, or lack of it. Hall has been up twice before. Each time he went back because he could not put it where he wanted it. With St. Paul in 1914 and 1915 he overcame this weakness. Unless it overtakes him again he will stick with the Cards and be a big help. He's a big fellow, weighing 185 when in the best of condition. "Sea Lion" can hit the ball, too.

Mike Gonzales, the Cardinals' Cuban catcher, arrived in camp tonight. It took Mike four days to make the trip from his home in Havana.

Gonzales reports himself ready to jump into a ball game at a minute's notice. He played ball three or four days a week all winter long with a Cuban team.

"Chief" Wilson is the only member of the squad now missing. When last heard from, a week ago, Wilson was ill with the grip at Austin, Tex., his home town.

LAYTON TRIMS PETRIE IN "POOL" TOURNAMENT

CHICAGO, March 11.—With the score 96 to 47 against him, Michael Petrie of Chicago forfeited his match in the pocket billiards tournament today to John Layton of Sedalia, Mo., by making three successive scratches. The contest was one of safety play and scratches throughout. Petrie scored 17 scratches and Layton 13. Layton made the high run, 20, and the game lasted 51 innings.

Michigan Aggies Score 1000.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—Perfect scores of 1000 were made again this week by rifle teams by Michigan Agricultural College and Washington State College shooting in the intercollegiate matches being held under the auspices of the National Rifle Association. St. Johns of Delafield, Wis., with 986, made the highest score in the match, and among military academies, and Tyrone, Pennsylvania, led the high schools with 991.

Nationals Trim Virginia.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., March 11.—The Washington Americans defeated the University of Virginia baseball team here today, 4 to 1. "Billy" Rixey, brother of Eppa Rixey of the Philadelphia Nationals, made his debut as a Virginia pitcher and allowed no runs in the three innings he worked. Score:

Washington	4	13	3
Virginia	1	6	2

Batteries: Gallia, Harper, Sloan and Gharrity; Calloway, Field, Rixey, Green and Gwathmy.

Cleveland Wins, 6 to 3.

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 11.—The Cleveland Americans won their second exhibition game from the New Orleans Southern Association team today 6 to 3. It was a free-hitting contest. Score: Cleveland 6; 14; 1. New Orleans, 3; 14; 2. Hagerman, Jones, Maorton and O'Neil; Smith, Dillinger and Deberry.

LOOKING THEM OVER WITH OLD MAN DOPE

By John Edward Wray

Is Jess Laughing at Us?

THIS Willard-Moran fight may prove a joke; but it remains to be seen on whom it is. Just now Jess is doing the laughing. In fact, the title holder's actions and words indicate he views the coming contest as a jest.

Notwithstanding his thirty-minutes-a-day training stunts the champion, on Saturday, had the effrontery to give out that he would knock off work this week because he is now thoroughly fit!

What Jess really meant was FAT, not FIT. His strenuous efforts sloughed off four pounds a week—which is reducing at a rate that wouldn't condition a fat welterweight in a month.

Willard Can't Be Ready.

WILLARD'S own accounts of his work show that he has dawdled along and done about as he pleased. Were it not for the 25 cents admission fee which he charges those who want to see his feeble workouts, he would probably not do even that much.

This means that Willard will go into the ring two weeks hence far from being a trained, fit fighter. No matter what his writer friends say, it's physically impossible for a great, big mammoth of a man to slough off the indulgence and idleness of 10 months and return to shape in one month—a month of mere dallying—playing at training. Two months of real, heroic work would hardly make Jess as fit as he should be.

As Old Man Dope Gets It.

WHAT his neglect means will have to be guessed. There are three possible views to be taken. They are:

That Willard thinks he can fight a "safety first" bout for 10 rounds, although not in strict condition.

That Willard believes Moran a shining mark.

That an understanding as to the outcome of the bout exists between the men.

Moran in Earnest.

THE last suspicion may be dismissed. Moran has trained as though he meant business, is being paid well for his work and has everything to gain by trying.

Of course there is always present the suspicion that, when stars meet in a 10-round bout, neither would spoil the chance of a second meeting, over a longer route and for a bigger purse, by decisively stopping the other fellow.

In this case we credit both men with being above such acts, although some of Willard's advisers are not. (N. B.—A story was printed that Moran had agreed to flop in the seventh round to Jack Johnson, at Paris, and "crossed" the black by trying to win.)

IN the other two cases Willard is simply cheating the public. No matter what Willard THINKS he can do, he ought to bolster up popular confidence by showing his followers that he is not neglecting ANY POSSIBLE CHANCE to make the result certain.

If he intends to fight purely a defensive bout, he is merely deluding the public. Only honest efforts to the limit of their ability by both these men will free them from the taint of obtaining big money on false representations, March 25.

Long Enough Now.

THE discussion as to the relative altitude of Mount Wellman and Mount Davenport, of the American League range, is waxing hot. Recent information from Palestine stated that Davenport was the taller.

A photograph submitted to Old Man Dope and mailed from the training camp, disclosed that Wellman was slightly higher above mean sea level.

Incidentally we are in a position to say that, while Jones thinks both men are invaluable, he positively can't use Davenport or Wellman any longer.

After Another Title.

THAT bustling organization, the Columbian Athletic Club, will go after another national title, this week, when its basket ball five goes to Chicago to open the national championship tourney, on Wednesday.

Paddy Fitzgerald, the director of athletics at the South Side club, has a fine bunch of basket ball huskies to work with; but unfortunately they have not had practice enough against teams of real strength. The class of fives to which the locals will be opposed at Chicago is considered above that in this city.

Nevertheless the prize will be worth the attempt, since a $1000 trophy has been donated by a Chicago newspaper to the winner. The C. A. C. has recently withdrawn from one championship feature, the senior track events at New York, next Saturday. This was largely due to the fact that no spiked shoes are allowed on the floor at New York. Irwin Mahl of the C. A. C. wanted to beat Loomis, but feared his efforts would be in vain unless he could make the attempt in short spikes.

Mahl will compete at the Coliseum, March 25, and will probably face almost as good a field as that which he would have opposed at New York.

Looks Like a Bad Move.

IT is rumored that the Board of Education is trying to arrange to have all local high school football games of the future played on open park fields, with no charge for admission to spectators.

Under former conditions the contests were played at high school field, Forest Park, and admission was charged.

Of course the free idea will suit the masses; but such an arrangement will not make for convenience, a good view of such contests, or order on the side line.

Football games viewed from the ground can be seen poorly even by those in the front row. Only in stands with steep inclines can the moves be satisfactorily witnessed.

If St. Louis had grounds with a natural amphitheater, such as that at Brookside Park, Cleveland, it would be different.

One experience with watching free games from park viewpoints will cure followers of the pastime of such a plan.

That Jitney Score Card.

SINCE the local major league baseball clubs have announced a charge of one jitney for the score cards this year, instead of giving them to spectators free, these clubs might make a great hit with the fans by applying the proceeds to the construction of legible, modern scoreboards.

It is estimated that the sale of the score card nets a ball club between $7000 and $10,000 annually, not counting the "ads." For this sum the local park could build a board that would show every act on the field and every official ruling on every play.

Such a scoreboard is exhibited in all large cities every world's series. It shows distinctly the official progress of the game, as well as names of players and every substitution made.

No plea that such a scheme is not feasible can be accepted.

To know whether a play is officially a hit, an error, an infield fly or any one of a number of those things which in the past have kept fans mystified during games, is one of the first requisites to enjoyment of a contest.

A score board that will tell ALL will make friends—and MONEY, too.

ROCK CHURCH JUNIORS BEAT ARCADIANS 8-6

The Rock Church Juniors yesterday afternoon defeated the C. B. C. Arcadian basket ball team, 8 to 6, in the C. B. C. gymnasium. The game was tied at the end of the regulation time and the Rock Church five won out in the extra period. Sheridan, at center, scored all the points for the losers. The lineup:

Rock Church (8).	Positions.	Arcadians (6)
Barry	Left forward	O'Fallon
McGoarty (2)	Right forward	Grady
McMullen (6)	Center	Sheridan (6)
White	Left guard	Walker

ST. LOUIS TEAM ROLLS INTO 3RD PLACE IN TOLEDO

Dupont With 2770 Did Best Rolling for Local Quintets in A. B. C. Tourney.

MARTIN KERN OFF FORM

Champion of 1904, Rolling With Washingtons, Totals 480 for His 3 Games.

TOLEDO, O., March 11.—The Dupont Powder team of St. Louis rolled into third place, with a score of 2770, and the Burkes shot into tenth place, with 2699. Art Joquel led the Dupont team, with 581. W. Frick was second, with 573. They started with a fair game, 890, but the second game of 970 put them in the running; the last game they got 910 with 10 open frames.

Pflueger led the Burkes, with 579. Rothwell, 570, and Klein, 588, did good work. The Budweisers, with 2674, and the Falstaffs 2664, both will finish in the money. The scores:

PATTERSON TIED FOR LEAD IN A. B. C. MEET

TOLEDO, O., March 11.—One leader was tied in the American Bowling Congress tournament here today when Harry Patterson of Chicago shot 660 in the singles, equaling the mark set by Pete Brunnett of Cleveland. The two-man event went through undisturbed with Hunter and Hendricks of Grand Rapids sticking with 1232. Chicago starred in the doubles, as Bob Wagner and Phil Wolff shot 1192 for third place.

Patterson's series was well rolled, totals of 205, 221 and 234 greeting his efforts. In the last game he struck five times in succession, but his sixth shot left up the number 10, and he had to be satisfied with a tie.

Illini Paddlers Victors

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., March 11.—University of Illinois swimmers won the meet tonight with the University of Cincinnati by 51 to 9. The visitors from Ohio were outclassed, but succeeded in taking three seconds, in the 50-yard swim, the 200-yard breast stroke and 75-yard breast stroke. In all the other events the home swimmers registered "slams." McDonald of Illinois lacked two feet of reaching his own record in the plunge. The time made was slow.

Giants Shut Out Dallas.

DALLAS, Tex., March 11.—The New York Nationals defeated the Dallas team of the Texas League here today, 5 to 0. Score:

New York	5	13	2
Dallas	0	3	1

Batteries: Perritt, Schupp and Wendell; Bono, Adams and McDonough.

Two Get 300 Scores.

Milton (Bud) Fink, a member of the Martin Fellhauers, and John Echrick rolled 300 scores at Peterson's during the past week. Fink, who won the all-events in the city scratch tourney, turned the trick while rolling on two alleys while practicing with his mates for the A. B. C. The perfect count for Echrich was his third of the season.

Oliphant Is Honored.

NEW YORK, March 11.—The coveted letter "A" was awarded tonight by the Army Athletic Council to Cadets who have earned the right to wear by their athletic prowess during the past year. Cadet Oliphant, '16 of Indiana, was the first in the history of the academy to win the letter in four sports. He was the star of the Army-Navy football game last fall and also was on the baseball, track and basket ball teams.

Pirates Depart for South.

PITTSBURG, March 11.—The last squad of Pirates left here tonight for Dawson Springs, Ky., for the preliminary spring training work. The party, which consisted of five seniors in charge of Hans Wagner, will be joined by others en route. The pitchers and catchers of the club have been at Dawson Springs for several days. Later the whole squad will go to Hot Springs.

All-St. Louis Basket Ball Team Would Have Trouble Beating Next Best Quint

3 Fives of Nearly Equal Strength Can Be Named

Feuerborn, of McKinley High School, Gains the Distinction of a Place on the First Aggregation.

University Court Players of This City Not Up to Standard, Only One of Them Being Given a Position.

WM. BERRY, WASHINGTON
WM. FEUERBORN McKINLEY HIGH.
ED PETERS, COMPTON HTS.
OSCAR WIRTZ WEEKES
RICHARD VON DACH C.A.C.

OPERATING in this city, during the present basket ball season, have been some 50 court teams, representing four organized leagues and a host of independent teams. Each of these squads averaged at least eight players, a total of 400 basket ball players in active service during the season now approaching its end.

The selection of an all-St. Louis team of five best players, from a field of 400 is an impossibility. But the Post-Dispatch herewith submits three teams, selected by consensus opinions of one well known local referee, one player who actively participated with many of the contestants, and one newspaper reporter, who followed the fortunes of the various individuals throughout the season.

On the first team, four distinct leagues and the University are represented. Von Dach of the A. A. U. League, Feuerborn of the Interscholastic League, Wirtz of the Municipal League, Berry of Washington University, and Peters, although now of the A. A. U. League, but in reality a Sunday School League product, are the representatives.

Von Dach Best Forward.

THE selection of forwards for an all-star team is the greatest task in choosing an all-star five. There were a host of clever offensive men playing on local courts, this season. However, if there is one man who stands out above other players it is Richard von Dach, captain of the city championship Columbian A. C. five. Von Dach, no matter what team the Tangled C five opposed, was there scoring points. He is clever at floor play, an excellent shot at the basket, and a real student of the game. He should fit in well with any combination.

The self-appointed committee of entries gives the other forward positions to Ed Peters, over Carl Hodge. Peters, an old Yeatman High School boy, played with the Compton Heights team in the Sunday School and Municipal Leagues, until last week. He then jumped with his teammates to the Union A. C., team of the A. A. U. League. Hodge played on the Grand Avenue Presbyterian team. Both are fast floor men and good scoring assets. However, Peters seems to have a slight advantage on the season's play, owing to the fact that he hit his real stride before Hodge got started.

Next in line are Marting of the Battery A, Pete French, a teammate of Peters, and Arti Zachritz, of the Columbian A. C. There were also a number of other forwards who deserve mention. Billy Quinn of C. B. C. was the real star of the Brothers, Chase of St. Phillips, and Ford of the Y. M. C. A. would be welcomed on any quintet, but they lacked a bit of experience.

All-St. Louis Basket Team Includes Only One University Star

FIRST TEAM.

Left forward	Von Dach	Columb'n A. C.
Right forward	Peters	Union A. C.
Center	Feuerborn	McKinley H.
Left guard	Wirtz	Weekes
Right guard	Berry	Washington U.

SECOND TEAM.

Left forward	Hodge	Grand Av. Pres.
Right forward	Marting	Battery A
Center	Marquard	Colum'n A. C.
Left guard	Nies	Grand Av. Pres.
Right guard	C. French	Union A. C.

THIRD TEAM.

Left forward	P. French	Union A. C.
Right forward	A. Zachritz	Col. A. C.
Center	Kansteiner	G'd Av. Pr.
Left guard	B. Hebbereger	Batt'y A.
Right guard	Langstead	G'd Av. Pr.

Few Good Center Men.

THEN comes the center position. Mid-court men were under the usual standard of capability this season as a whole. There were but a few real clever centers this season and outside of four or five, the teams were not overly strong at this position.

Bill Joern of the Columbian A. C. quint was the star of the 1915 season. But Bill did not work much, this season, and selecting him on a judgment of what he would have done would be an injustice to the other players. With Joern not considered, Bill Feuerborn of the McKinley High team was the class of the jumpers. He is the only scholastic player chosen on the three teams, but his natural intuition more than makes up for his lack of experience. He is weak in that he seldom gains the tip-off, owing to his lesser altitude. But Bill is a fine shot, a bear on the defense, thinks basket ball, and has that brand of temperament which is an asset to any athletes. He is acclaimed as the coming basket wonder of this city, if not of greater fields.

Marquard of the Columbian A. C. and Kansteiner of the Grand Avenue quint also played well and form a class right below that of the McKinley High youth.

Many Clever Guards.

THERE were a flock of fine guards in the city this season. But in Oscar Wirtz of the Weekes and Bill Berry, the Pikeway demon, a classier pair could not be found in this section, much less this city. Wirtz has been performing on local courts for about ten years and has about hit the 30th milestone. Still he is some tosser and plays better now than he did in the days of the Premiers and the Universals, away back.

He is the most accurate man at passing ball in this city. He hurls the sphere with cannonball swiftness and accuracy the length of the court, he held his forward opponents to fewer field goals than did any other guard in his league, he can score baskets, and his experience is invaluable to his team.

Bill Berry is better than any Missouri Valley Conference guard that was seen here this season. That's quite a "rep," when it is considered that the Missouri Tigers and Kansas Aggies were among the quints that met the Pikers. Bill is lightning fast, a star on scoring both free and field goals, and an allround good player.

That would be some nifty little aggregation—that first team. But then unless we are mistaken it would have quite a job on its hands in walloping the second quint, and the same goes for the third choice.

There's Always a Fight When Flynn Enters Ring

Veteran Scrapper, Who Says He Will Retire This Season, After 17 Years of Scrapping, Has Never Failed to Make the Other Fellow Battle His Best.

After 16 years of glove fighting, Jim Flynn announces that this will be his last year in the ring. He has battled nearly all the prominent heavyweight boxers of his time, and once fought for the championship of the world. Though never weighing much more than 180 pounds, and never considered much of a boxer, he has been one of the most dreaded of all men, because of his vicious fighting instinct and rough-and-ready ability.

So long as he was on his feet, Flynn has never acknowledged defeat, and only a knockout or interference by the referee or police could stop him.

When fighting Jack Johnson at Las Vegas, N. M., July 4, 1912, for the world's championship it became necessary for Capt. Fred Fornoff of the State mounted police to draw his revolver and enter the ring in the ninth round and order the contest stopped, because Flynn, enraged by his inability to outbox the big negro, resorted to such an assortment of rough-and-tumble tactics that Johnson was appealing to Referee Ed Smith for protection.

Though Flynn has lost many of his contests, he has never ceased to be a drawing card, because promoters and the public know that when Jim Flynn is one of the contestants there is going to be some action.

He has always been ready to accept any match offered him, and was never a hard man to do business with, accepting a guarantee or a percentage of the receipts as might be suggested.

Second-Hand Auto Flynn's "Bit."

Flynn has been under the management of Jack Curley for the past five years and has been kept fairly busy, prospering in all his matches except the one with Jack Johnson. For that match he trained 11 weeks, lost the fight in nine rounds, and all he got for his time and trouble was Curley's automobile, which he shipped to Pueblo, Colo., and put in the jitney service. Flynn laughs about it now, but says when he was told after the fight that there was no money for him he felt like murdering everyone concerned, and the writer distinctly remembers how he started out to "clean up." Johnson had been promised $30,000, win, lose or draw, and was paid an extra thousand for training expenses. Flynn had agreed to fight for a percentage of the receipts. The expected crowd failed to materialize, and it took all of the receipts to pay expenses, and it was told later that $10,000 of the amount due Johnson was paid by a note that was afterwards torn up.

Shortly after that fight Flynn married Miss Fanie Vedder, a well-known actress on the vaudeville circuit. Miss Vedder attended the fight and sat directly behind the writer at the ringside. She viewed the contest for five rounds without display of emotion, but after that she dropped her eyes to the ground and did not look at the ring again until told the contest was over. From time to time during the closing round she was told how the fight was going and seemed to realize that Jim was losing, but her self-control was remarkable. Flynn and his wife are now making their home at Excelsior Springs, Mo., and four weeks ago a baby boy was born to them.

Flynn spent a few hours in St. Louis recently on his way from Excelsior Springs to New York.

Flynn has been boxing steadily since Christmas day, when he knocked out "One-Round" Davis at Buffalo in eight rounds; boxed Tony Ross 10 rounds on New Year's day at Rochester, N. Y.; Al Reich 10 rounds on Jan. 12 at Brooklyn, N. Y., and "Gunboat" Smith 10 rounds at Cincinnati, O., on Feb. 1.

Asked about the coming fight between Jess Willard and Frank Moran, Flynn expressed the opinion that Willard would be the winner, principally because of his size and strength. He declared that neither one of the men are boxers and thought the contest would be very slow and unsatisfactory.

Asked if he liked to fight, Flynn said: "I love it. I wish it were me in the ring with Willard or Moran; I might get a licking, but there'd be a fight."

It has been said that Flynn's right name is Andred Chiariglione or Andrew Haymes. Flynn says this is a mistake; that his right name is Flynn. His stepfather's name, however, is Haymes, and this is how the mistake occurs when referring to him. Flynn says the best evidence of the fact that his name is Flynn is that he is naming his son James Elm Flynn. That ought to settle it.

RAY TO COMPETE IN SPECIAL RACE AT M. A. A. MEET

With Five Other Stars, Among Them Ivan Myers, He Entered in Invitation Mile.

HAS VICTORY OVER TABOR

Illinois A. C. Flyer Turned Trick in Championships at Frisco Last Summer.

A race that should practically decide the championship of the United States has been scheduled by the Missouri Athletic Association for its indoor relay carnival to be decided at the Coliseum on March 25. The event in question is the one-mile special. The entries for this race were announced yesterday by Doc Bassett. Six stars, the best in the East and West, with the exception of Norman Taber, will fight it out for supremacy. They are:

Joie Ray of the Illinois A. C.
Ivan Mayers of Depauw University.
Mike Mason of Illinois University.
L. V. Windnagle of Cornell University.
Franz Marceau of the Illinois A. C.
Herrodd of Kansas University.

Of the sextet, Ray is, without a doubt, the best known. This youngster sprang into prominence last summer at the A. A. U. championships in Frisco, when he won the mile, defeating such stars at Norman Tabor and Abel Kiviat. The Chicago flyer's time in this race was 4m. 23 1-5s.

It will be remembered that it was only a short time before the title events that Tabor set his mile record of 4m. 12 s. in a paced race in Boston.

Has Beaten Norman Tabor.

The time made by Ray in the championships last August is not his best. In the Western tryouts for the title games, he was returned the winner in 4m., 16 2-5s. He was beaten last year in the Central A. A. U. championships by his teammate, Franz Marceau, who also will be a started in the Coliseum event in 4m. 21 1-5s.

Next in importance to Ray, probably is Ivan Myers, the star of the Depauw University team. Meyers was developed last year by John P. Nicholson, the local star, while coach at the Greencastle school. Myers is a Western Conference champion and also placed in the mile run at Frisco last August. In the conference meet he covered the distance in 4m 19 1-5s for a new record. He beat out Kiviat for third place in the A. A. U. championships.

Mike Mason, captain of the Illinois U. Team, probably is the star of the other four. In a meet against Wisconsin, the last of February, Mason won both the mile and two-mile runs. His time in the mile was 4m 27s and 9m 52s in the two-mile. He is also a conference champ, having gained the honors in the two-mile last summer.

Mason a Conference Champ.

Windnagle, the Cornell star, is ranked as one of the best milers in the East. In the intercollegiate meet in Philadelphia last summer he took second place to MacKenzie, of Princeton, in 4m 22 4-5s. Windnagle, also is a member of the Cornell relay team, which will show here in a special race against Pennsylvania.

The other two, Marceau of the I. A. C. and Herrodd of Kansas, ran one-two in the Kansas City A. C. carnival on Feb. 26. The time in this race was 4m 35 2-5s. They'll both have to do better than that if they expect to place in the M. A. A. event.

The men entered in this race will have to circle the coliseum track 12 times. A special prize, donated by local sportsmen, will go to the winner.

It also was announced yesterday that the Illinois U. student band willl be on hand.

Navy Gymnasts Win.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 11.—Navy closed the 1916 gymnastic season today by defeating Haverford College, 39 to 15. The middies took first place in all the events.

Our boys will pull together,
Then we'll have a winning crew."

LOCAL CHAMPIONS TO OPPOSE WINDY CITY TEAM TODAY

Ben Millers Will Get Real Test in Clash With Hyde Parks at Robison Field.

The Ben Millers, St. Louis' new soccer champions, will get a real test this afternoon when they meet the Hyde Parks of Chicago, one of the strongest aggregations in the Windy City, at Robison Field. The Innisfails and Naval Reserves will battle in the preliminary. The opening game will start at 2 o'clock and 45 minute halves will prevail in both contests. Paul McSweeney is down to referee.

That the Hyde Parks are one of the classiest elevens that have shown in this city in some time is evidenced by the fact that they are still in the hunt for the United States Football Association cup, the winner of which is generally accepted as the country's title holder.

This will be the third time the Hyde Parks have shown in this city. They called here for one game on March 10, 1912, and were handed a 4—0 drubbing by the St. Leos. Then its the same eleven that during the Christmas holidays in 1914, played the Leos at Federal League Park and the game broke up in a free-for-all with the count 2 to 2.

That soccer hereabouts "ain't what it used to be" is shown by the fact that the Ben Millers get this choice date. Formerly it was all St. Leos. But the blue and white has been dethroned and a new "king" is on the local throne. So Pete Ratican's kickers tackle the Windy City outfit.

It will be something of a grudge fight as the Hyde Parks are coming here with the intentions of getting even for their treatment two years ago. Ratican will have all his regulars in the game. The lineup:

Ben Millers.	Postion.	Hyde Parks.
King	Goal	Orr
Shea	Fullback	Burton
Lancaster	Fullback	Cuthbert
Fitzgibbons	Halfback	Overberg
Zarschel	Halfback	Sneddon
Murphy	Halfback	Hawke
Sexton	Forward	Jackson
Marre	Forward	McKay (capt.)
Ratican	Forward	Westen
McLaughlin	Forward	MacKie
McHenry	Forward	Mair

Referee, Paul McSweeney. Time of halves, 45 minutes.

MOLLA BJURSTEDT BEATS MRS. SCHMITZ IN FINAL

NEW YORK, March 11.—Miss Molla Bjurstedt, holder of the national indoor tennis championship, in the final of the special winter tournament for women on the indoor court of the Heights Casino, Brooklyn, today, defeated Mrs. Frederick Schmitz of New York, 6—2, 6—2.

Mrs. Schmidts, erstwhile national indoor champion, limped from a strained ankle and did not display her usual dash.

After the singles, Miss Bjurstedt paired with R. L. Murray of California, and they won an exhibition doubles against Miss Weber and Harry McNeal, 6—3, 6—4, 6—4.

REO

Have You Ridden in the New Reo Six?

IF YOU HAVEN'T we think it is not too much to say you have yet to taste the real joys of motoring.

AND WHEN YOU HAVE ridden in this big luxurious equipage—the latest and in some respects, greatest product of Reo experience—you will understand why this car enjoys such a vogue—is so tremendously popular this season.

REO SIX WAS PROCLAIMED the "fashion plate for 1916" by designers generally, from the moment its graceful lines were seen.

AND DOUBTLESS YOU'VE OBSERVED the influence this Sheer Line Reo has exerted on the design of seven passenger cars generally.

BUT YOU MUST SEE IT—must ride in and finally drive it yourself to fully appreciate what a magnificent car and what wonderful value it is at its price.

AND THE CLOSER YOU STUDY the details—the more carefully you enquire into every point of design, of construction, of quality of materials, of equipment and finish—the greater will be your admiration and the deeper your wonderment that it is possible to produce such a car for such a price.

FOR YOU MUST KNOW that this Reo Six is made as only the Reo Folk can make automobiles. It is real inside and out—the Reo Folk do not use substitutes. Real leather in the upholstering and real hair.

BUT THAT STATEMENT is scarcely necessary. For you know the Reo Folk and you know Reo ideals. You know that Reo reputation is built on the most solid of foundations—a good product honestly made and honestly sold and honestly backed up afterward.

SO WHEN WE TELL YOU that this new Reo Six is a Reo from radiator cap to tail-light we have said the most that could be said for any automobile.

AND THERE'S QUANTITY, TOO, if you like to put it that way. This is a big, full-size seven passenger car. Seats seven full grown adults comfortably—luxuriously.

WHEELBASE IS 126 INCHES. But that is increased—or rather the riding qualities are—to much more than it would otherwise amount by the Reo cantilever springs. They enhance the riding qualities of a car immeasurably—especially a big car like this New Reo Six.

BUT, AS WE SAID in the first paragraph, you will have to see and ride in it yourself to fully appreciate. Then remember one thing more:

DEMAND IS TREMENDOUS—always is for Reo cars, but this season more than ever. Only way to get a Reo and be sure of having it for spring delivery is to order well in advance.

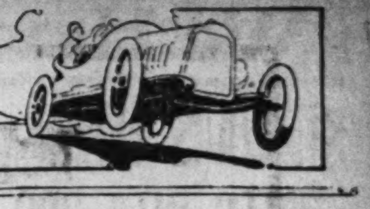
AUTOMOBILE NEWS



KNOW YOUR CAR; AN ANALYSIS OF THE MOTOR

By WILLIAM H. STEWART, JR.,
President Stewart Automobile School.

Beginning what promises to be one of the greatest years the automobile has seen, it is fitting to call the attention of motorists and motorists-to-be to the importance of knowing their cars. There will be more owner-drivers this year than ever before, and it is to this great class of automobile enthusiasts that this series of articles is directed.

The idea is to treat in detail of motor car construction and operation, and there is no reason why the reader who follows the series closely should not understand the parts of the automobile thoroughly and also the why and wherefore of everything.

I shall endeavor to treat of technical matters in a clear and understandable manner so that the untechnical reader may get as much out of the series as the man who already has a leaning toward mechanics and a general knowledge of things technical.

In the first article it is my intention to explain as briefly as possible the working principle of the four-cycle type automobile engine.

The beginner must first familiarize himself with the names of the parts which make up the gas engine and the functions of each part. While different makes of motor cars use different motors, nevertheless the fundamental principles involved are the same. That is to say, while motors are designed differently and look differently to the casual observer, in principle they are more or less the same.

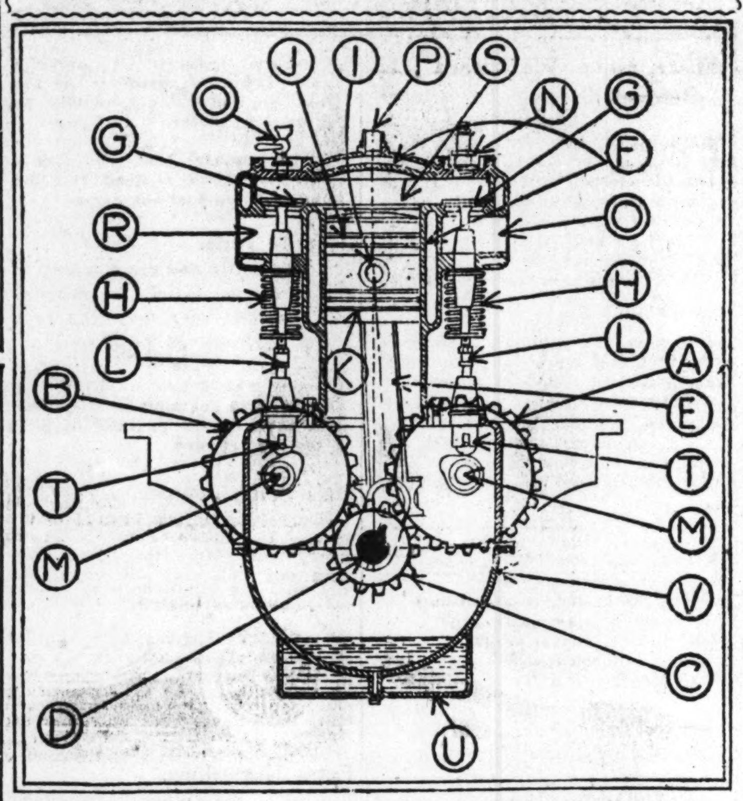
In a gas engine three fundamentals are necessary, namely, an explosive mixture, compression of this mixture and ignition. Eliminate any one of these and the motor is practically useless from an efficiency standpoint. From the foregoing it will be noted that in order to obtain a compressed charge of gas into the cylinder ready for ignition certain functions must be performed by the working parts.

Assuming an explosive mixture ready for the cylinder, the question arises as to how this is transformed to useful power. In the first place the charge of gas must be let into the cylinder, compressed, fired and the waste products of combustion exhausted.

This brings us down to four working strokes of the piston, namely, suction stroke, compression stroke, firing stroke and exhaust stroke.

At this point let us refer to the drawing in order to become familiar with the parts mentioned.

The Cylinder and Its Parts



A—Exhaust cam shaft gear.
B—Intake cam shaft gear.
C—Crank shaft gear.
D—Crank shaft.
E—Connecting rod.
F—Water jackets.
G—Intake and exhaust valves.
H—Valve springs.
I—Wrist pin.
J—Piston rings.
K—Piston.
L—Valve push rods and adj. nuts.
M—Cam shaft with cams.
N—Spark plug.
O—Compression relief.
P—water outlet.
Q—Exhaust outlet.
R—Intake opening.
S—Compression chamber.
T—Valve push rod rollers.
U—Oil reservoir.
V—Crank case.

"A" is the exhaust cam shaft gear attached to cam shaft which operates the exhaust valve.

"B" is the intake cam shaft gear operating the intake valve.

"C" is the main crank shaft gear which drives "A" and "B."

"D" is the main crank shaft.

Time gears "A" and "B" have twice as many teeth as crank shaft gear "C" and therefore operate at half time to "C."

"E" is connecting rod attached to offset crank pin of crank shaft "D" and piston "K."

The piston "K" travels up and down in the cylinder through the successive strokes above mentioned; namely, suction, compression, firing and exhaust.

There are two valves "G," one an intake valve to admit the fresh gases to the cylinder and the other an exhaust valve to permit the burned gases to escape.

As piston "K" travels away from the head of the cylinder a vacuum is created which is concentrated at intake valve "G" as it opens. A charge of gas is thus drawn into the cylinder as the piston travels outward.

Connecting rod "E" at the point of attachment to the crank pin of "D" describes a circle. Assuming piston "K" at its furthest point from the cylinder head and the chamber filled with gas, the next operation or stroke after the completion of the suction stroke is to compress this charge of gas. To accomplish this of course both intake and exhaust valves must be absolutely airtight. As the crank pin passes through the arc at "bottom center" and up the piston travels upward, compressing the charge of gas. At "top center," or when the piston is nearest the cylinder head, the charge is fully compressed and ready for ignition. At this moment the ignition system is so timed that it delivers the spark at spark plug "N." This spark is to the charge of gas what the percussion cap is to the loaded gun.

When the compressed charge of gas is ignited the piston is instantly forced outward due to the expansion of the burning charge, thereby delivering through piston "K" and connecting rod "E" a rotary motion to crank shaft "D." This is called the power stroke. After this has taken place considerable waste products of combustion must be eliminated from the cylinder in order to prepare it for a new charge. Therefore just before the piston completes the power stroke the exhaust valve "G" is timed to open to permit the burned gases to escape. This exhaust valve remains open during all the time that the piston travels up again. In this manner the cylinder is fully cleaned. The upstroke of the piston after the power stroke constitutes the exhaust stroke. In this manner four operations have been completed, namely, suction stroke, compression stroke, firing stroke and exhaust stroke. From the foregoing it will be noted that the power stroke is the only impulse stroke.

The necessity for proper valve timing becomes apparent. The intake valve must open when the piston begins to travel downward and it must close at a certain point to prevent the piston pushing this charge out of the cylinder when it begins to travel upward on the compression stroke again. Likewise the exhaust valve must open at a point after the expansive force of the firing charge has been exerted on the pistons. This is usually just before the piston reaches bottom center of the firing stroke. Likewise the exhaust valve closes when the piston has made the full travel upward, thereby eliminating all the burned gases. Motors of various makes differ slightly as to valve timing.

It must also be noted that the timing gears "A" and "B" turn at half time to crank shaft "D." To complete the four strokes of the piston crank shaft "D" must make two complete revolutions. In the meantime, however, the intake valve opens only on the suction stroke; the exhaust valve opens only on the exhaust stroke. Hence the necessity for timing gears being driven at half time speed.

The cam shaft "M" carries the cam which operates valve push rods "L." The cam is an egg-shaped device attached to the cam shaft, which in rotating lifts push rod "L," thereby opening valve "G," against the resistance of valve springs "H," these valve springs being necessary to insure quick action of the valves. The valve push rod rollers "T" are installed to permit noiseless operation and they should follow closely the contour of the cam. The valve springs, of proper design, insure this.

At point "L" there is an opening between valve stem and valve push rod. This device permits an adjustment of the valve push rod to take care of wear at this point and elsewhere in the valve mechanism.

Again let us refer to cylinder and piston. "S" represents compression space wherein the charge of gas is compressed to approximately 65 pounds before being ignited. In an explosive type motor there is considerable heat which sets up expansion of the metals. For this reason the piston cannot be a tight fit in cylinder. There must be sufficient space to permit proper lubrication. Otherwise if metal expands undue friction will arise. The piston, therefore, must have piston rings, "J," which are flexible and prevent air leaks in compressing the charge. Likewise these rings prevent lubricating oil from working into the combustion chamber. Usually there are three rings placed at the top of the piston for this purpose.

As mentioned previously, the internal type combustion engine depends for its power upon the number of heat units liberated. The gas engine is most efficient when hot. Nevertheless, it must be maintained at a temperature which will permit of proper lubrication. At certain temperatures the oil ceases to be a lubricant. Therefore, it is necessary for the cylinder to be water cooled in order to maintain a normal temperature. Hence the radiator and cooling system, which will be treated later.

IT MUST COME

What? Housecleaning in automobiles must come as well as anything else. We are going to move to new quarters April 15th, and must dispose of every used car we have before then. The highest offer takes any car. Here is an introductory bargain: Moon 5-passenger touring car, only $400; worth $700. And a 1913 Cole 5-passenger touring car, with electric starter and lights, at such a price, that cannot be equaled in the city.

RIVAL TICKETS HAVE SAME PLATFORM

As far as the official announcement is concerned the election of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers and Dealers' Association is still in statu quo. Tickets have been given out to the newspapers by the regulars and the progressives. The by-laws require that the regular ticket be announced 15 days before April 10 and the opposition seven days before.

H. G. Hurd, local Buick distributor, has withdrawn from the regular ticket and another name will be substituted for director. The progressives claim to have about 30 of the 45 votes pledged to their ticket. The regulars are equally confident of carrying the election.

The progressives announced their platform as for a spring show and a competent paid secretary. The regulars say that is also their policy. An interesting though friendly contest is expected. Half a dozen new members are expected to join the association before the annual meeting in order to "get in" on the voting.

TO INSPECT POSTERS AND HEAR F. D. GARDNER

The meeting Tuesday night at the Marquette Hotel of the Motor Accessory Trade Association promises to be one of the most interesting of the year. The meeting will follow the regular monthly dinner at 6:30 p. m., to which about 25 of the leading dealers in motor cars have been invited.

The feature of the evening will be a display of accessory and motor car posters and advertising signs, which are to be inspected and criticised. The display is to be arranged by A. E. Forse of the Fisk company, chairman of the Entertainment Committee, and President Allan H. Clark.

The speaker of the evening will be Col. Fred D. Gardner of St. Louis, author of the Missouri land bank bill, to be voted on in November, and incidentally a strong candidate for Governor. R. C. Buckley of the Bittel-Leftwich company, who is chairman of the Membership Committee, is actively soliciting a large attendance.

GOODRICH FORCES MEET

A new idea in the relationship between the executive and field men in the sales organization of a great corporation was successfully developed at the general sales conference of the B. F. Goodrich company at Akron, O., Thursday and Friday, March 2 and 3. By association together in a fraternal, good fellowship way, without any reference to experiences of the daily routine, a spirit of unity and co-operation was developed, the effects of which will be permanent in stimulating new loyalty to the Goodrich idea of production and marketing of rubber goods.

The 1916 Goodrich "homecoming," in the nature of a big family reunion, was attended by 450 salesmen working in territories from Denver to Maine and from Florida to the Canadian border. They represented the organizations of 14 Goodrich branches, those at New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Pittsburg, Buffalo, Detroit, Cleveland, Chicago, Kansas City, St. Louis, Minneapolis, Indianapolis, Atlanta and Cincinnati. They traveled to and returned from Akron in four special trains.

STEVENS HAS LEXINGTON

The agency for the Lexington car, built at Connorsville, Ind., has been placed in St. Louis with the Stevens-Waverly Automobile Co. The new Lexington is called the "Minute Man's Six" and is priced at $1075. The Lexington factory is not concerned in any Indiana merger. It is located at Connersville, where there are 10 large factories devoted exclusively to the building of automobile parts and accessories. The Lexington company has a close relationship to these plants, giving it the possibility of immense manufacturing facilities, not enjoyed by other companies. The new Lexington has the Moore multiple exhaust system, which gives the motor 22.8 per cent increase in power.

NEW FIRESTONE MANAGER

J. P. Patterson, who has been made district representative for the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., with headquarters in St. Louis, announces the appointment of F. M. Moore as manager of the St. Louis Firestone branch house. Moore was formerly with the Chicago Firestone branch.

"The Firestone company has made remarkable strides forward during the past year," said Moore yesterday. "The pneumatic tire output has been increased from 7,500 to 12,000 tires per day. Additions to the factory aggregating ten acres of floor space are at present nearing completion. When ready for occupancy the entire floor space of the Firestone plant will be over 31 acres."

TRUCK SALES INCREASED

W. L. Burgess, sales manager of the Dorris Motor Car Co., asked how he accounted for the enormous increase in sales of Dorris two-ton trucks, said that the truck users of St. Louis have awakened to the fact that they did not have to go outside of their own home town to get the best two-ton truck built in America, and that nowhere was there a service station that could compare with that operated by the Dorris Co.

Burgess claims that the Dorris Motor Car Co. has been compelled to increase its manufacturing capacity in order to make reasonable deliveries. The reduction in price to $1990 eliminates competition

INVEST IN THIS

We have a 1912 Owen 7 passenger touring car, which is in good condition. Needs paint, but we are not going to put one lick to this car, but sell it as it stands. Do you want it for $250? You can add $50 to the cost and make a neat little profit of about $200 for yourself.

IN addition to the element of convenience, motoring can and rightly should be a pleasure and recreation—free from the endless annoyances due to inadequate equipment.

It is true that electric starting and lighting systems, demountable rims and other refinements can be purchased and added to the car that lacks these devices. But experience has shown that to buy the entire and finished car from one manufacturer is not only less expensive, but much more satisfactory in that responsibility for the whole product can be centered in one institution.

Maxwell Motor Cars, being otherwise designed to earn and retain the approval of particular people, are, of course, provided with every accessory of established merit that would add to the convenience and comfort of their owners.

NEW PULLMAN HAS MAGNETIC GEAR SHIFT

The new Pullman car, shown by the Ideal Motor Sales Co., 1312 South Grand avenue, has the C. H. magnetic gear shift. The company will show a de luxe coupe at the Springfield (Ill.) automobile show this week—also a five-passenger touring car.

The gear shift is operated by the battery which has power to shift the gear 100,000 times without recharge. It is claimed for it that the change of gears is made as simple an operation as switching on the lights or the self-starter. It makes a car ideal for a woman to drive.

E. A. Stosberg of the Ideal company is on a trip through Northern Missouri, where he has placed a number of agencies and sold individual cars.

NOW THE "RIKER" TRUCK

A woman who drives a high-class and expensive car does not relish the idea of seeing a big lumbering truck, bearing the same name as her fancy limousine, coming down the street loaded with packing house products That is the real reason why the Locomobile Co. of Bridgeport, Conn., has decided to change the name of its truck to "The Riker." It is so called after Andrew L. Riker, vice president and chief engineer of the company. Another reason for the change is that the name Riker has greater significance in motordom than Wright in the aviation field.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals has reversed the lower court in the decision for Joseph N. Parkins against the Locomobile Co. The Court of Appeals decided Parkins' improvement on a carburetor is "lacking in invention," and the bill is ordered dismissed.

They were accompanied by Mrs. Norris and Mrs. McQuay. They found the weather so warm in the South that they cut out Key West and other points in Florida which they had intended to visit.

NATURAL HABITS A GUIDE IN PENNING OF BREEDING HENS

White Rocks Win in February, but R. I. Reds Lead in Egg-Laying Contest.

By C. T. PATTERSON, Pathologist Missouri Poultry Experiment Station, Mountain Grove.

During the breeding season it is advisable to pen the best birds in order to hatch from them that the flock may be improved.

It is too often the case that hens are taken from the range and placed in a close pen without proper conditions to make and keep them healthy, happy and profitable. There is no question but that the hen which has free range, where she can select her own food as well as get proper exercise, will do better work producing eggs, and that the eggs are more fertile and the chicks hatched are stronger than the hen which is penned without proper conditions.

In order to supply the proper conditions for the hens, we should study their natural habits. We know the hens are fond of earthworms, and there are many morsels of food selected from fresh earth by the hens; therefore, it is a good plan to turn some earth over in the pen each day with a spade. This should be done each morning, as the earthworms come to the surface each night, then go back into the earth when the sun comes up. Therefore, the work should be done between daylight and sunup. If it cannot be done at this time, some boards or an old door should be laid on the ground where the digging is to be done. This protects the worms, so they remain near the surface. A space of soil three feet square turned over each morning will furnish 20 hens with fresh earth to work in during the day, and by having systematically about the yard it will prevent the soil from becoming contaminated with disease.

Sunshine and Shade.

Sunshine is one of nature's greatest gifts, but "the same sun which melts wax will harden clay." Although sunshine is of great value, for it stimulates the birds to greater activity and is Nature's disease destroyer, yet if it is used to excess it may do great injury. Aside from a sun bath, it seems to be the fowl's inclination to stay in the shade during hot, sunshiny days and wander into the open only during cloudy days and early and late in the day. If the birds are penned they should be furnished plenty of shade. If natural shade is not at hand, artificial shade should be furnished. A good plan is to build a platform 18 inches or two feet from the ground, and if it is so it can be removed, the earth can be dug up underneath, making a splendid place for the hens to spend the hot part of teh day.

During wet, rainy weather the hens have an inclination or desire to get up onto something out of the mud. They will get on the woodpile, the fence, a wagon or, in fact, anything to be up off the ground. The platform just mentioned makes a splendid rest for them. During hot, dry weather the hens get under the platform for shade, and during the wet weather they get on top of it out of the mud.

The hens appreciate all these little things and show their appreciation by the quantity and quality of eggs produced.

February Contest Records Good.

The hens in the contest made good records during February. There were 7462 eggs laid during the month, or an average of 14 eggs per hen. The averages for five years here in the contests have been as follows, fractions omitted: 1912, 10 eggs each; 1913, 12 eggs; 1914, 13 eggs; 1915, 14 eggs, and 1916, 14 eggs each.

The highest pens to date in number of eggs are as follows:

59 R. C. Reds, Missouri	399
75 White Rocks, Washington	387
69 Barred Rocks, Missouri	346
82 Black Orpingtons, Indiana	345
102 Oregons, Oregon	342
50 White Wyandottes, Missouri	338
49 White Wyandottes, Michigan	330
25 S. C. White Leghorns, Washington	327
17 S. C. White Leghorns, Texas	314
56 S. C. Reds, Iowa	310

The highest pens for February are:

75 White Rocks, Washington	114
25 S. C. White Leghorns, Washington	107
69 Barred Rocks, Missouri	105
[illegible] White Wyandottes, Missouri	104
56 S. C. Reds, Iowa	103

The highest pens to date are as follows:

1. Pen 75, W. P. Rock, Washington	91
Pen 25, S. C. W. Leghorn, Washington	87
Pen 59, R. C. Red, Missouri	87
Pen 82, Black Orpington, Indiana	87
Pen 59, R. C. Red, Missouri	86
Pen 75, W. P. Rock, Washington	86
Pen 102 Oregon, Oregon	85
Pen 69, B. P. Rock, Missouri	84
Pen 75, W. P. Rock, Washington	84

Pen 75, White Plymouth Rocks, Washington, won the cup for February by laying 114 eggs.

Winter Ration Used at a Kansas College

The ration used in winter feeding on the poultry farm of the Kansas State Agricultural College is a dry mash made according to the following formula: 60 pounds of cornmeal, 60 pounds of wheat middlings or shorts, 50 pounds of meat scraps, 30 pounds of wheat bran 10 pounds of linseed oil meal, 10 pounds of milled alfalfa, and 11 pounds of salt.

This is fed in connection with a scratching feed thrown into the litter and consisting of three parts of wheat, two parts of corn and one part of oats, all by weight. Grit, oyster shell and charcoal are kept before the birds all the time, and they are fed once a day all the green food they will eat clean in half an hour.

Sanitary conditions are absolutely necessary to retain the health and vigor of the little ones.

Poultry Problems Solved

Egg Eating.

Is it possible to break a pullet from the habit of eating eggs? She goes from nest to nest frantically watching for an egg. She is a fine bird and I do not want to kill her if I can help it. I am sure it is not because she is hungry.—Old Subscriber.

Most egg eaters are pullets. They seem to have an appetitie for eggs during the early part of their own laying period, but as a rule they get over it, especially when they get out of doors with warm weather. I suppose that will happen in your case, but in the meantime you are losing some eggs. There are several remedies. For one thing, I think I should try putting this pullet by herself for a time and give her a variety of feed. Give her all the dry eggshells she will eat, also plenty of grit, oyster shell and meat. This may break her in a short time. In that case you can put her back with the rest of the birds. An old time remedy which is often effective consists in putting cayenne pepper in some kind of a mash-like meal and filling an eggshell with it. Another remedy is clipping off the end of the beak, but that isn't always successful.

Small Eggs.

I have 15 laying pullets. They have been laying nice large eggs, but now they are becoming small. Is it because I am not feeding enough? They laid 257 eggs in February.—W. S., St. Louis.

The reason, I believe, is quite apparent. These birds have been laying heavily during February and I suppose they have been laying through the winter. When birds have been laying heavily for a good while the eggs do fall off in size. In almost any flock the eggs will be smaller in size after a heavy laying season. Eggs that you find in cold storage are often smaller than average because they are put in cold storage frequently towards the end of the spring, so there is nothing strange about this condition in your case. Whether you are feeding enough I do not know. I think you should feed liberally. You have a condition right now that is not best for breeding. Two hundred and fifty-seven eggs in February from 15 pullets is an unusual average. It is about 24 eggs per bird in 29 days. You evidently know how to get eggs in the winter.

Laying Records.

I have 13 hens which laid 197 eggs in the month of February. I would like to know if you regard this as a good record. They laid the following number of eggs for each day during the month from the first to the twenty-ninth: 4, 3, 4, 3, 4, 4, 3, 6, 5, 6, 6, 5, 7, 7, 6, 9, 6, 9, 6, 10, 7, 11, 10, 7, 10, 12, 7, 12, 8. At the first of the month they were just starting to lay, but now they are all laying.—Mrs. A. P., St. Louis.

That is a fair record. I should not call it a really good record. It is quite good for the last half of the month. Still, in February, when eggs are comparatively high in price, you should have gotten profitable returns. Please note the much better record given by another correspondent in this department from 15 pullets in February. As your birds were apparently just beginning to lay the first of February, you will doubtless get more eggs during March and April and May, and with proper care you will doubtless get more eggs during the next three months than the other breeder, but, of course, eggs are more valuable earlier in the season for market purposes.

Spots in Eggs.

What is the matter with my white rock pullets? The eggs I receive from them have little blood spots in the white of the egg. I am not feeding anything to force them to lay. Here is what I feed five pullets and a cock. I give them not quite three-quarters of a pint Purina scratch feed scattered in about 6 inches of litter in the morning. At noon I give them some oats and table scraps and at evening when it was cold I gave them whole corn every other night half pint, and when it was cold I gave them the same as in the morning.—A. F. W., St. Louis.

You have a peculiar situation. I have seen individual birds that laid eggs of that kind, but I judge from your inquiry that all five of your birds are laying eggs with a blood spot in them. I don't know what to make of a situation like this. I think that the trouble will disapear. As you say, you are not forcing them with feed, but are giving a rather light feed, it seems to me. I myself should feed slightly more than that. Usually a condition like this is caused by some defect in the laying organs, but as I have said it is almost invariably confined to one bird. You say nothing about feeding green stuff or meat. I should by all means feed them some of these varieties of feed. I believe if you will do that and get them out of doors they will be all right. I am inclined to think that the situation is not serious.

250 Leghorns Raised With Box as Brooder

Poultry Editor, Post-Dispatch.

I raised 250 Leghorns without a brooder, and they were hatched in March and April. At night I put 30 chicks in a small box, covered it with an old blanket and if it was very cold a board on top of the blanket kept them warm. In daytime I put the chicks in a large box with a blanket in front, which hung down to within about three inches of the ground. In this box I put two one-gallon jugs filled with hot water to keep the chicks warm. It is better to have a brooder, but the amateur poultry raiser does not like to spend too much money when beginning, and you can use a box of this kind as well as a high-priced brooder.

Give the chicks fresh dirt to scratch in, as hens or chicks will not thrive without it. Do not let the young chicks get wet at any time, and watch for lice. Look on their heads, and if they have been hatched by hens you will be likely to find lice. Sprinkle with lice powder or grease the top of the head with a mixture of one part coal oil and two parts lard. Keep the boxes or brooders clean at all times, and if your chicks are Leghorns, in eight weeks you will have broilers. Do not feed sloppy food at any time and keep the drinking water clean.

The young chicks should not be fed until they are about 36 hours old. Grit should be given the chicks before food of any kind. Bird sand makes a good grit for them. Give them drinking water in a vessel from which they cannot get wet. About an hour after giving them grit and water they should be fed bread crusts soaked in sweet milk squeezed dry, so it will crumble. This should be fed every two hours until the chicks are about four days old. After that they should be fed commercial chick feed and oatmeal. Keep a dry mash by them all of the time after they are 10 days old. A good dry mash can be made by mixing 30 pounds coarse cornmeal, 30 pounds middlings, 15 pounds wheat bran, 5 pounds alfalfa meal and 5 pounds of dry meat scraps. The chick feed should be scattered in straw or litter of some kind. Feed them green stuff once a day of sprouted oats, lettuce, chopped onions or lawn clippings.

How One May Know Tender Dressed Bird

The housewife who goes out to buy a dressed fowl would frequently give a great deal if she could tell positively which bird has tender flesh and which is tough. There are a few tests which are reasonably sure to indicate the degree of tenderness where size does not show which is a young chicken and which is old.

If a bird is tender the flesh should give easily and gently when pressed with the finger. The skin under the wings should be tender and it should be torn easily when bending back the wings. Smooth skin and a soft cartilage at the end of the breast or keel bone indicate tenderness.

If there are long hairs on the carcass, or if the bird has a long, thin neck, it is a pretty sure indication that the fowl was old and is tough. A loose skin is another indication of age and toughness. Feet with sharp scales may also be considered as a sign that the carcass will not be found tender. The presence of long spurs is a commonly accepted proof that a bird is no longer a "spring chicken."

Poultry Paragraphs.

It is a good idea to keep the pullets separate from the older hens, as the former can stand heavier feeding without danger of overfattening them. The surplus cockerels should also be excluded from the pullets if good results are to be attained.

Disinfect the brooders before putting the chicks therein. In fact, it is advisable to remove the chicks and go through with this process at least once a week.

Train your pullets not to be afraid of you. Fowls that are easily frightened never do so well, and cause lots of trouble about the henhouse. A wild pullet is a nuisance in a well regulated flock.

Man Responsible for Most Poultry Diseases

Ninety per cent of the ailments of poultry are due to infraction of nature's rules by those in charge of the flock. Few, if any, of the early day hunters can recall ever having seen a diseased prairie chicken, and no woodsman has been found who ever saw a sick wild turkey. The nearer man can come to imitating nature in his care of the flock the more healthy the birds will be. Perhaps the greatest cause of poultry ailments is too close confinement.

Causes of diseases among fowls are many, but nearly all of them are under the control of the poultryman. Some of these causes are too close inbreeding, impairing the stamina and vitality of the birds, filth in the quarters, impure feed or water, improper ventilation and overcrowding of the house, especially the roosting quarters, the absence of needed elements in the food, especially grit and to a lesser degree lime, and the presence of lice or other parasites.

The time to doctor a fowl is before it gets sick. No other domestic animal, when sick, is so hopeless a proposition as the chicken. A common bird is not worth enough to make an extended effort to save it after one of the more serious ailments has attacked it, and it is almost as useless to try to save a valuable breeding fowl since a bird that has once had a serious illness should never be used for breeding purposes again.

The precautions are simply to feed judiciously keep the quarters clean and well ventilated, but free from direct drafts, supply clean water and plenty of sharp grit, provide means for exercise, and use the most healthy and vigorous birds in the breeding pen. The breeding stock should not only be in good health, but should be as free from the taints of disease in their own blood as well as the parent stock, as it is possible to get them.

Quisenberry's Advice on Care of Chicks

Start the brooder a day or two before the chicks are hatched.

All brooders have a small exercising place. The floor of this place should be covered with an inch of sandy loam. Place papers on the floor and sand on the papers, and on top of the sand an inch of chaff. You should also have a water fountain into which no straw and dirt can be scattered. You can also have a little feed hopper and get the chicks accustomed to the system of feeding. These are some recommendations given out by T. E. Quisenberry, Missouri's poultry expert, on methods of brooder management for early chicks.

If the little chickens must be taken any distance from the incubator to the brooder, use a market basket lined with flannel, place them carefully in it, cover them up and take them at once so as not to get them chilled. You should have the temperature of the brooder at 90 degrees, at a point 2½ inches above the floor.

Do not feed the chicks for two days or they may get digestive troubles. They do not really need food for 72 hours, but if you feel that you must feed them do not do so for at least 24 hours, because little chicks are provided by nature with a lunch basket.

Keep the chicks out of the brooder as much as you can after the first day. It is best to have the brooder in some building, but if you must have it out of doors a good plan is to nave a small yard covered by a hotbed sash connected with it.

BIG HATCHES!
On One Gallon of Oil—One Filling of Tank!
RAYO Incubators produce higher average hatches because center heat insures even temperature. Hinged glass top puts eggs, thermometer and all in plain sight, saving labor. Oil tank needs but one filling for entire hatch. Flame regulator saves 3 to 6 gals. oil every hatch. Hatching chart and money making book on request. Write for them and new catalog.
St. Louis Poultry Supply & Seed Co., 812 N. Broadway, St. Louis.

DAY-OLD CHICKS

POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF REAL ESTATE NEWS

BY BERRY MOORE

CARLETON BUILDING CORNER IS LEASED FOR CANDY STORE

Busy Bee Pays $10,000 Bonus to Cafeteria Owner for Basement at 6th and Olive and Will Also Occupy First Floor With Second Branch Store.

GRAND AV. CORNER IN $160,000 DEAL

Mallinckrodt and Bixby to Finance 13-Story Structure at Eighth and Olive Streets, Valuation of Properties Involved Being Placed at $1,000,000.

The Busy Bee Candy Co. has acquired a 10-year lease of the ground floor and basement of the Carlton Building at the northeast corner of Sixth and Olive streets. The lease was negotiated by Isaac T. Cook, in conjunction with Sterling E. Edmunds, president of the Carleton Building Co. The rental to be paid was not disclosed.

Incidentally, the Candy company paid W. H. Butterfield a bonus of $10,000 bonus for a 5-year lease of the basement occupied by the Village Inn Cafe, of which he was proprietor.

Butterfield, who also operates a cafeteria in the basement of the building at the southwest corner of Eighth and Pine streets, acquired the lease of the basement only six weeks ago.

The Busy Bee company, which operates large retail and manufacturing establishments at 617 North Broadway and 417 North Seventh street, will open one of the handsomest stores in the city at the Sixth and Olive corner. The store will be approximately 26 feet on Sixth street by a depth on Olive of 50 feet.

Carleton Building Improvements.

The Carleton Building Co. is undertaking extensive alterations and improvements which include the lowering of the first floor to the sidewalk level. This will do away with the steps at the entrance of the structure. The alterations will include the construction of two stores on Sixth street, of approximately 24x50 feet north of the Busy Bee space, to be known as Nos. 302 and 304 North Sixth street. The store at 304 has already been leased to the Hanover Shoe Co., a client of the Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co., which operates many stores in the East and which has headquarters at Hanover, Pa. The store at 304, adjoining the Busy Bee space, is not yet leased, though negotiations are in progress for it. The alterations will be begun immediately and will be completed by May 1.

$160,000 Deal Near Completion.

With the advent of spring, activity in uptown and downtown St. Louis is the distinguishing features of the St. Louis realty market. Several deals for sites, one embracing a prominent corner on Grand avenue north of Olive street, were disclosed yesterday.

The purchaser of the Grand avenue corner was a wealthy estate, which heretofore has restricted its investments to the central business district. The transaction, involving $160,000, probably will be concluded this week, when plans for the improvement of the site will be made public.

The Ben Altheimer Jr. Realty Co. has perfected plans for the erection on the west side of St. Alphonse street of a building to comprise 100 individual garages. It will extend from Windsor place to Finney avenue, occupying an entire half block. This site, which is 100 feet west of Grand avenue, is owned by the Ghio estate, for which the building is to be erected. Thirty of the garages have already been leased from the plans, the indications being that all of them will have been disposed of within a week.

The idea, Altheimer says, it to provide garages for big concerns in the central business district, at a nominal cost. A uniform rental of $5 a month will be charged for each garage, which will be 10x16 feet, and which will be equipped with electricity and hot-water heating. The cost of the improvements will not exceed $20,000, while the gross monthly rental on this basis will be $6000 a year. The site is now nonproductive.

Edward Mallinckrodt and W. K. Bixby, it was stated yesterday, will finance the erection of the 13-story banking and shop building announced for the southwest corner of Eighth and Olive streets, embracing 50x86x6 feet on the corner, held by Thomas Wright, vice president of the Third National Bank, and the site of the Holbrook-Blackwelder building at 810 Olive street. This deal will be concluded this week with the signature of Thomas Wright, that of Mallinckrodt and of Bixby having been obtained.

$1,000,000 Holdings in Deal.

The valuation at which these holdings are to be taken over are placed at $1,000,000 each. Thus it is estimated that Wright will be paid on a 4 per cent basis an annual net rental of $40,000.

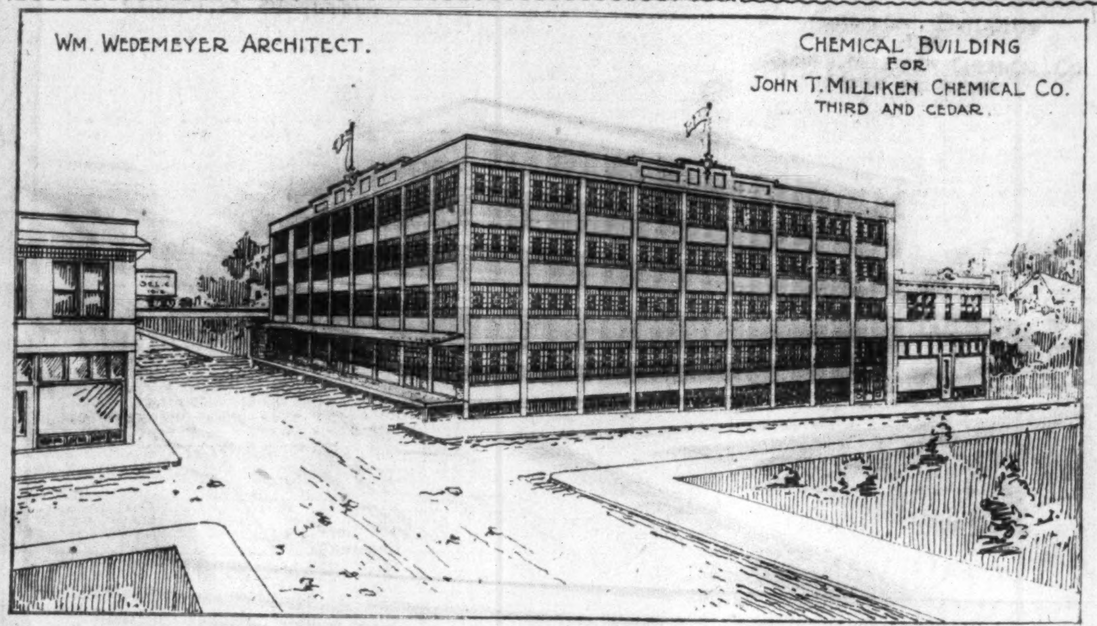
About 12 years ago the Holbrook-Blackwelder Co. purchased the Holbrook-Blackwelder building, formerly known as the Wagin building, for [illegible], and after reconstructing it sold the fee to the property to Mallinckrodt for [illegible], the Holbrook-Blackwelder Co. retaining a 99-year lease.

The [illegible] transaction of the week in the West End was the purchase of the Cadillac Hotel, at 6600 Washington avenue, by Fred L. Hisgen for $75,000, the grantor in the transaction being the Trust Company of St. Louis County. Hisgen, formerly of Evansville, Ind., is the owner of the Metropole Hotel at Twelfth and High streets. The Cadillac Hotel was formerly known as the Park Hotel, and was built shortly before the World's Fair.

"Conditions are certainly improving," said Edward Glik, secretary and treasurer of the Archschoefer & Glik Real Estate Co., in discussing the realty situation with a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday. "Right now agents are somewhat worried because they haven't deeds of trust enough to supply the demand. Eight months ago there were safes full of loans and comparatively few investors were buying. Today it's just the reverse—lots of money and few places to put it. It is a good sign, however. It shows that confidence is restored and that deeds of trust paying 6 per cent interest are a most desirable form of investment.

"The prospects for a very active sales season are good and inquiries are numerous for homes and investment properties. Of course, we are waiting for a few nice days. When they come agents will experience one of the busiest seasons in a good many years."

Building to Be Erected at Third and Cedar Streets for the John T. Milliken Chemical Co.



WM. WEDEMEYER ARCHITECT.
CHEMICAL BUILDING FOR JOHN T. MILLIKEN CHEMICAL CO. THIRD AND CEDAR.

A FOURSTORY, fireproof building is to be erected for the John T. Milliken Chemical Co., on the northwest corner of Third and Cedar streets. The old three-story building now occupying that corner will be razed. Plans for the new building have been drawn by William Wedemeyer, architect.

The building will cost about $250,000 and will be equipped with all the most improved fixtures for factories. All the partitions will be of metal and glass and the windows will have metal sash. The building will contain a steam power plant and electric light and refrigerating plants.

A switch of the Terminal Railroad Association will be extended into the building on the third floor level, so that the factory's products may be loaded in the building. There will be 150,000 square feet of floor space.

GROWING LIST IN RACE FOR HEAD OF REALTY EXCHANGE

C. M. McDonald Said to Be Most Likely Prospect, but Number of Others Are Mentioned.

Although the election will not be held until the latter part of April, a number of names already have been mentioned for the presidency of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange.

C. M. McDonald, vice president and the acting president of the exchange, obviously is the strongest prospect for the office. Before his election to the presidency McDonald was successively secretary and treasurer of the organization, while he has been almost continuously a member of the board of directors.

While he has not announced his candidacy, John A. Watkins, it is understood, is an aspirant for the presidency. He was a rival of Charles Z. Trembley, the incumbent, for the office last year, being backed by A. R. Schoolmeyer, a former president, who, it is said, is still at his command.

Gerald B. O'Reilly, also a former president, is boosting McDonald.

Others mentioned as available for the honor are Joseph M. O'Reilly, Hugh H. Stewart, Albert T. Terry, Henry R. Weisels, Roy Williams and James P. Blake.

UNDERWOOD TYPEWRITER CO. REMOVES TO FRISCO BUILDING

Takes Lease on Quarters on Second Floor; 11 Rooms Made Into One Office.

The Underwood Typewriter Co. has removed from the ground floor store room at 115-117 North Eighth street to the second floor of the Frisco building on Ninth and Olive streets.

It has taken a long-term lease on 11 offices which have been converted into one large office. It has been newly decorated and equipped and presents a very attractive appearance. J. A. McCormack is manager of the local branch. He expects the new location to be of great benefit to his company, and looks forward to a big increase in business this year.

The Underwood Typewriter Co. is enlarging its quarters all over the country and is now making a $400,000 addition to its factory in Hartford, Conn.

The lease here was negotiated by Isaac T. Cook and C. H. McClure, who manage and operate the Frisco building for the receivers of the St. Louis and San Francisco railroad.

REALTY MEN TO GATHER IN NEW ORLEANS, MAR. 28—31

Convention of National Association of Exchanges to Be Held in City Presenting Many Features of Much Interest.

Real estate men are planning to attend the convention of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges, in New Orleans, March 28-31.

The Southern city occupies a romantic position among American cities. It was founded by Bienville, nearly 200 years ago, and has experienced many vicissitudes. Up to the past 15 years the city clung remarkably close to its ancient traditions and precedents, progress being sacrificed somewhat to picturesqueness. In the past decade and a half, however, the quaint old town has solved problems and difficulties that place it in the foremost rank of progressive centers of population. It is still possible to note there the contrast between the "old time" city and the metropolis of today.

Romance Willed to City.

Generations of French and Spanish rulers willed romance to the city. Today the names of many gallant adventurers and courageous statesmen adorn street signs, linking the present with the past. Tonti, Marigny, Toulouse, Cortes, Iberville, Claiborne—they are all there.

In old St. Louis cemetery one finds epitaphs and inscriptions chiseled before the majority of American cities were founded. Many of the most notorious buccaneers sleep here—Jean Lafitte, Dominique You and others, who ravaged the Mexican coast, sacked Spanish galleons and battled with English frigates.

On the shore of Lake Pontchartrain, an arm of the Gulf of Mexico, stands the old Spanish fort that once guarded the city. Its ancient guns still poke their noses from the embrasures. The acres around the fort that once were regularly inundated, now pay tribute to the art of reclamation by producing rich crops.

Orange Grove Near Fort.

Near this old fort, 7000 acres, reclaimed from swamp lands, are planted to oranges. Hundreds of other reclaimed acres are planted to garden truck and farm crops.

Protecting the city from the great Mississippi floods that still play havoc upriver is a system of levees said to be the finest in the world, surpassing even the great dikes of Holland.

New Orleans, situated below water level, has solved some of the most intricate and costly problems of sanitation and civil comfort. This work will prove of interest to real estate men. In addition, the city offers a fine quality of Southern hospitality.

During 1915 the number of Farm Ads printed in the Post-Dispatch was 11,652, or 1063 more than appeared in the nearest competitor.

APARTMENTS NOT YET COMPLETE ARE TAKEN ON LEASE

Demand Partly Attributed to Prospect of Lull in Construction Due to High Materials.

INVESTORS VERY ACTIVE

Homes for Bachelors and Small Families Said by Agents to Be in Especial Favor.

Judging from the number of prospectors already active, there will be no dearth of transactions in realty in St. Louis or its suburbs during the ensuing spring, according to real estate agents.

Modern flats and apartments in the West End and on the South Side, which can be purchased on an advantageous basis, are receiving the attention of investors and speculators alike.

Prices are said to be at the lowest stage in the history of the city and in many instances properties can be bought at figures at which they formerly could have been hypothecated.

With the advance in prices of building material, indications are that construction will be at a low ebb the remainder of the year, especially where iron and steel enter into the situation. Thus, the demand for flats and apartments soon will exceed the supply, it is expected, and, as a natural sequence, higher prices will prevail and those who buy now are likely to find it easy to realize large profits in the early future.

Agents state that the demand for modern flats and apartments is greater than ever heretofore, and for revenue purposes are most attractive with rentals at their present levels. As a matter of fact, many large apartment buildings have been leased while in course of construction.

Leased Before Completion.

Although the Castleman apartments, being erected at the southwest corner of Castleman and Grand avenues, under the supervision of the Julius Haller Real Estate Co., are not more than half completed, half of them have already been reserved, with contracts for leases of one and two years, with privilege of three.

It is understood that 20 leases have been signed for suites in the Georgian Court Hotel apartments, under construction on Kingsbury boulevard, east of De Baliviere avenue. John W. Kearney, manager of the publicity department of the Missouri Pacific Railway, and a former newspaper man, was the first to lease a suite in this building. There are applicants enough for the remainder to fill them, but as it is the intention to make the Georgian Court ultra exclusive, they will not be accepted unless they measure up to the prescribed standard. The apartments comprise one and two rooms with kitchenette, etc., and have been designed to attract bachelors and newly-weds or couples without children.

Demand for Bachelor Apartments.

There is an unprecedented demand for bachelor apartments being built by the Francis-Weyland Construction Co., on Washington avenue west of Grand, under the direction of the Julius Haller Real Estate Co., indications being that they will be entirely out of the market before completion. This building is also being designed as an exclusive home for bachelors and couples without children. There is no objection, however, to babies or to children in these apartments, according to Haller, provided room can be found for them.

The big one and two-room and kitchenette building being erected by the Francis-Weyland Construction Co. on Berlin and Laurel avenues, in Washington Heights first addition, are also a magnet. These apartments, according to the Orion E. and R. G. Scott Real Estate Co., which is financing them, are being rapidly absorbed.

The Po-Mo Realty & Investment Co. has begun the erection at 5540 and 5548 Delmar boulevard of two apartment houses to cost in the aggregate $80,000. The site has a frontage on Delmar of 134 feet by a depth of 190 feet, and the buildings will contain six apartments of six rooms each, exclusive of sleeping porch and sun parlor. Frederick Schmitt is president of the Po-Mo Co., which is a new factor in building operations in this section of the city.

R. A. and G. B. Bullock have begun the erection at 4386 West Pine boulevard of a three-family building to cost $18,000.

FIRST OFFICE BUILDING BUILT IN O'FALLON PARK DISTRICT

New Structure Erected by Charles Gundlach Has Stores, Office Suites and One Apartment.

The Lincoln building, lately completed at the southwest corner of Florissant and Alice avenues, has three stores on the ground floor with five office suites on the second floor, and one apartment. The building is located on one of the best corners in the O'Fallon Park district.

The Strassberger Conservatory of Music occupies one-half of the second floor, and Dr. C. E. Weiser, dentist, occupies the main office suite.

Charles Gundlach, owner of the building, occupies a suite and will do a general real estate and insurance business. The ground floor is occupied by the Lincoln Toggery, Walter H. Voss Jewelry and Optical Co., and C. J. Jones, Elgin Creamery. The building is the first office structure in the O'Fallon Park district.

Nina Place Apartment Which Is Sold Before Its Completion

An apartment building being erected at 5885 Nina place by Architect W. H. Mills, under the supervision of the Menteer Realty Co., has been sold to John B. Heydt. In designing this apartment, Mills insisted upon large rooms and a wide lot having a frontage of 80 feet, insuring plenty of light and air.

Each living section contains six rooms, including an extra large sun parlor, which is equipped with In-a-Door beds, making it convertible into a sleeping porch at night. The dining room and living room are each 19x12 feet. In addition to the usual equipment this apartment will have stationary vacuum cleaners, laundry dryers and garages.

Mills believes the better class of investors will enter the market for apartments when they are convinced they are getting a well-constructed building. He feels justified in this belief by the fact that he sold this apartment before it was completed.

The Menteer Co. has in contemplation an apartment hotel which will be the last word in these already popular buildings.

KIRKWOOD LOTS TO BE BASIS OF BIG AUCTION APRIL 22

Paul Jones Realty Co. to Dispose of Remainder of Mermod Homestead, Rain or Shine.

The Paul Jones Realty Co. has just completed arrangements whereby it will sell at auction all the remaining lots in Mermod place, Kirkwood. The company is planning to hold the sale on Saturday afternoon, April 22, rain or shine.

This is a subdivision of the old Mermod homestead and is one of the highest points in St. Louis County. It is conveniently located to schools, churches and steam and electric transportation. One of the features of the property is that almost every lot is 100 feet front and they are all restricted.

This will be an opportunity for many people who have been planning for years to get out into the county to acquire a lot in a high-class restricted subdivision on convenient terms. The banks of Kirkwood are eager to assist buyers in this subdivision to build homes. Another one of the unusual advantages is that all sidewalks, streets, sewers and, in fact, every improvement is made and paid for, and the purchaser can feel sure that he will not be bothered by any special taxes.

Everything seems to indicate that this will be a very successful sale, considering the wonderful improvements that have been made in Kirkwood recently, and also the fact that the $3,000,000 bond issue was carried which will insure good roads.

There are some 40 lots, comprising nearly 4000 front feet, to be sold, and the fact that the sale is in such capable hands as the Paul Jones Realty Co. tends to insure success. The sale will be in charge of Percy L. Watson.

HECKMANN REAL ESTATE CO. ERECTING THREE BUNGALOWS

Buildings on San Francisco Avenue Will Complete Row of 12 on That Thoroughfare.

The Heckmann Real Estate Co. is erecting on San Francisco avenue, between Newstead and Tower Grove avenues, three bungalows which are attracting attention. They complete a row of 12 seven-room buildings, each having a lot 32x200 feet. All have hardwood floors, bookcases, built-in buffets, kitchen cabinets, hot water heating, oak stairs, electric plugs and glass door knobs. Attractive features of the buildings are the bedrooms, which are finished in ivory.

The Heckmann company has completed a double apartment on Margaretta avenue, between Newstead and Taylor avenues. This contains sites of three rooms and kitchenette and has hardwood floors. The site formerly was a part of the old Peper estate.

NEW SIX-FAMILY APARTMENT FOR WEST PINE BOULEVARD

L. & A. Scharff Sell Property Near King's Highway to M. J. Kauffman, Who Will Build.

The Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co. report the sale of lot 70.6x213.2¾ on the north line of West Pine boulevard, 212 feet east of King's highway. The property was sold for the account of the L. & A. Scharff Distilling Co. to M. J. Kauffman.

The location of this lot is immediately east of Forest Park and the Buckingham Hotel. The site will be improved with a 6-family building, each apartment having 7 rooms, 2 baths, hot-water heat, hardwood floors and other modern features, including garages.

SITE FOR STORES AND FLATS SOLD FOR $75,000

New Block of Buildings Will Be Erected at Olive Street and Compton Avenue.

Plans are being drawn for the erection at the southeast corner of Olive street and Compton avenue of a handsome block of stores and flats.

The site was acquired Friday by the Engelman Paint Co., the builder for $75,000, through Sam Hamburg Jr., in conjunction with the Rosenbaum-Hauschulte Real Estate Co. and John W. Gibson, manager of the real estate department of the Mercantile Trust Co.

Hamburg also disposed of three houses on West Belle Terrace, just west of the Missouri Baptist Sanitarium, owned by Raymond G. Cox, to a client of the Rosenbaum-Hauschulte Real Estate Co. The price paid for the apartments, which yield an annual rental of $3888, was $36,000. This is the third large deal effected by Hamburg this month.

Mayor Edmond Beall has received a letter in which a threat is made to blow up one of the Alton mills. The writer complained of having a grievance against the mills for scattering chaff over the streets.

BUILDING PERMITS FOR NINE DAYS IN MARCH $816,345

Record of Authorized Improvements Unequaled Since World's Fair Days, McKelvey Says.

A record for building permits unequaled since the days just prior to the World's Fair of 1904, was established in the first nine days of March, it was announced yesterday by Building Commissioner McKelvey, when permits for buildings estimated to cost $816,345 were issued.

The largest permit issued was that for the Orpheum Theater, which Louis Cella is to erect at Ninth and St. Charles streets, at a cost of $100,000, according to the permit.

The new bank building at the northeast corner of Broadway and Washington avenue, to be occupied by the Franklin Bank, will cost $60,000, according to the permit issued March 2. A building for the Booth-St. Louis Cold Storage Co., costing $60,000, was authorized at 1221-3 Lewis street.

A substantial increase in building permits over last year was recorded in the month of February, the value of new buildings in permits issued being $1,180,334, and the same month in 1915 it was $701,362, an increase of $478,972.

WALNUT PARK CORNER SOLD

The John C. Greulich Realty Co. reports the sale of 2379-81-85 Gilmore avenue, consisting of a lot 100x150 improved with stores, flats and hall on the front part of the lot and a feed warehouse on the rear of the lot.

This was sold for the account of John Shannahan to George J. Stefan, the present occupant of the building, who will make extensive improvements and also will erect a four-family apartment on part of the premises for investment purposes. The price paid was $10,000.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

STOCKS SCORE IRREGULAR GAINS ON WEEK'S TRADE IN WALL STREET MARKET

The Uncertain Foreign Outlook Checks Speculation, However.

BUSINESS OUTLOOK GOOD

Trade and Industry Are Unusually Active for This Time of Year.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 11.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review today, says:

"The foolish story, published in some of the newspapers yesterday, that Mr. J. P. Morgan is coming back from England with a power of attorney in his pocket over a thousand million dollars worth of American securities, now held in England, will not greatly distract the market. It was suggested to some imaginative mind, no doubt, by the fact that Mr. Morgan has been in London, that the British Treasury has bought up a good many English holdings of our stocks and bonds, and that sales of such securities on our Stock Exchange have lately slackened. But perhaps there are other ways of accounting for all three incidents.

"The idea that the exchequer, even after its somewhat persistent effort to get control of these English holdings, has accumulated any such amount, is wholly absurd. Financial London's own impression seems to be that something under $200,000,000 have been acquired in exchange for British Government obligations, and that a part even of this amount has been already sold.

The Sales in New York.

"But the Government has three good reasons for proceeding very deliberately in further sales to the New York market. To the extent that England parts with these American securities, she surrenders one of her greatest elements of strength in economic leadership. By pressing them too rapidly, the exchequer would run the risk of spoiling its market and incurring a heavy loss in the difference between the buying and the selling price.

"But more than all, it would be parting with its most valuable reserve power for the future maintenance of sterling exchange.

"Whether our own market will eventually have repurchased all of the huge amount of American securities previously owned by English investors, undoubtedly depends on the duration of the war. Another year of such prodigious economic strain as now exists throughout belligerent Europe will infallibly create some new conditions in the finances of those governments. It is already plainly enough apparent that their capacity of raising war loans, unless at increasingly exorbitant rates of interest, is being severely tested.

"Much longer continuance of the present war expenditure will inevitably raise the question of new and drastic expedients. Some of the fighting states would almost certainly be forced to recourse to irredeemable paper money issued directly by the state. All of them will be forced to sacrifice, on a scale not yet approached, the public and private property of the respective nations. If such a situation should arise, the American securities in the hands of the British exchequer would be a reserve of incalculable value. We have not yet reached that state of things. But the wisest statesman cannot say when the war will reach its end.

A Shortage in Cars.

"There were some interesting items of home industrial statistics in the weekend reports. The mercantile reviews sum up the situation in the statement that, disregarding precedent, business throughout the country grows in volume at a time of year when contraction is usually experienced.

"This fact is well exemplified by today's monthly report of idle cars in the United States. For the first time since November, 1913, an actual shortage of freight cars is reported. A year ago this week the statement showed 321,000 sidetracked cars; today there are 20,500 too few. Not since the enormous business of the opening months of 1907 has such a shortage occurred at this time of year.

"Reflecting the same conditions, today's compilation of the earnings on our 43 larger railways during February shows in gross receipts the largest increase over the previous year ever shown in February—an increase, as compared with the returns of 1915, which more than counterbalances the decrease of that year from 1913.

"The stock market showed irregular gains on the week's trading. Yesterday's prices were about steady."

LONDON REVIEW.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, March 11.—The violent and continued military activity on the western battle front has only anticipated by a few weeks what was commonly expected before the German attack began. The belief is now generally held that developments of the highest importance regarding the war as a whole are to be looked for in the next few months.

The best indication of the real position, in the city's judgment, is obtainable neither from the British nor the German press, but from such cold facts as the depreciation of the reichsmark and the known anxiety of German financiers concerning results at Verdun. Whether that action was or was not accelerated by the pending German loan, a complete failure of the attack might easily have far-reaching even if not conclusive consequences.

The American Position.

The vote in your Congress on the armed ship question is naturally regarded as an important turn in the situation. But it is fully recognized that the President's problem will remain most difficult; because, while our commercial and financial interest prescribes your keeping out of war, it is equally inevitable that our Government should make absolutely clear its disapproval of any action by any belligerent, violating the laws of civilization.

While the public is now fully prepared for all possible exactions in the forthcoming budget of taxation, a campaign is undoubtedly extending for the greater protection of British commerce from attacks by Germany after the war. This movement bases itself chiefly on the extent to which the war itself has shown Germany's politics, finance and trade to have been harnessed together in the past.

War Orders Are Large.

In view of the severity of the impending military engagements and the unprecedented employment of artillery during the past fortnight and in view also of the large bodies of new troops which our own partial conscription is creating, there is no likelihood that orders for munitions will relax to any large extent.

Furthermore, the belief is firmly held here that each new violation by Germany of the principles of humane warfare renders any inconclusive peace impossible. No one here can pretend to know the actual present feeling of the German people. But the two considerations which govern judgment of the matter here are our belief that the German people have been grossly misled regarding the real position and that their Government's financial tactics were consistent only with an early victory."

CATTLE MARKET AT HIGH LEVEL OF THE SEASON

Week's Values Are 25c to 35c Up; Hogs Are Highest Since 1914.

	Last Week.	Prev. Week.	Year Ago.
Cattle	15,223	13,406	15,757
Hogs	52,746	70,583	63,917
Sheep	11,045	13,502	11,312
Horses and mules	3,653	4,994	4,942

High prices for the season were scored in the cattle market last week. The shipment that made the record was a drove of Illinois fed beeves that went to killers at $9.60 per cwt. The market for the week displayed strength and closed on a 25c to 35c higher basis than the previous week. The gain scored in values puts the market on a $1.25 to $1.50 higher basis than the low level of four weeks ago. There was a strong call all week and buyers were in the market for every pound of beef they could get, and at no time did they deem it necessary to get concessions in order to move the showings.

There was a ripping good trade in the butcher department of the market also. While the big end of receipts went to steer cattle, there was a fair quota of butcher classes available. Heifers sold well and the best went up to $9.10, but no strictly choice grades were offered. The cows on sale sold up to $8, with he bulk going from $5.75 to $6.50. These kinds sold full 15c to 25c higher. Vealers were 75c lower. Top was $10.50, with the bulk selling from $10 to the top.

Only a moderate offering of bulls was available last week. Market was active on them and sellers encountered no trouble whatever getting satisfactory prices, which were for the most part 15c higher. Best bulls sold up to $8, with a fair quota of them going from $6 to $7.50.

Another week of stronger trade for stockers and feeders was evidenced. The demand centered largely for choice feeders, which sold up to $7.75, with the bulk of stockers and feeders going from $6.50 to $7.50. The clearance was good.

Southern Cattle Higher.

Offering of Southern cattle was somewhat lighter than usual. Market on mostly all classes was 15c to 25c higher, and in some cases even more than this. The bulk of the supplies came from territory of the South and East, but around a dozen load of Texas cattle were on sale. The Southwestern contribution carried two cars of steers that went at $7.50, with the balance of the supply consisting of bulls, which sold in a range of $6.10 to $6.80. These are certainly attractive prices for Texas cattle of their grade. The market is exactly 50c higher than three weeks ago.

Mixed offerings from the South and East sold well. Buyers were in for all the cattle they could get, and the only grades not showing strength were yearlings. These went 15c to 25c lower, with grown cattle 15c to 25c to the other extreme. Mississippi steers sold last week at $7.60, the best price paid for a full trainload of cattle from that State. There were 20 cars in the consignment. The clearance for the week was thorough.

Receipts of hogs were much smaller than a few weeks ago, and as there was an extra good demand at all times the market was active with prices on the advance until they reached the highest basis since the middle of August, 1914. The close on the week was the high point, and the top of the market was 90c higher than at the opening of the week. The market was higher every day in the week.

Shippers pushed the market for all they were worth. It was a real fight for the hogs that had any weight, but the pigs advanced slowly with the poorer grades not showing much improvement. The good hogs, 200 pounds and over, went at $9.50@11.15, as a rule the latter price being the top for the week, while the mixed and plain grades sold at $8.50@9.50, rough packers $8.50@9.

The best end of the lights found ready sale at $9.25@10, fair offerings sold at $8.50@9.25, best pigs under 125 pounds went at $8.25@9, fair $7.35@8, and the Southern kinds $6.50@7.75. The range of prices was much wider than for a long while.

A fair supply of sheep arrived each day and the market was in good shape all week, and at the close prices were around 25c higher than the close of the previous week, on all desirable offerings. Lambs that were not fat were not any higher, as the buyers did not care for them. The offerings were principally lambs from Colorado and other Western states, with some sheep from Wyoming. No natives of any consequence were received.

At the opening of the week the best of lambs were selling at $11.25, but before the week closed they were bringing $11.50, which is as high as any lambs ever sold on this market. Medium grades lambs sold at $11 and slightly better, while the fair grades went at $10.40@11, and the culls $8@9.50. Some yearlings were received and sold at $9.25@9.65.

The best of the mutton sheep went at $8, several lots bringing that figure, while those that were not so very good sold at $7.50@7.85, and the bucks at $7, but there was not many bucks offered. Buyers were willing to purchase anything that they could use for slaughter, but there was not much of a demand for poorer grades.

COTTON MARKET IS 13 POINTS UP FOR THE WEEK

Values Favor the Bulls Despite a Light Trade; Spots Are Stronger.

Cotton futures gained 13 points in New York for the July option and 14 points in New Orleans during the past week. The fall positions did not fare quite so well, but the difference in the gain was too small to use as an argument in favor of values.

On Saturday, March 4, July cotton in New York closed at 11.82c; during the week the option had a fairly steady advance, selling as high as 12.13c on Thursday and as high as 12.12c Friday, and closing at 11.95c yesterday.

This advance in futures was accompanied by, and partly was caused by, a substantial advance in the spot markets. Not only were quotations advanced to the extent of ¼c to ⅜c, but the feeling became more friendly to cotton values, and buying was more active and sellers had less reason to complain of prices.

Exports should not be compared with the movement at the same time last year, because the whole of the export movement last year was out of proportion, running extremely light all the fall and extremely heavy all during the spring and summer months; but the movement last year was out of proenough to justify previous estimates that the total will reach 5,500,000 bales. Exports last week, ending Friday, totaled 107,696 bales, bringing the total for the season up to 3,669,637 bales.

There are left now 20 more weeks in this season, and an average of 91,500 bales per week will make the 5,500,000. The same rate at which cotton moved last week would take the total to the 5,750,000 bales mark. Worthy of note in the export movement is that France has been taking cotton more freely for several weeks; and, too, that France's takings for the season total over 526,000 bales, against some 400,000 during the same period last season.

Great Britain has taken about 750,000 bales less cotton than last season, and the Continent, other than France, has taken 1,400,000 bales less. It may be remembered that Continental takings last season were, to a great extent, increased by the heavy movement through Italy, and that was due in no small measure to the fact that Germany received no little cotton through that gateway. England's reduced stock will keep that country importing cotton steadily all during the rest of this season.

Forwardings from Liverpool to spinners last week totaled 91,000 bales, of which 70,000 were American; imports were 163,000 bales, of which 128,000 were American; total stocks were 926,000 bales, of which 680,000 were American. The showing for the week, both as to prices and statistics, was a good one up to yesterday, when the future market weakened and sold off 10 points from the previous close, when the weakness was attributed to fear of the result of the sinking of the Norwegian bark Silius, on which were a number of Americans. The decline in the market was not heavy, however, and might be termed a reaction.

Question of Acreage.

The question of acreage is one of great importance to the whole trade, for there seems to hang the price of cotton. Opinions as to the disposition of the farmer towards this subject are varied. Increases and decreases will be governed by the conditions of small communities. Apparently there is no uniform intention to decrease, as existed last season at this time.

Spot markets generally were quoted higher, and closing prices were as follows: Galveston market steady, midding cotton 11.90c; New Orleans steady, 11.69c; Mobile steady, 11.44c; Savannah quiet, 11⅝c; Charleston steady, 11⅜c; Norfolk steady, 11.44c; Wilmington nominal, 11.25c; Houston steady, 11.80c; Augusta steady, 11.69c; Memphis steady, 11.75c; Little Rock steady, 11.70c; St. Louis steady, 11⅝c.

Wheat underwent a decided sag in value today, influenced by bearish estimates of stocks in the chief exporting countries and by the torpedoing of a Norwegian steamer which had Americans in its crew. The market closed weak 1⅝c to 2¼c lower, with May at $1.06@1.08 and July at $1.05⅝ asked. Corn finished unchanged to ¼c higher; oats were steady.

Down turns which began in the price of wheat as soon as trading opened had their primary source in a comprehensive report made by a leading expert, who had been investigating the amount of surplus supplies in the United States, Canada, Argentina, Australia and India. He announced that the five countries were in possession of enough available export wheat to fill, except to Germany and Austria, the entire world's needs for a year without taking a bushel from new crops. The surplus in the five countries was estimated at 626,000,000 bushels, as against total import requirements of only 560,000,000 bushels. At no time during the session were the bulls able to bring about and decisive rally from the effects of this showing.

Low Prices of the Day.

Lowest prices of the day in the wheat market were reached after word was received that the lives of seven American sailors had been endangered by a torpedo used without warning. On the break which resulted from this news, many holdings of wheat were sacrificed under standing emergency orders to sell out at fixed limits, so as to put a stop to losses. The outlook was for a small decrease in the domestic visible on Monday, whereas the falling off a year ago was 2,335,000 bushels.

Corn displayed relative firmness throughout the day, as compared with wheat. The principal immediate reasons were export inquiry and the lightness of receipts.

At the moment wheat futures have worked into a position where sentiment is considerably mixed over the outlook. Not only is the statistical position of the market bearish, but the submarine menace is likely at any time to sever relations between this country and Germany, which would mean much more uncertain shipping conditions for exporters of American grain.

It must be remembered, however, that $1.10 May wheat in Chicago, on the end of the old crop year, is a decidedly low price in the face of a world's war, especially when it is considered that prices are down nearly 30c a bushel in a little over a month and values now are 45c lower than a year ago.

Crop Scare Season.

The season of crop scares is near at hand, and with the winter wheat acreage 11.3 per cent less than last year and the crop indicated early some 115,000,000 bushels under a year ago, should bug damage or drouth develop on an extensive scale, holders of wheat would husband their supplies closely, especially as the movement to market has been such as to put a large percentage of the crop in the "show windows," which invariably makes sentiment bearish to a greater extent than is justified.

It probably will be found that the Chicago crowd will talk bearish and "bait" the public until the market is heavily oversold, just as it was overbought before the recent big break. Then, when the time is ripe, the "crop killers" will be sent into the fields, and commission houses wires will be loaded with damage reports. This is ever the case in the early summer markets and there is no reason to believe that history will not repeat this year.

The Zinc Concentrating Company

Capital $3,000,000

Par Value, $10—Full Paid and Non-Assessable

The Zinc Concentrating Company has purchased and owns all the patents, rights and contracts relating to the "Campbell System of Magnetic Separation of Zinc, Iron-Sulphide Ores." This process has been developed by actual use commercially until today it is admitted by scientists and metallurgists to be one of the most important developments in the treatment of zinc, iron-sulphide ores, ranking, in relation to those ores, with the oil flotation process.

The Zinc Concentrating Company owns fundamental patents covering the Etherington-Singer Non-Oxidizing Roaster and the Campbell Zinc-Iron Separator. These patents control the "Campbell System," which is the only one giving satisfactory results to the producers of zinc-iron sulphide ores. This process is producing the highest known recovery of metallic values at the lowest operating costs.

In order to furnish the Company with additional capital required by increasing business we have purchased a large block of its stock, a considerable portion of which has already been placed with our customers and the friends of the management.

We offer the unsold portion at $3.75 per share. (Par value $10.)

Applications to list this stock on the New York and Boston Curb Markets will be made by the Company.

MARITAL TROUBLES OF L. A. GESERICHS RELATED IN COURT

Husband Says Daughter of the Late William Druhe Was Abusive to Him.

MARRIED 23 YEARS

One Son of Couple Testifies for Father and Another for His Mother.

The divorce suit of Louis A. Geserich of 2323A Holly avenue, traffic manager of the Moon Automobile Co., against Mary Geserich, a daughter of the late William Druhe, wealthy lummer dealer and at one time principal owner of "Amerika," a local German daily newspaper, was taken under advisement yesterday by Circuit Judge Arnold.

Mrs. Geserich is resisting the suit as she does not want her husband to get a divorce. They have two children—William, 21 years old, and Robert, 18. William testified for his mother and the other son for his father.

The Geserichs were married 23 years ago and separated last September. There had been a previous separation, in September, 1913, following a scene between Geserich and his wife when he found her in the company of another man. The husband then brought suit for divorce, but this was dismissed after a reconciliation.

He Tells of Incident.

Geserich, on the stand yesterday, related the incident which caused the first separation and told of his condonation of his wife's alleged offense after she had made both written and oral promises in regard to her future conduct. He complained that Mrs. Geserich failed to abide by some of the promises. One, he said, was that she would take out their son Robert, whose health was delicate, for daily airing in the parks. She did this for a while, but did not continue it regularly, he said. Another complaint was that she did not tell him when Robert smoked cigarettes.

Geserich also testified that his wife addressed him in abusive language and that one time, after they had quarreled, she got a butcher knife and went to the basement, threatening to end her life. He said he sent the two sons after her, and they took the knife from her. He also said that upon another occasion she threw down a tray of food in the parlor of their home and that butter got into the velvet rug. At the time of the last separation they divided the furniture.

Wife Tells Her Story.

Mrs. Geserich testified that from the time of the reconciliation she did everything in her power to maintain harmony but that her husband made things unpleasant by objecting to her going out of the house. As to taking Robert out for airing, she said, she did this when the boy would permit her to do so. She said her husband knew of Robert smoking.

A source of trouble, she said, was Geserich's habit of eating Sunday night supper at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Platte. At the time she threatened to end her life, she said, her husband's conduct toward her had affected her nerves.

For several months before the final separation Geserich and his wife were not on speaking terms and did not eat at the same table, they testified. On the day of the separation, she said, he kissed her good-by and said she might not see him again as he wanted to be free.

Geserich was chairman of the Missouri Fish Commission during Gov. Hadley's administration.

MAN HELD AS FORGER WHO TRAVELED ON FIXED CIRCUIT

Prisoner at Shreveport, La., Said to Have Made Schedule for Six Years—One Check Passed in St. Louis.

A man who for the last six years has traveled about the United States on a fixed schedule, cashing at some bank, nearly every week, a forged cashier's check for $100, has been arrested in Shreveport, La., according to information received yesterday by the local branch of the William J. Burns Detective Agency.

C. H. Kelly, local manager of the agency, which represents the American Bankers' Association, said the man once obtained $100, in his accustomed manner, from one of the St. Louis banks—which bank, Kelly refused to say. While the total amount obtained, about $30,000, it was stated, was so widely gathered as to cause no great loss anywhere, yet the man's methodical ways, and his continuous success made him a great source of worry to bankers and detectives.

Had 25 Different Aliases.

The name of "C. West" was given when the man was arrested in Shreveport, but this is only one of a list of 25 names he is said to have used. He is said to be from Detroit, and the detectives are now making inquiries preparatory to a public statement as to his identity and his operations. He is described as about 40 years old, weighing about 190 pounds, and being smooth shaven and well dressed.

The man's alleged method was to acquaint himself with facts about the habits and associates of bank cashiers and paying tellers, particularly the latter, and having posted himself as to the cashier and paying teller in some particular bank, to watch the bank at lunch time, until he saw the cashier go out.

He would then enter, the detectives say, and present his forged cashier's check to the paying teller, whom he would address by his first name and whom he would profess to have met at some gathering which the teller had attended recently, or through an introduction from some person known to him to be a friend of the teller.

Usually Got Money Easily.

Usually, the detectives say, he would get the money without difficulty. When the teller would require the cashier's O K, they declare, the man would go to the cashier's office, and returning, would say he was sorry that Jack, or Fred, or Tom—whatever the cashier's first name might be—was out at lunch, and his display of acquaintance with the cashier would usually overcome the paying teller's suspicions, and he would get the $100.

The detectives say the man traveled about the country on a circuit like that of a traveling salesman or a showman, appearing once a year in Little Rock, once a year in Buffalo, and once every 18 months in Portland, Ore. Although many warnings were sent to banks regarding him, he is said to have operated so smoothly and carefully that, in cases where he did not get the money, he escaped arrest.

ACCUSED OF CASHING CHECK FOR $475 BELONGING TO ANOTHER

Shoe Worker Is Indicted in Federal Court for Misuse of Mails.

George H. Montgomery, 30 years old, of 2628 Locust street, a shoe worker, was arrested yesterday by United States deputy marshals upon a Federal indictment charging him with fraudulent use of the mails.

The indictment alleges that Jan. 21 he received a special delivery letter from the National Elevator Co., of Minneapolis, containing a checks for $475.08, payment for a grain shipment, and that he cashed it seven days later, knowing that he was not the man for whom the check was intended. The check was for a person of the same name stopping at 1326 South Broadway, who had sold the grain.

Montgomery was arrested July 11, last, on a Federal warrant charging him with promoting a scheme to defraud. He organized the "Montgomery Shoe Co. of America," which, the Government contended, was not promoted in good faith. His firm was incorporated for $1,000,000, of which $400,000 was represented by Montgomery's services, and $600,000 by the trade-mark, "The Open Eye Brand Shoe."

MISSING MAPLEWOOD ALDERMAN FOUND DAZED IN ST. LOUIS

Clarence Voorhees Disappeared From His Home Immediately After Dynamite Explosion.

Clarence Voorhees, alderman of the first ward of Maplewood, who disappeared March 2, following an explosion of dynamite which wrecked his home at 7276 Sarah street, was found yesterday morning at Sixth and Market streets by Max G. Roth of Maplewood.

Voorhees was leaning against a light pole and seemed dazed. He said he was just back from Kansas City. He could not explain why he had gone there or why he had not communicated with his family. Roth told him his wife was worried about him and Voorhees said he wanted to go home.

Roth placed him on a car, told the conductor not to let him off until he reached Maplewood, and telephoned City Clerk M. F. O'Brien to meet the car. O'Brien met it and took Voorhees home.

He made no explanation there except to repeat that he had been in Kansas City. Voorhees is said to have worried over the explosion, thinking that as it occurred in his ward he might be blamed for permitting dynamite to be stored there for use in the construction of the Maplewood sewer.

Got Rid of My Corns With Magic "Gets-It"

Simplest Corn Cure in the World—No Pain, No. Fuss. New, Sure Way.

Why Have Corns At All When "Gets-It" Removes Them the New, Dead-Sure Way?

When corns make you almost "die with your boots on," when you've soaked them and picked them and sliced them, when corn-swelling salves and tapes, bandages and plasters that make corns pop-eyed have only made your corns grow faster, just hold your heart a moment and figure this: Put two drops of "Gets-It" on the corn. It dries at once. You can put your shoe and stocking on right over it. The corn is doomed. It makes the corn come off clear and clean. It's the new, easy way. Nothing to stick or press on the corn. You can wear smaller shoes. You'll be a joy-walker. No pain, no trouble. Accept no substitutes.

"Gets-It" is sold by druggists everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent direct by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill.

MAN KILLED BY TRAIN SAID TO HAVE THROWN SELF UNDER CARS

Paper in His Pocket Bears Name of Frederick Raithel, a Street Sweeper.

A man believed by the police to be Frederick Raithel, 65 years old, of 1540 South Second street, a street sweeper, was killed by a freight train in the railroad yards at the foot of Miller street at 11 a. m. yesterday, under peculiar circumstances.

Passengers on a Wiggins Ferry boat told the police they saw the man apparently deliberately throw himself forward and place his head on the track between two cars of the moving freight train. Others said they had seen him wandering about the railroad yards for several hours.

A paper with Raithel's name on it was found in the man's pocket. At the South Second street address it was said Raithel lived there alone in one room and left the house early yesterday morning.

MAN FAILS TO MEET FAMILY

First Time in Wanderings Across Continent Twice.

Mrs. Allie Isaacs and her three small children, after waiting at Union Station two days and a night for her husband, Thomas Isaacs, told her story to a policeman and reluctantly consented to go to the Provident Association.

She said her husband, ever since their marriage, had gone from town to town, getting work and sending for his family, only to move on after awhile to another town. In that way, she said, they had crossed the continent twice. He worked last at Springfield, Ill. He left there and came to St. Louis and wired to his wife to bring the children on. For the first time in their wanderings he failed to meet them. The woman and children are sheltered at the Provident Association lodge, 2221 Locust street, and search is being made for Isaacs.

Rockefeller's Millions Could Not Buy Eczema Remedy

Says Nurse Hahn After Cure With D.D.D

"Ten years I suffered with eczema—three years of that time I could not appear in public. My entire body was covered with the disease. I could not eat. I could not sleep. I could not live. I have at last found the great Prescription, D. D. D. My body is clean, smooth. If there were one bottle only of D. D. D. in the world and I had it, Mr. Rockefeller's millions could not buy the golden fluid." —Nurse Myrtle Hahn, address of hospital on application.

Indoor Life Makes Fat

TRY OIL OF KOREIN TO KEEP WEIGHT DOWN, OR TO REDUCE SUPERFLUOUS FAT.

People who are confined within doors and who are deprived of fresh, invigorating air and exercise must take precaution to guard against over-stoutness, as fat acquired by indoor life is unhealthy and a danger to the vital organs of the body. Lack of exercise in the fresh air is said to weaken the oxygen-carrying power of the blood, so that it is unable to produce strong muscles and vitality, and the formation of unsightly and unhealthy fat is the result.

If you are 15 or 20 pounds above normal weight you are daily drawing on your reserve strength and are constantly lowering your vitality by carrying this excess burden. Any persons who are satisfied in their own mind that they are too stout are advised to go to a good druggist and get a box of oil of korein capsules and take one after each meal and one just before retiring at night.

Even a few days' treatment has been reported to show a noticeable reduction in weight, improved digestion and a return of the old energy; footsteps become lighter and the skin less flabby in appearance as superfluous fat disappears.

Oil of korein is inexpensive cannot injure, and helps the digestion. Any person who wants to reduce 15 or 20 pounds is advised to give this treatment a trial. —ADV.

INQUIRY BEGINS INTO CAR HEATING THIS LAST WINTER

Public Service Commission Acts Upon Complaint Filed by Members of Civic League.

In reply to a complaint filed by the Civic League, the State Public Service Commission has started an inquiry into the heating and ventilating of street cars this last winter to determine how far the orders of the Commission, made last May, have been violated.

The Civic League complaint stated that many members of the league had complained of specific violations due to overheated and under-ventilated cars. The League has asked for amendments to the order providing for detailed instructions governing the heating and ventilation of cars at all times.

Investigation is being made under the direction of J. L. Harrop, chief engineer of the commission. It is expected that the amendments of the order will be drawn up at an early date, to be effective next fall when all cars will be equipped with the new type of heater.

The Civic League complaint was made by the Public Health Committee, of which Dr. R. Emmet Kane, president of the Medical Society, is chairman.

In Memoriam.

In memory of my beloved wife and our dear mother, Katherine Mueller, who died March 11, 1915.

God called her home, it was his will,
But in our hearts she lingers still.
For all of us she did her best;
May God grant her eternal rest.

HUSBAND AND CHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In memory of our dear wife and mother, Mary O. Luid, who died March 11, 1915.

There was an angel band in heaven
That was not quite complete,
So God took our darling mother
To fill the seat.

Sadly missed by
HUSBAND AND CHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In memory of our dearly beloved mother and grandmother, Mrs. Josephine Rosenkranz, who departed this life March 13, 1915.

A precious one from us is gone,
A voice we loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.

Sadly missed by
EDWARD ROSENKRANZ AND FAMILY.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of my dear husband and dear father, George Seitz, who died March 13, 1915.

Peaceful be your sleep, dear father,
'Tis sweet to breathe your name.
In life we loved you dearly,
In death we do the same.

Sadly missed by Wife, Daughter, Sons and Grandchildren.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of my dear husband and our dear father, Frank J. Wonderchiek, who passed away two years ago, March 10, 1914.

We often sit and think of you
When we are all alone.
For memory is the only thing
That grief can call its own.

Sadly missed by his WIFE, DAUGHTER AND SON.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of our dear son, husband and brother, Oliver J. Donohue, who departed this life March 8, 1911.

We miss your pleasant greeting,
We miss your smiling face,
Our home is sad without you
When we see your vacant place.

Sadly missed by his PARENTS, WIFE, BROTHERS AND SISTERS. (c)

In Memoriam.

In memory of our dear father, who left us just one year ago, March 14, 1915.

Sad and sudden was the call
For our dear father, whom loved by all;
We little thought that on that day
He would be called so far away.
As the days go by we think of you. You are gone, but not forgotten

Sadly missed by
MRS. B. DANZ, Wife, AND CHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In memory of our darling daughter, who departed this life March 9, 1915.

One sweet rose has dropped and faded,
One sweet childish voice has fled,
One fair brow the grave has shaded,
Little Martha now is dead.
She has gone to heaven before us,
But she turns and waves her hand,
Pointing to the beauties o'er us,
In that bright and happy land.
But we feel no thought of sadness,
For our baby's happy now.
She has passed to heaven's gladness
And she is with the angels now.

Sadly missed by parents, brother, grandparents, aunts and uncle, and all those who loved her.
HUGO AND MINNIE WIENERS. (c)

In Memoriam.

In memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Fred Dietrich (Hellmann), who departed this life March 6, 1914.

The fairest word on earth that's heard,
On human lips the fairest word,
Is mother.
To whom such name shall once belong,
High honors hers her whole life long,
A mother.
But all her earthly joys are o'er,
Who is and then who is no more,
A mother.

WOULD you rather be writing advertisements, newspaper and magazine articles than what you are doing now? Do you want a chance to make money with a lead pencil and a pad of paper? Are you working at something you don't like, just because you don't know how or where to get a start as a writer? Yes! Well, we want to hear from you. We want to know all about you. Don't just drop us a postal card; send us a real letter, telling all about yourself. This isn't any catch-penny scheme for the ignorant and unsuspecting; it is a real opportunity to do the thing you want to do in a big, respectable, profitable way, independent of all "bosses" and with an office of your own. Address Ball Advertising Service, 321-41 Park Bldg., Denver, Colo.

FARMS ADJOINING MINES—Men are getting rich rapidly in the Joplin zinc and lead district. Ore is selling for $125 per ton—3 times its normal price. Output in 1915 over $26,000,000. We are not only supplying the warring nations but the rest of the world, South America, Australia, the Orient. The world's warehouses are empty. High prices will prevail long after peace comes, as it will take years for the mines, smelters and factories of Europe to get on their feet and catch up with even their own needs, to say nothing of the rest of the world. Notwithstanding the high prices of ore, there is little if any advance in the price of mining property. I have some astonishing bargains in leases, mining lands and producing mines. I have good farms for sale at farm prices right up against big mines. You can't lose on these—they are good farms anyway. Some mines pay for themselves in from 3 to 6 months. There has been no boom in the prices of mining property yet, but it is coming sure as fate. The country is full of money. Fortunes will be made quickly. There never was and never will be a better time to invest than right now. Write for descriptions and prices if you are prepared to come and examine the properties and do business. I invite the strictest investigation. D. W. Replogle, Carthage, Mo. References, any bank in Carthage.

BIG PROFIT-SHARING OFFER

To stimulate the sale of the dozen or more cottages we are just building. We are going to offer you $50 credit on your house, provided we can sell all these houses within three months after their completion. We are selling them on terms of $300 down, balance very easy, but if you pay all cash we will give you the $50 just the same. We made the contracts for the construction of these cottages when work was slack and material much cheaper than now. You could not contract for one today for less than $2700 with lot. But we want to sell quick and take very small profits; will sell them at this low price, $2300, and give you credit for $50 on the above conditions. This profit-sharing offer brings the price down to $2250 to you. Where on earth will you buy a new 4-room brick house, 13-inch walls, nice bathroom, wired for electric lights, granitoid cellar and walks, nice shed on rear of lot? Lot 30x115. Go out just as soon as you can and pick out your future home. Get the kiddies and the wife a home of their own, a yard to themselves where they can get good fresh air. Take Cherokee car, end of line to Germania avenue, half block east to the cottages. You will be surprised to see such a fine house for the price. Why not go today and then see

IDAHO.

Want Money?

Let me tell you how to get it. Idaho land is full of it, and the land isn't very high-priced, either. Climate and living conditions are excellent—electricity used for cooking, lighting and heating on many farms—educational advantages unexcelled.

There are many tracts of land—irrigated and nonirrigated—suitable for all kinds of farming, for sale cheap and on reasonable terms. Seed raising highly profitable. I will give complete information to you free for the asking.

For Sale—Farm Land on Which You Can Raise Crops the Year Round.

Located in the Ozone Belt, Marion County, Miss., 90 miles north of New Orleans; all easy rolling upland; no swamps or mosquitoes; healthiest climate in the South; no excessive heat; soil a mellow, fertile chocolate loam; no rocks; you do not have to buck frost or mud 6 months of the year; you can plow every acre now or any day in the year; up North you grow one crop; here you grow three; here spring crops are 6 weeks earlier than up North; when the North is frozen up in the fall you harvest your second fall crop here; that's what brings high prices and profit; plenty of rain at all times; close to railroad and a world's market; New Orleans government expert and demonstration farm within a few miles; good roads; one of the best stock and dairy countries; several thrifty settlements of farmers have established themselves on adjacent land within the past 2 years and they are making good; so why not you? This is a well developed country; it is new and fertile land; a friend and I have bought 12,000 acres of this land, and I am making my home on 1400 acres of it, and my friend on 1100 acres, and I want you farmers to buy and make your home here; the land is cheap now at $25 per acre and will double in value in a short time; terms are easy and within reach of all; from $5 to $10 per acre down; now you men from the North, or anywhere else, look into this if you want to better yourself; it is a golden opportunity and it is not a land agents' scheme; write for any information that you may want; I am a gardener, horticulturist and farmer myself; that's why I want farmers to buy this land. WM. MEHL, Horticulturist, 204 Wainwright Bldg., St. Louis Mo.

FARMS FOR SALE

MISSOURI

OWNER OF SUCCESSFUL HIGHLY PRODUCTIVE 1000-ACRE ORCHARD AND FARM WILL SELL 20-ACRE FARMS FOR ONLY $300 ON TERMS OF $10.000 CASH AND $5.00 MONTHLY, WITHOUT INTEREST OR TAXES.

I am having splendid success with my 1000-acre orchard and farm in Southeast Missouri. Have 100 more acres in peaches, 133 in apples, 6 in grapes, 8 in strawberries, 4 in blackberries and raspberries and 150 in vegetables, grains and grasses. The balance will be planted to grapes and fruit trees next spring. The peaches have been running over $100 per acre, berries and grapes $300, tomatoes $100 ($10 per ton at the canning factory), etc. Apples just coming into bearing.

I have a large amount of land surrounding my 100-acre orchard and farm, much more than I will ever be able to get under cultivation myself, and will sell 10 or 20 acre tracts at $300, on terms of $10.00 cash and $5.00 monthly, without interest or taxes.

FARMS FREE TO LIMITED NUMBER.

For a limited number of persons I have an arrangement whereby they can obtain a farm tract free.

My location is in Southeast Missouri, midway between the Ozarks and the lowlands, elevation above sea level about 550 feet.

Before offering any of the land for sale, I went to the authorities of the seven nearby states having the so-called "Blue Sky" laws and asked them to pass on the printed matter I had prepared and to send their expert land men to inspect my orchard, farm and land offered. After doing this, and also investigating my financial responsibility and past business record, they quickly granted permission to sell my land in their states.

A few acres here, properly looked after, will bring you a splendid income, besides providing the best of everything for your own use. $100 to $800 clear profit per acre can be made. Fruits, berries, vegetables, grains and grasses will produce these results. A single cow can be made to pay $12 clear profit every month, $100 will build you a cozy, comfortable home in our mild climate that will seem like a little palace compared with the ordinary, crowded brick-bound city flat.

With a few chickens, pigs and a cow, fruits, berries, vegetables and a little meadow to start with, your health, wealth and happiness come into your own hands. You are boss of all, with room to grow, and no one is big enough to come in and give you orders. We have good schools, churches, rural free delivery and mutual rural telephone lines and good towns.

FREE RAILWAY FARE

to purchasers; 90 days' time to visit land and make your selection; money back after one year if dissatisfied; payments stop in case of death, money loaned for improvements; perfect title; immediate possession.

GET THIS FREE BOOK TODAY.

I have made about 50 kodak views in and around the big orchard and farm and on the land I am offering and have had them reproduced in a 16-page pamphlet, in which also I have placed all the information to be obtained regarding the topography, productivity, products and about everything you want to know; also 50 letters from men in St. Louis and nearby towns who have gone down to look and who have bought. I'll gladly send you a copy if you will write.

FARMS FOR SALE

MISSOURI

DAIRY FARM

The finest of its kind in the state; 190 acres, two miles west of Hancock, 144 miles west of St. Louis on the Frisco road; 150 acres of high second bottom land, which positively does not overflow; the balance is in timber and pasture; the land lies level, and smooth, not rough or broken; has no stone or stumps on it. A fairly good farm house, with all the necessary barns and outbuildings. The entire place is fenced and cross-fenced, and the finest water supply from well and spring in Pulaski County; anyone figuring on getting a place of this kind ought not to pass this by, for at the price, $25 per acre, it is the cheapest piece of ground on the Frisco road.
BENJAMIN F. THOMAS,
713 Wainwright Building, St. Louis, Mo.

800-ACRE FARM

Adjoining the station of Aullville, Lafayette County, Mo. I have a very fancy, rich farm to sell. It is the loess and alluvial soils, the two best soils in the world. Very little waste land; all will grow corn, wheat, oats, alfalfa, red clover and bluegrass in greatest abundance; well watered, 30 acres winter apple orchard; 12-room brick residence and other outbuildings, insured for $7500; 500 acres made 17,500 bushels of wheat in one year; 400 acres made in one year 32,000 bu. of corn; surrounded by intelligent, thrifty German farmers who own their farms and will not sell for less than $150 to $200 an acre.

Will sell this for $100 an acre, third cash, balance three or five years at 6 per cent; or will sell it in tracts of 100 to 200 acres; this land will sell for $200 an acre in less than 10 years. Better look up prices of land in Lafayette County, Mo., and buy this farm offered at a sacrifice for about one-half the price of same quality is held at.

The usual commission will be paid to agents sending me a buyer.

It's the clean, sweet sap of the Sapota Tree

IN tropical regions grows the Sapota Tree. Botanists call it the "Achras Sapota." Its buds turn into delicious fruit. It yields a creamy sap for Sterling Gum.

In the late Fall of the year the rainy season comes. The sap rises. The trunk of the tree is tapped. The milky sap flows out, rich, pure and clean.

Then they boil it into buff-colored cakes. The cakes are wrapped and sent to the Sterling Kitchens.

As you enjoy your Sterling Gum, remember the clean sweet sap of the Sapota Tree. Remember the gloved hands that guide its making into Sterling Gum.

The 7 points of Sterling excellence are:

Point 1—Crowded with flavor
Point 2—Velvety Body—NO GRIT
Point 3—Crumble-proof
Point 4—Sterling Purity
Point 5—From a daylight factory
Point 6—Untouched by hands

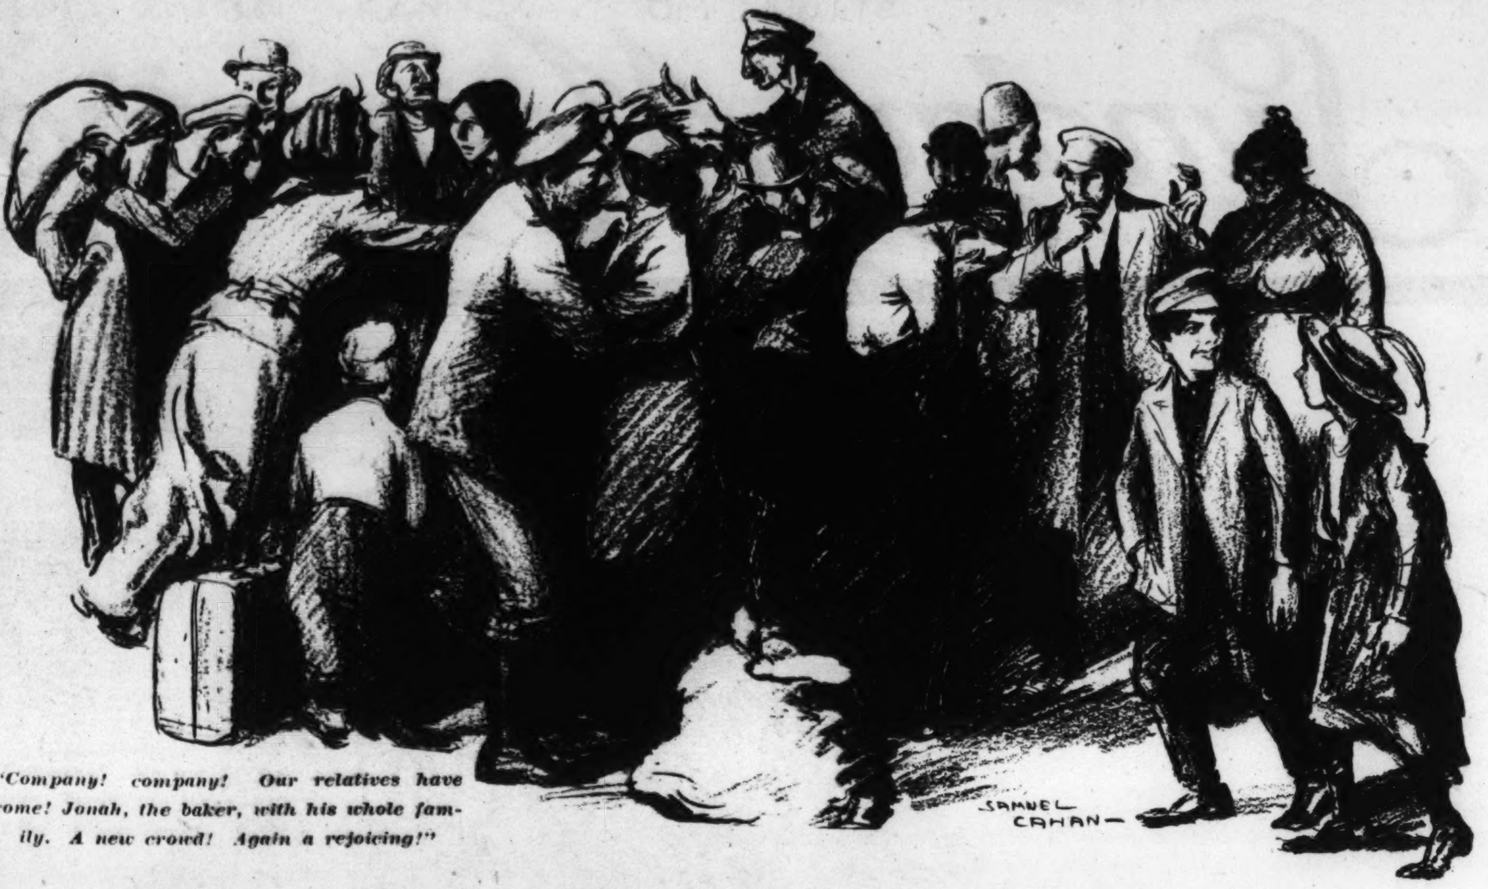
"Our Crowd" of Relatives Reunited



"Company! company! Our relatives have come! Jonah, the baker, with his whole family. A new crowd! Again a rejoicing!"

No. 8 of "Off for America", the Story of a Yiddish Family Exodus.

By SHOLOM ALEICHEM, "The Yiddish Mark Twain."

Authorized Translation by Marion Weinstein. Illustrated by Samuel Cahan.

Copyright, 1916, by the Press Publishing Co. (The New York World).

NOW I must tell you who Goldele is. She is from Kutna. She came here last year with her papa, mamma, sisters and brothers. Succoth time that was (the Feast of the Tabernacles). What a holiday they had! All the Jews should have such luck!

Of course, they were not looking for any fortunes and they did not lick any honey. They rolled around just like the other emigrants. But they had ship tickets for America for the whole family, and were dressed up like queens. They all had two shirts each and whole shoes. Now she has been left with only one skirt and no shoes. If not for Miss Zeitshik, she says, she would be going around barefoot. Miss Zeitshik made her a present, she says, of a pair of shoes off her own feet, shoes still quite good. So Goldele told me and showed me the shoes that Miss Zeitshik had given her. Quite pretty shoes, but a little too big for her. * * *

Well, to make a long story short, the first days of Succoth and Simchas Torah passed. The time comes to go on board the ship. People tell them that they should take a walk to the doctor. So they go to the doctor. The doctor examines them and finds they are all hale and hearty and can go to America, but she, that is Goldele, cannot go, because she has trachomas on her eyes. At first her family did not understand. Only later did they realize it. That meant that they could all go to America but she, Goldele, would have to remain here, in Antwerp. So there began a wailing, a weeping, a moaning. Three times her mamma fainted. Her papa wanted to stay here, but he couldn't. All the ship tickets would be lost. So they had to go off to America and leave her, Goldele, here until the trachomas would go away from her eyes.

AND so it is almost a year that she is curing herself, and she is not cured yet. Miss Zeitshik says that Goldele's eyes are not cured because she is always crying. But she, Goldele, says that her eyes are not cured for another reason. On account of the bluestone! Every time that she comes to the doctor he rubs her eyes, she says, with the same bluestone he uses on the other patients. If she, Goldele, could afford to buy a bluestone of her own she would have been cured long ago, she says.

"Well, and your papa and mamma?" I ask her.

"Are in America. They make a living there. I have letters from them. Almost every month I have a letter from them. Here' see, can you read? Read it for me!"

And she takes out a whole bunch of letters from her bosom and gives them to me to read them aloud to her. I would certainly do it for her, but I cannot read writing. If the letters were printed I could read them. So she laughs at me and says that a boy is not a girl. A boy must know everything in the world! I am afraid that she is right. Oh, how I would like to be able to read writing! Oh, how I envy my chum "Big Muttel," because he can read and write. Goldele gave him letters to read to her, the letters that they write her from America. So, "Big Muttel" read them like water. The letters are almost all written in one style and in the same words.

"Darling Goldele, precious Goldele, long may you live! When we recall, here in this America, that our child has been torn from our hands and rolls around there among strangers in a strange land, we can take no comfort here, day and night we weep and wail here for our bright star that has been snatched from our eyes" * * * and so forth.

"BIG MUTTEL" reads and reads and Goldele cries and wipes her eyes. Miss Zeitshik catches sight of her and begins to scold us because we make her cry. And to Goldele she says: "You have no pity for yourself. You are putting an end to the little that is left of your eyes!" So Goldele answers her with a laugh while tears stream from her eyes.

"The doctor is putting an end to my eyes with his bluestone more than I with my crying." * * *

We say good-by to Goldele and I promise to meet her here tomorrow about this time.

"With God's help!" Goldele answers with pious mien, like an old woman, and both of us, I, "Little Muttel," and my chum "Big Muttel" go off to walk through the streets of Antwerp.

WE, that is, I, "Little Muttel," and my chum, "Big Muttel," are not alone. We have another pal here. He is a boy of about 10 and is called Mendel. He got left in Antwerp, too, on his way to America, not on account of his eyes, but for another reason. His family lost him on the way, somewhere in Germany. During the whole trip, he tells us, they had kept body and soul together with nothing but herring. His heart burned * * * so he stole off at a station to snatch a drink of water and got stuck without a ticket and without a kopek of money and without a shirt on his back. And because he did not know German language, he made out he was dumb. So they took him around wherever the world has a corner until, one day he caught sight of a party of emigrants, Jews. He went over to them and told them the whole story. They took pity on him and brought him along with them to Antwerp. Here he fought his way to the "Ezra." So the "Ezra" wrote a letter to America to look up his parents. Now he is waiting for an answer and for a ship ticket. That is, for half a ticket, because he is still little.

ALL three of us, I and "Big Muttel" and Mendel, have become pals. For days we tramp through the city. There in Brody and Lemberg and in Vienna, my mamma used to be afraid to let us take a step without her. Here, in Antwerp, she has no fear. There, she says, they are all Germans, and here, in Antwerp, she says, we are among people, among our own. You hear a Yiddish word spoken. By that she means the emigrants. Long live the emigrants! Among emigrants we really feel at home.

Soon we shall have money. With God's help, after the Sabbath, my brother Elihu's father-in-law is coming, Jonah the baker, with his whole family. We are waiting today for our neighbor Pesi, who is coming tomorrow with her crowd. Then there will be rejoicing!

GO to the doctor—that everyone who comes here to Antwerp must do. The first question that one person asks another here is: "Have you been to the doctor?" * * * "What did the doctor tell you?" * * * Even the "Ezra," when you go to visit her, sends you right to the doctor.

So my mamma pours out her heart to the "Ezra," and the "Ezra" hears, and the girl that sits at the table, Miss Zeitshik, writes down every single word that my mamma says, in a book. My mamma still has enough to tell and to tell. So one of the "Ezra" people calls out to her:

"Then you are off for America? Have you been to the doctor?"

"What doctor?" say we.

"Here is an address," he replies to us, the man from the "Ezra," "take a walk, first of all, to the doctor. He will examine your eyes."

The doctor looked into our eyes and wrote down something for us on a piece of paper and sealed it in an envelope. So at first we got scared to death. We thought that he had written down a prescription for our eyes. We asked him what he has written for us. He points to the door. We understand that means we must go. * * * We come to the "Ezra" and show her the writing from the doctor. Miss Zeitshik takes the envelope and opens it and reads the writing and says to us:

"I can tell you news: the doctor says that you have good eyes."

That certainly is news for us! But what can we do with mamma? She will not stop crying. We plead with her:

"What are you doing? Suppose, God forbid, the doctor should find fault with your eyes?"

"Do you hear? That's just why I am crying!" * * *

So my mamma answers and puts a litle plaster to her eyes. The plaster an emigrant has given her, a feldsher ("horse doctor"). He is far from handsome. He has funny, crazy teeth, but he tries to look young. He wears a brass watch and a silver chain with a clasp on it. And a gold ring on his hand. He hasn't a pretty name: "Bieber!" He has come to Antwerp with Pesi's crowd. If it had not been for this feldscher (Bieber), they would have died in Hamburg. He stood by them in their need. He, Bieber, is a great bluffer.

Pini insists that everything that this Bieber tells us would be very fine, if it were the truth.

COMPANY! Company! Company! Our mechutonim (relatives by marriage) have come! Jonah the baker with his whole family. A new crowd!

Again a rejoicing! My sister-in-law kisses her papa and mamma, my brother Elihu kisses his father-in-law and brothers-in-law. Looking at him, Pini starts to kiss our mechutonim, too, and looking at him, the feldscher kisses them, too. They ask: "Who is that?" Says he: "I am Bieber."

So Pini bursts out laughing. * * * And my mamma? My mamma does her little stunt, she cries! * * * My brother Elihu is beside himself. He looks at her and pulls at his little beard. But he can't say a word to her now. They are, you see, our own folks, not strangers, but mechutonim, and from the same city. Why shouldn't we let her cry her heart out a little?

The Teeth of the Tiger

"At a thief's, you mean. It's muck. The plugs are getting sooted up."

The motor, indeed, at moments seemed to hesitate. Then everything became normal again. Don Luis forced the pace. Going downhill they appeared to be hurling themselves into space. One of the lamps went out. The other was not as bright as usual. But nothing diminished Don Luis' ardor.

There was more misfiring, fresh hesitations, followed by efforts, as though the engine was pluckily striving to do its duty. And then suddenly came the final failure, a dead stop at the side of the road, a stupid breakdown.

"Confound it!" roared Don Luis. "We're stuck! Oh, this is the last straw!"

The country stretched around them to endless distances, with no other lights than the stars that riddled the darkness of the sky.

Don Luis was stamping with fury. He would have liked to kick the motor to pieces. He would have liked——

It was Mazeroux who "caught it," in the hapless sergeant's own words. Don Luis took him by the shoulders, shook him, loaded him with insults and abuse and, finally, pushing him against the roadside bank and holding him there, said, in a broken voice of mingled hatred and sorrow:

"It's she, do you hear, Mazeroux? It's Sauverand's companion who has done everything. I'm telling you now, because I'm afraid of relenting. Yes, I am a weak coward. She has such a grave face, with the eyes of a child. But it's she, Mazeroux. She lives in my house. Remember her name: Florence Levasseur. You'll arrest her, won't you? I might not be able to. My courage fails me when I look at her. The fact is that I have never loved before.

"There have been other women—but no, those were fleeting fancies—not even that: I don't even remember the past! Whereas Florence!—— You must arrest her, Mazeroux. You must deliver me from her eyes. They burn into me like poison. If you don't deliver me I shall kill her—or else they will kill me—or—— Oh, I don't know all the ideas that are driving me wild!——

"You see, there's another man," he explained. "There's Sauverand, whom she loves. Oh, the infamous pair! They have killed Fauville and the boy and old Langernault and those two in the barn and others besides: Cosmo Mornington, Verot, and more still They are monsters, she most of all—— And if you saw her eyes"——

He spoke so low that Mazeroux could hardly hear him. He had let go his hold of Mazeroux and seemed utterly cast down with despair, a surprising symptom in a man of his amazing vigor and authority.

"Come, Chief," said the sergeant, helping him up. "This is all stuff and nonsense. Trouble with women: I've had it like everybody else. Mme. Mazeroux—yes, I got married while you were away—Mme. Mazeroux turned out badly herself, gave me the devil of a time. Mme. Mazeroux did. I'll tell you all about it, Chief, how Mme. Mazeroux rewarded my kindness."

He led Don Luis gently to the car and settled him on the front seat.

"Take a rest, Chief. It's not very cold and there are plenty of furs. The first peasant that comes along at daybreak, I'll send him to the next town for what we want—and for food, too, for I'm starving. And everything will come right; it always does with women. All you have to do is to kick them out of your life—except when they anticipate you and kick themselves out. * * * I was going to tell you: Mme. Mazeroux"——

Don Luis was never to learn what had happened with Mme. Mazeroux. The most violent catastrophies had no effect upon the peacefulness of his slumbers. He was asleep almost at once.

It was late in the morning when he woke up. Mazeroux had had to wait till 7 o'clock before he could hail a cyclist on his way to Chartres.

They made a start at 9 o'clock. Don Luis had recovered all his coolness. He turned to his sergeant.

"I said a lot last night that I did not mean to say. However, I don't regret it. Yes, it is my duty to do everything to save Mme. Fauville and to catch the real culprit. Only the task falls upon myself; and I swear that I shan't fail in it. This evening Florence Levasseur shall sleep in the lockup!"

"I'll help you, Chief," replied Mazeroux, in a queer tone of voice.

"I need nobody's help. If you touch a single hair of her head, I'll do for you. Do you understand?"

"Yes, Chief."

"Then hold your tongue."

His anger was slowly returning and expressed itself in an increase of speed, which seemed to Mazeroux a revenge executed upon himself. They raced over the cobblestones of Chartres. Rambouillet, Chevreuse and Versailles, received the terrifying vision of a thunderbolt tearing across them from end to end.

Saint-Cloud. The Bois de Boulogne. * * *

On the Place de la Concorde, as the motor was turning toward the Tuileries, Mazeroux objected:

"Aren't you going home, Chief?"

"No. There's something more urgent first: we must relieve Marie Fauville of her suicidal obsession by letting her know that we have discovered the criminals."

"And then?"

"Then I want to see the Prefet of Police."

"M. Desmalions is away and won't be back till this afternoon."

"In that case the examining magistrate."

"He doesn't get to the law courts till 12; and it's only 11 now."

"We'll see."

Mazeroux was right: there was no one at the law courts.

Don Luis lunched somewhere close by; and Mazeroux, after calling at the detective office, came to fetch him and took him to the magistrate's corridor. Don Luis' excitement, his extraordinary restlessness, did not fail to strike Mazeroux, who asked:

"Are you still of the same mind, Chief?"

"More than ever. I looked through the newspapers at lunch. Marie Fauville, who was sent to the infirmary after her second attempt, has again tried to kill herself by banging her head against the wall of the room. They have put a straitjacket on her. But she is refusing all food. It is my duty to save her."

"How?"

"By handing over the real criminal. I shall inform the magistrate in charge of the case; and this evening I shall bring you Florence Levasseur dead or alive."

"And Sauverand?"

"Sauverand? That won't take long. Unless"——

"Unless what?"

"Unless I settle his business myself, the miscreant!"

There were some reporters near them waiting for particulars. He recognized them and went up to them.

"You can say, gentlemen, that from today I am taking up the defence of Marie Fauville and devoting myself entirely to her cause."

They all protested: was it not he who had had Mme. Fauville arrested? Was it not he who had collected a heap of convicting proofs against her?

"I shall demolish those proofs one by one," he said. "Marie Fauville is the victim of wretches who have hatched the most diabolical plot against her, and whom I am about to deliver to justice."

"But the teeth! Marks of the teeth!"

"A coincidence! An unparalleled coincidence, but one which now strikes me as a most powerful proof of innocence. I tell you that, if Marie Fauville had been clever enough to commit all those murders, she would also have been clever enough not to leave behind her a fruit bearing the marks of her two rows of teeth."

"But still"——

"She is innocent! And that is what I am going to tell the examining magistrate. She must be informed of the efforts that are being made in her favor. She must be given hope at once. If not, the poor thing will kill herself and her death will be on the conscience of all who accused an innocent woman. She must"——

At that moment he interrupted himself. His eyes were fixed on one of the journalists who was standing a little way off listening to him and taking notes.

He whispered to Mazeroux:

"Could you manage to find out that beggar's name? I can't remember where on earth I've seen him before."

But an usher now opened the door of the examining magistrate, who, on receiving Don Perenna's card, had asked to see him at once. He stepped forward and was about to enter the room with Mazeroux, when he suddenly turned to his companion with a cry of rage:

"It's he! It was Sauverand in disguise. Stop him! He's made off. Run, can't you?"

He himself darted away followed by Mazeroux and a number of warders and journalists. He soon outdistanced them, so that, three minutes later, he heard no one more behind him. He had rushed down the staircase of the "Mousetrap," and through the subway leading from one courtyard to the other. Here two people told him that they had met a man walking at a smart pace.

The track was a false one. He became aware of this, hunted about, lost a good deal of time, and managed to discover that Sauverand had left by the Boulevard du Palais and joined a very pretty, fair-haired woman—Florence Levasseur, obviously—on the Quai de l'Horloge. They had both got into the motor bus that runs from the Place Saint-Michel to the Gare Saint-Lazare.

Don Luis went back to a lonely little street where he had left his car in the charge of a boy. He set the engine going and drove at full speed to the Gare Saint-Lazare. From the omnibus shelter he went off on a fresh track which also proved to be wrong, lost quite another hour, returned to the terminus, and ended by learning for certain that Florence had stepped by herself into a motor bus which would take her toward the Palace du Palais-Bourbon. Contrary to all his expectations, therefore, the girl must have gone home.

The thought of seeing her again roused his anger to its highest pitch. All the way down the Rue Royale and across the Place de la Concorde he kept blurting out words of revenge and threats which he was itching to carry out. He could abuse Florence. He would sting her with his insults. He felt a bitter and painful need to hurt the odious creature.

But on reaching the Place du Palais-Bourbon he pulled up short. His practiced eye had counted at a glance, on the right and left, a half-dozen men whose professional look there was no mistaking. And Mazeroux, who had caught sight of him, had spun round on his heel and was hiding under a gateway.

He called him:

"Mazeroux!"

The sergeant appeared greatly surprised to hear his name and came up to the car. His face expressed such embarrassment that Don Luis felt his fears taking definite shape.

"Look here, is it for me that you and your men are hanging about outside my house?"

"There's a notion, Chief," replied Mazeroux, looking very uncomfortable. "You know that you're in favor all right!"

Don Luis gave a start. He understood. Mazeroux had betrayed his confidence. To obey his scruples of conscience as well as to rescue the Chief from the dangers of a fatal passion, Mazeroux had denounced Florence Levasseur.

Perenna clenched his fists in an effort of his whole being to stifle his boiling rage. It was a terrible blow. He received a sudden intuition of all the blunders which his mad jealousy had made him commit since the day before, and a presentiment of the irreparable disasters that might result from them. The conduct of events was slipping from him.

"Have you the warrant?" he asked.

Mazeroux spluttered:

"It was quite by accident. I met the Prefect, who was back. We spoke of the young lady's business. And, as it happened, they had discovered that the photograph—you know, the photograph of Florence Lavesseur which the Prefect lent you—well, they have discovered that you faked it. And then when I mentioned the name of Florence, the Prefect remembered that that was the name."

"Have you the warrant?" Don Luis repeated, in a harsher tone.

"Well, you see, I couldn't help it. * * * It was for your good, Chief. * * * I had to do it. * * * Only think! You yourself told me: 'Rid me of the creature!' said you. 'I'm too weak. You'll arrest her, won't you? Her eyes burn into me—like poison!' Well, Chief, could I help it? No, I couldn't, could I? Especially as the deputy chief"——

"Ah! So Weber knows?"

"Why, yes! The Prefect is a little suspicious of you since he understood about the faking of the portrait. So M. Weber is coming back in an hour, perhaps, with reinforcements. Well, I was saying, the deputy chief had learnt that the woman who used to go to Gaston Sauverand's at Neuilly—you know, the house on the Boulevard Richard-Wallace—was fair and very good looking, and that her name was Florence. She even used to stay the night sometimes."

"You lie! You lie!" hissed Perenna.

All his spite was reviving. He had been pursuing Florence with intentions which it would have been difficult for him to put into words. And now suddenly he again wanted to destroy her; and this time consciously. In reality he no longer knew what he was doing. He was acting at haphazard, tossed in turns by the most diverse passions, a prey to that inordinate love which impels us as readily to kill the object of our affections as to die in an attempt to save her.

A newsboy passed with a special edition of the Paris-Midi, showing in great block letters:

"SENSATIONAL DECLARATION BY DON LUIS PERENNA.

"MME. FAUVILLE IS INNOCENT.

"IMMINENT ARREST OF THE TWO CRIMINALS."

"Yes, yes," he said aloud. "The drama is drawing to an end. Florence is about to pay her debt to society. So much the worse for her."

He started his car again and drove through the gate. In the courtyard he said to his chauffeur, who came up:

"Turn her round and don't put her up. I may be starting again at any moment."

He sprang out and asked the butler:

"Is Mlle. Levasseur in?"

"Yes, sir, she's in her room."

"She was away yesterday, wasn't she?"

"Yes, sir, she received a telegram asking her to go to the country to see a relation who was ill. She came back last night."

"I want to speak to her. Send her to me. At once."

"In the study, sir?"

"No, upstairs, in the boudoir next to my bedroom."

This was a small room on the second floor which had once been a lady's boudoir, and he preferred it to his study since the attempt at murder of which he had been the object. He was quieter up there, farther away; and he kept his important papers there. He always carried the key with him: a special key with three grooves to it and an inner spring.

Mazeroux had followed him into the courtyard and was keeping close behind him, apparently unobserved by Perenna, who having so far appeared not to notice it. He now, however, took the sergeant by the arm and led him to the front steps.

"All is going well. I was afraid that Florence, suspecting something, might not have come back. But she probably doesn't know that I saw her yesterday. She can't escape us now."

They went across the hall and up the stairs to the first floor. Mazeroux rubbed his hands.

"So you've come to your senses, Chief?"

"At any rate I've made up my mind. I will not, do you hear, I will not have Mme. Fauville kill herself; and, as there is no other way of preventing that catastrophe, I shall sacrifice Florence."

"Without regret?"

"Without remorse."

"Then you forgive me?"

"I thank you."

And he struck him a clear, powerful blow under the chin. Mazeroux fell without a moan, in a dead faint on the steps of the second flight.

Halfway up the stairs was a dark recess that served as a lumber room where the servants kept their pails and brooms and the soiled household linen. Don Luis carried Mazeroux to it, and, seating him comfortably on the floor, with his back to a housemaid's box, he stuffed his handkerchief into his mouth, gagged him with a towel, and bound his wrists and ankles with two tablecloths. The other ends of these he fastened to a couple of strong nails.

He ran up to his bedroom on the second floor and dipped his face into cold water. Never had he experienced such a stimulation of his whole being, such an unbridling of his blind instincts.

"It's she!" he spluttered. "I hear her! She is at the bottom of the stairs. At last! Oh, the joy of having her in front of me! Face to face! She and I alone!"

He turned to the landing outside the boudoir. He took the key from his pocket. The door opened.

He uttered a great shout. In that locked room Gacton Sauverand was waiting for him, standing with folded arms.

Divisibility of Numbers

IT is often convenient to know whether a given number is divisible by another without going through the usual process of division. Almost every one knows that, however large a number may be, it is divisible by 5 if the last digit is 5 or 0. The following gives the rule for some other numbers:

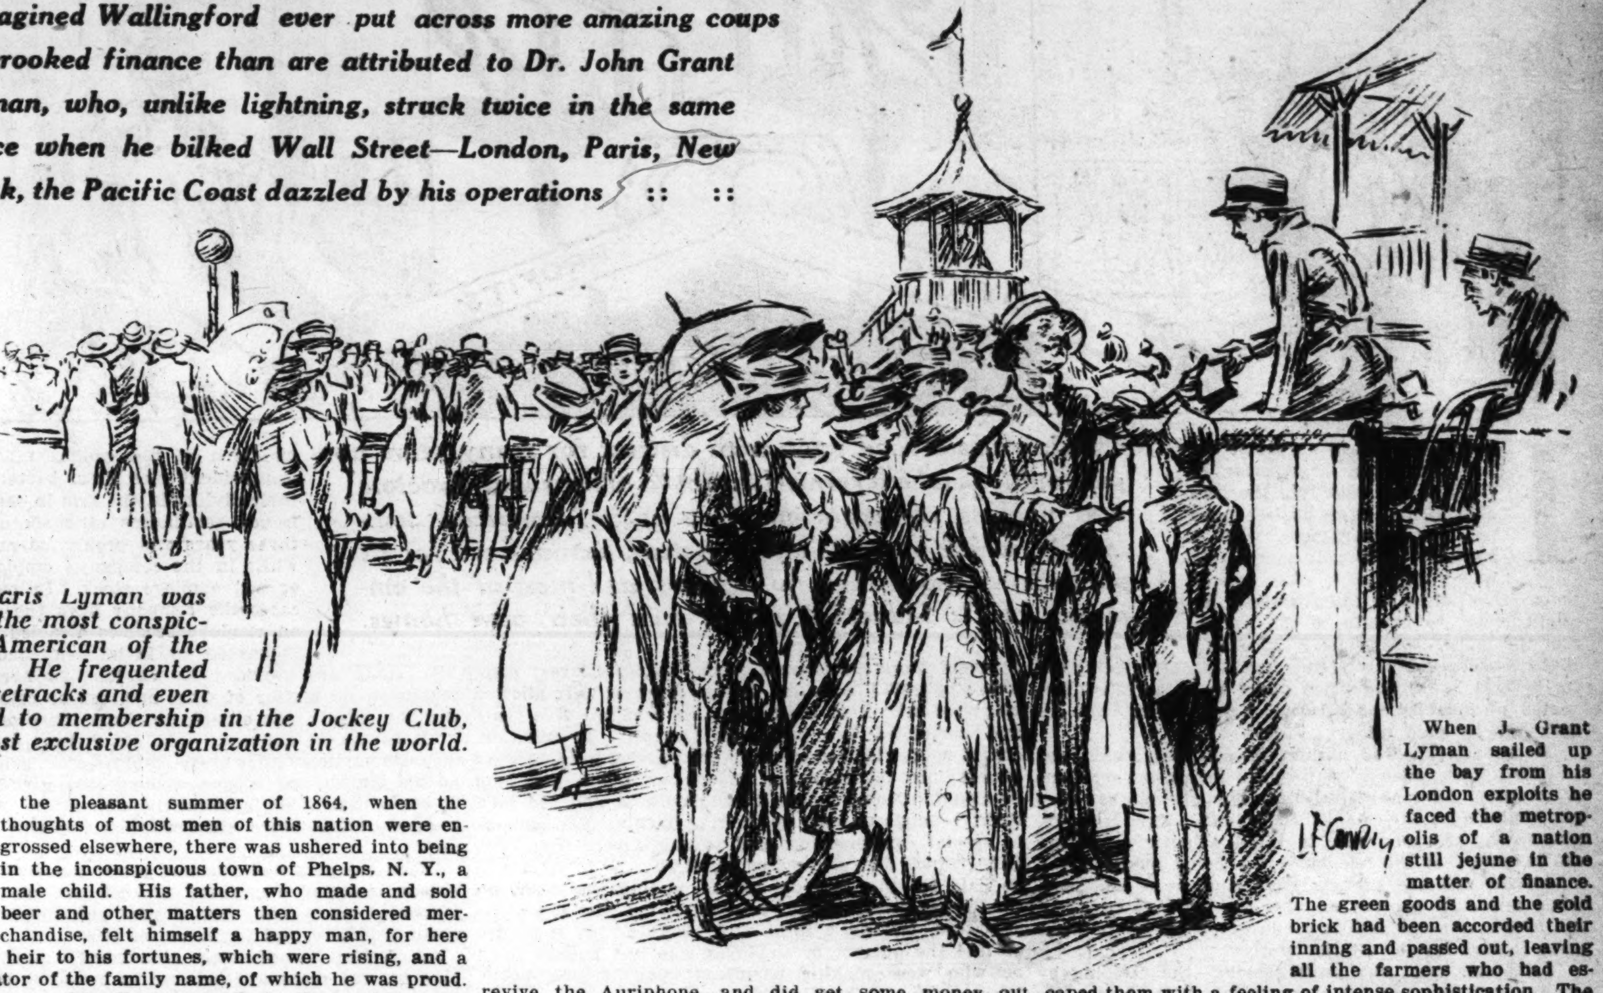
A number is divisible by 2 when the last digit is divisible by 2; by 3 when the sum of the digits is divisible by 3; by 4 when the number represented by the last two digits is divisible by 4; by 5 when the number ends in 5 or 0; by 6 when it is divisible by 2 and also by 3; by 8 when the number represented by the last three digits is divisible by 8; by 9 when the sum of the digits is divisible by 9.

For example: The number 1728 is divisible by 2 because its last digit, 8, is divisible by 2; by 4, because 28 is divisible by 4, and by 8 because 728 is divisible by 8. It is also divisible by 3 and by 9, for the sum of its digits totals 18, a number divisible by 3 and by 9. Since it is divisible by 2 and 3, it is also divisible by 6.

To find whether a number is divisable by 7, you must go through the usual process of division.—Youth's Companion.

A GET-RICH-QUICK CAREER IN REAL LIFE THAT SURPASSES FICTION

No imagined Wallingford ever put across more amazing coups in crooked finance than are attributed to Dr. John Grant Lyman, who, unlike lightning, struck twice in the same place when he bilked Wall Street—London, Paris, New York, the Pacific Coast dazzled by his operations :: ::



In Paris Lyman was called the most conspicuous American of the season. He frequented the racetracks and even aspired to membership in the Jockey Club, the most exclusive organization in the world.

IN the pleasant summer of 1864, when the thoughts of most men of this nation were engrossed elsewhere, there was ushered into being in the inconspicuous town of Phelps, N. Y., a male child. His father, who made and sold beer and other matters then considered merchandise, felt himself a happy man, for here was the heir to his fortunes, which were rising, and a perpetuator of the family name, of which he was proud. Aside from a friendly paragraph in the weekly newspaper at the next nearest nucleus of population, this birth received no notice. An event later of high significance to a considerable body of humanity passed almost unnoticed.

The other day this male infant, grown to impressive build and middle age, disappeared from Wall street after having robbed his patrons, it is estimated, of something like $700,000. Between the wayposts of these two events lies a human story of the most astounding character, the story of the incredible Dr. John Grant Lyman.

The exploits and adventures of this man are almost beyond comparison. To call him a modern Cagliostro is to reflect upon the honor of Cagliostro and upon the genius of Lyman. Schemer, promoter, financier, magnate, dandy, millionaire, thief and outcast, this man has lived a life so full, so versatile and so original as to be a thing in its own pattern, an expression of his times and a representation of a phase of their morals.

In Phelps, Johnny Lyman grew up a rather dull and refractory boy, with big sheep's eyes and a large, fleshy frame. In school he was a sluggard, and among his boyhood's companions an inconspicuous entity of whom no man might have predicted anything but the plainest mediocrity and humbleness. His father died while he was still a stripling and left him his fortune, said to have been about $15,000. By way of appreciation for this legacy, the young Jack Lyman immediately got himself into what was termed a youthful scrape. It was serious enough to cause his absence in Canada for a period.

When he returned he took his heritage and went to New York, where he attended a medical school and was graduated in three or four years. He had an office in Rochester for a brief time before he decided to abandon the general practice and become an aurist. This resolution had not long been in his mind before another joined it. He returned to New York resolved to capitalize his medical knowledge. The itch of quick and easy money was somewhere in the makeup of this young physician. He had neither the patience nor the devotion of the medicus. He was no healer of the sick, no seeker after the dark sublimates of science. This man sought a brighter and redder dust wherewith are tipped not the scalpels of surgery, but the knives of folly.

Dr. Lyman bloomed out as the inventor and promoter of the Auriphone, a device said to help deafness. It was widely advertised and must have made some money from the purses of the gullible. In a year or two this company fell into decay and left Dr. John Grant Lyman free for other engagements.

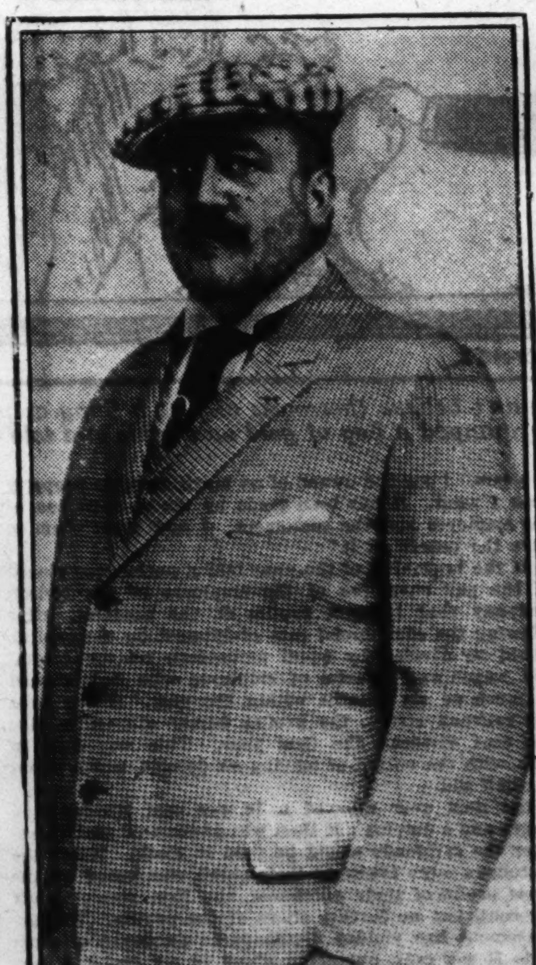
He had now had a taste of promoting, of making money out of nothing. To desert this romantic and exciting pursuit for the slow rewards of medicine did not even occur to him. He looked about for opportunity. At this time Chicago was preparing for a world's fair. The city on Lake Michigan had thrown up its famous Masonic Temple, widely advertised as the tallest "skyscraper" in the world of that day. John Lyman looked at these facts. Chicago was the place for his resumed activities. Consequently, early in 1893 he opened luxurious offices in this Masonic Temple and began to exploit a patent mining drill, the virtues of which may or may not have been as claimed. It did not matter. Lyman was selling stock, not drills, and in the morals of that time it was the stock the promoter was responsible for.

In the vernacular, he "got away with it." And right here begins a remarkable sequence of similar "gettings away," which characterize the career of the man. He led a sort of charmed life. Chicago, unquestionably imposed upon, let him slip quietly off to Ottawa, Can., where he began his next promotion, this time of a gold mine. Again he managed to sell a considerable amount of worthless stock and to slip quietly away with the gains, appearing soon in New York, where he tried to revive the Auriphone, and did get some money out of it.

In 1896 the Doctor was back in Canada, this time at Toronto, where he was in the pleasant business of floating the Colorado Gold Mining Development Company. He spent about a year in this line. Then, before he sailed, he organized the Kootenay Mining Exploration Co., on this side of the sea, and set off to England to distribute the benison of its shares. Thus the middle of 1907 found this restless and volatile spirit in the British capital engaged in the business of his choice. The Kootenay company was evolved into several branches, subsidiaries, reorganizations and consolidations, and in all of these stock was palmed off on the then still gullible British public in substantial blocks.

The British financial papers called him a "notorious American schemer," and went to some lengths to expose his companies and their absurd claims, but all efforts to dislodge him failed for at least two years, during which money flowed into his pockets steadily.

With the London financial papers in full cry after him, with the British banking system opening war, with thousands of investors fully aware of their duping, this man was allowed calmly, even ostentatiously to embark for America, there to resume his triumphant financial career. New York's astute money chiefs seemed entirely oblivious of the man's past, of the uproar he had created in London.



DR. J. GRANT LYMAN.

When J. Grant Lyman sailed up the bay from his London exploits he faced the metropolis of a nation still jejune in the matter of finance. The green goods and the gold brick had been accorded their inning and passed out, leaving all the farmers who had escaped them with a feeling of intense sophistication. The confidence game had been worked back and forth. Men innocent of the world had been victimized by it in all sections. Now that they had paid for their experience, these same men, very humanly indeed, considered themselves fraud-proof. All that was required to fleece them again was some novel variation of the old game. For human cupidity is not cured by disappointment nor gullibility quenched by one half of disillusion.

In that day the fraudulent stock game, as it came to be recognized in the ensuing few years, had not yet been worked. There had been small peculations, but the big, organized, well-brained conspiracy was still to be demonstrated. The sucker list, the wireless promotions, the mail-fraud in excelsis, the true Wallingford, were yet to reach apogee.

In New York there was an entirely different attitude toward business morals. Things were done in those days in a more or less open fashion, that could not be attempted today. Brokers and bankers took chances then at which they would shudder today. The portals of the prisons yawn in 1916 for men who may even attempt such outrages as were smiled at 15 or 16 years ago. The mail fraud investigations and prosecutions, the repeated jailing of bankers, the constant legislative inquiries, the grand jury probings and the additional legislative enactments have raised a bludgeon over many forms of business and have altered the terms and shades in which business men deal.

Thus such enterprises as might readily have been undertaken by men ranked as bankers and brokers in 1900 and openly executed, can now be used only by the hardy criminal working in secret, taking his tragic chance. What is a crime now was then likely to be considered no more than a little shady, perhaps even hailed as a piece of sharp acumen.

To this hospitable field came Dr. John Grant Lyman. A great change had come over him since Phelps, N. Y. He was even a much altered man from the person of the Auriphone. He was more than six feet tall. He was, with this height, well filled, well formed, grandly proportioned like a thick column. This was his first great asset, since for some occult reason the popular mind will insist on fancying the great banker in some such meaty form. Then Lyman had still those sheep's eyes of his boyhood. They stood wide open, almost straining, and he had contrived to make them look at his vis-a-vis with what seemed a most disarming and dignified candor. All that was needed was clothing—the proper draping of the mannequin.

At clothing Lyman was an artist. Such suitings and vestings as he immediately began to display about New York at once placed him in his own niche. He was the darling of the Fifth avenue tailors, the Beau Brummel of the Waldorf Alley of Peacocks. Where he walked or paused women and men alike craned their necks. Of the former an entourage of the most alluring was always in his train. On them and on all who came into his path Grant Lyman showered expenditure. He seemed to have unlimited capital and he released it in a golden rush.

In 1900, too, the automobile was not obstructing every street and avenue and swarming into every road and byway leading from the city. But Grant Lyman had his, and it was the biggest, reddest and fastest he could lure from the makers of that day. Again and again he was arrested for speeding. It seemed he was willing to pay the fine as a small return for the inevitable newspaper headlines.

He began operations in Wall street in that year, under the name Joshua Brown & Co., with offices at 52 Broadway. The darling of his advertising was the International Zinc Co., in which $1,000,000 worth of stock was put up for sale. The stock was advertised throughout the country and orders poured in. After only a few months Dr. Lyman actually bought his seat on the New York Stock Exchange for the then unprecedented price of $50,000.

Now came the high tide of the Lyman prosperity. He lived at the Waldorf, kept his racing automobiles, soon got interested in the turf and bought a small string of good horses. At the tracks, then flourishing at the full, he appeared in his impressive tailorings and wagered huge sums on the races. He bought a residence at 9 East Sixty-third street. For his mother and sister he provided a fine house in White Plains for which $50,000 was paid. Wherever there was money and luxury and display, there was Lyman, spending at top speed, outshining the luminaries.

Then came the first trip to Paris. John Grant Lyman went abroad as no ordinary mortal. When he sailed there went with him his wife, her maid, his valet, their coachman and footman, two spans of driving horses and their carriages. In Paris he was called the most conspicuous American of the season. Nothing was too gay, too high-priced, too exclusive for him. He even aspired to membership in the Jockey Club, to which belonged such humble persons as the late King Edward. It was the zenith.

In a few months Lyman came back to New York bringing with him a few such extravagancies as a $12,000 sable-lined coat and a motor rug of the same material valued at $5000. But he came home to disaster. The bottom had fallen out of the fraudulent zinc promotion, the investors were clamoring for an accounting. They had put at least $500,000 into a property which was appraised at $80,000 and carried a $35,000 debt. The rest had lined the pockets of the promoter.

In 1906-'07 the same thing happened. He slipped out to Goldfield, organized a company and then created a bogus market for the stock. By one of the most ingenious plans ever concocted he got $300,000 this time, not from gullible yokels, but from other smart and crooked brokers whom he telegraphed orders for the stock, which his employes then sold to them for cash. When the other brokers sent in their drafts with the purchased stock certificates attached, the drafts were not honored.

This time America was spared the pleasure of his presence for some three years. In 1910, however, he resumed his activities in California with the Panama Development Co. But Dr. Lyman had failed to gauge the change of things since his beginning. He was arrested for mail fraud and sent to prison after he had made two spectacular attempts to escape, one in an armored automobile, which carried him across the border into Oregon before he was caught.

Emerging from a Federal prison, Lyman was taken in 1913 to face trial in Los Angeles under the State statutes. He began a fight for freedom which consisted of an appeal to the public in which he recited the details of his past grandeur and demanded to know if a man of his kind might be guilty of trying to steal a measly $14,000. Finally he threw himself upon the mercy of the court in a speech that made Judge and audience sob. Nevertheless, he was convicted, but he took an appeal. Now, it proved that his eloquence had won him some soft-hearted friends. On the supposition that he could go to New York and get assistance, several Los Angeles men put up a bond of $20,000 for Lyman and he was released. A man named Corham Tufts put up part of the money and got his friends to subscribe the rest. So Lyman was sent to New York to get backing for himself. Then he disappeared.

Somewhere in seclusion, at least in hiding, Dr. Lyman then spent two years. There were no reports of his sensational reappearance in Paris, no rumors of new schemes. In May of last year, however, the incorrigible adventurer was again at hand.

This was in Boston, and the Doctor's name was J. J. Lorimer, which, as a variant of John G. Lyman isn't so recondite. Dr. Lorimer got himself into partnership with a young curb broker named Warren A. Brown. They formed the firm of Brown, Lorimer & Co., and went to work. One day, according to the story, a customer came in while Brown was out and paid over $3000 as margin on some stock he was trading in. Mr. Lorimer-Lyman took the three thousand. Also, the next train.

Only a few months ago a gentleman named John H. Putman affixed an "and company" to his name and opened brokerage offices in a building directly across the street from the New York Stock Exchange. He made deposits in two large banks, established credit with two brokers, one exchange and one curb, and sailed in. John H. Putman & Co. advertised extensively. The firm also traded on the fact that a man named Charles S. Harkness was a member of it. Who was this Mr. Harkness? Oh, he was one of the Standard Oil Harknesses. The firm even got stationery of the Standard Oil concern and wrote letters over Harkness' name approving and backing its propositions and statements. A thriving business was done. Money rolled in. What with the war stocks trading and the general boom, prosperity was as thick as the skin of a dreadnought. Soon branches were established in Springfield, Mass., and Hartford, Conn. And still business grew.

About this time something happened—something extremely detached in Los Angeles. The authorities there and the interested Mr. Gorham Tufts received strange notifications from one Ellen Peck, saying that John Grant Lyman was about New York. Mr. Tufts, glad of any clue, went East.

In all his searching and wanderings he did not pay much attention to No. 68 Broad street, and the name John H. Putman, if it strayed within his visual range, meant naught to him. Until one day. On that day it was announced through the newspapers that "Putman, the missing broker, was Dr. John Grant Lyman."

The amazing Mr. Lyman had done the thrice incredible. He had come back into the dark shadow of the Stock Exchange from which he had virtually been driven 15 years earlier, and there, under the noses of his former associates, with the Exchange detectives in their office on the same floor of the same building with him, had engineered another gigantic conspiracy. It is said he lured as much as $700,000 out of his unsuspecting clients in the few months of this latest exploit. The effrontery of the whole thing may be guessed from the satiric detail that he made his home at the Prince George Hotel, for years the home of William Offley, local head of the Department of Justice detectives.

Then the Postoffice Department had investigated, the Chatham and Phoenix Bank had acted suspicious; the first signs were up. The Machiavellian Lyman folded his tents, drew about $55,000 from the two banks with which he dealt, and slipped into obscurity. For two days the police sought John H. Putman. Then a detective was struck by the methods and description of this man Putman and suggested that he might be Lyman. The Rogue's Gallery picture of Lyman was brought and spread before Putman's office stenographers.

"That is the man," they said. A great light broke in.

It did not, however, shine brightly or far enough to disclose the luminous Lyman He, alas, was gone.

When Lyman was captured, after a yachting tour, at St. Petersburg, Fla., he was probably on his way to Spanish Honduras. After his arrest he was quoted as saying the people he had dealt with were so far above the average in intelligence that it had been a pleasure "to do business" with them. He is also said to have declared that if he had been able to operate six weeks longer as John H. Putman & Co., he would have "cleaned up $1,000,000."

Growth in United States of Profit-Sharing the Nelson company in that only employes who have shown the greatest regularity, intelligence and energy are rewarded. They are selected by the department heads.

Profit-sharing at the Dennison Manufacturing Co. is participated in only by those employes who earn at least $100 a month and have been on the payroll a specified number of years, the object being to obtain in this manner managers and workers of long training by placing upon them the detailed responsibility for wise management and continued protection of the quality of the product. Industrial partnership stock is issued to employes in proportion to the value of their services as expressed in terms of wages or salaries. Each share represents $10.

From the foregoing it will be seen that proft-sharing plans are almost as varied as are the industries which have adopted them. Yet, taken as a whole, their effect upon both capital and labor has proved so beneficial that in recent years the working population of one entire American community—the town of Waynesboro, Pa.—have become profit sharers, with the result that a situation bordering upon Utopia has been created.

There are saloons in Waynesboro, but there have only been five arrests for drunkenness in six years, and four of the defendants were summer boarders from New York. The only important strike which has occurred there in the last 10 years was caused by a foreman cursing at his men. There are no paupers there, the town's charity at home being confined to the care of a few aged or ill persons. The softest jobs in town are held by the Chief of Police and his force of two men. If the two Justices of the Peace didn't have other employment they would starve to death.

The industries in Waynesboro make no pretense of being philanthropical, yet most of the workmen own their own homes and hold stock in the companies for which they work. All this has been brought about by the application of the "Waynesboro idea," which contemplates equitable—not equal, as the Socialists would have it—distribution of wealth by equitable opportunities for all. The industries of the town, which represent about $10,000,000 capital, last year paid to about 3000 workmen more than $1,600,000 in wages and, in addition, gave them an opportunity to own shares in the industries which employ them and share in dividends amounting to about $400,000 annually.

Nothing is given to the employe. It is merely made possible for him to buy one or more shares of stock by paying a certain percentage of the cost in cash and the rest in installments. He must earn the money with which to make the purchase. About 60 per cent of the employes are stockholders, which accounts largely for the infrequency of strikes, for stockholders are going to do nothing which not only cuts off their salaries but their dividends as well.

In addition, the industries of Waynesboro make it possible for the workmen to own their own homes. They will build houses and sell them at cost, plus interest, and allow a workman to live in his house and pay off the principal and interest like paying rent.

The government of Waynesboro consists of a Burgess and a Town Council, and the present Burgess is an employe in one of the shops. It has an active civic organization known as the Board of Trade, which recently raised $165,000 for a Young Men's Christian Association building. In the town of 10,000 inhabitants this meant an average of $16.50 for each person. Several years ago the Board of Trade set out to raise $100,000 in subscriptions in capital stock for a corporation known as the Waynesboro Manufacturing and Development Co., which is more of a civic organization than a private enterprise. When they got started they raised $205,000, instead of the $100,000 they set out to get. If a sound industrial concern desires to locate in Waynesboro, but has not the capital to invest in a site or buildings, if the board of directors of the Development company approves of the proposition and the executive committee of the Board of Trade indorses the approval, a portion of the fund can be used to purchase the site and construct the buildings, stock being issued and paid for in sufficient quantity to furnish the necessary cash. The site and buildings can then be sold or rented, but in no instance can any of the money be used as a bonus or donation to any company.

Waynesboro has no regular institution for the care of the poor. It has a Relief Association, but all that is necessary for it to do is to occasionally send a little food or a small amount of money to a family to tide it over a little trouble. It has three banks and a trust company which carry 12,000 open accounts, some being duplicates and some in the names of persons residing outside the town, but almost 90 per cent of the adult population of the place are depositors. The banks recently organized the Waynesboro Beneficial Fund Association, the object of which is to raise and administer funds for the development and beautification of the town by bequests.

as the years go by." Their points of view differed vastly; the physician, in his laboratory, bowed daily to the majesty of fact, wherever it might lead; while Stevenson, ignoring unpleasant facts as much as possible, lived in an ideal world of fancy.

"After he had written 'The Lantern Bearers,'" wrote Dr. Trudeau, "I got him one day into the laboratory, from which he escaped at the first opportunity, with the words: 'Trudeau, your light may be very bright to you, but to me it smells of oil like the Devil.'"

When he left Saranac Lake, Stevenson sent to Dr. Trudeau a set of his works in a special binding, and in each book he wrote in his own hand a verse dedicating the volume to some member of the family, and even to the dog, Nig. This invaluable gift was destroyed when Dr. Trudeau's house and laboratory were burned to the ground in 1893.

The succeeding years of Dr. Trudeau's life were ones of unresting activity, notwithstanding the fact that he had been compelled ceaselessly to struggle to hold his great enemy at bay. He had not enjoyed an hour of good health since his youth, and often he had been so ill as to become careless whether he lived or died. But he was still alive, while most of the great, stalwart men, guides in the mountains, who welcomed him when he first went to the Adirondacks as an invalid, had died. Despite his affliction, and in part because of it, he built up a famous health resort, saved numbers of lives, and won for himself fame as a physician and a hero.

ones should be followed by a cold shower wherever this is practicable.

Mr. McLaughlin told of a man who came to him several years ago broken down in health and with little more strength than a child. He started the man to taking baths in cool water in which sea salt had been dissolved. In the course of time he became so hardened that he could stand a cold bath at any time. He began putting on weight and increased rapidly in health until today he is a man of good physique and excellent general health.

One can always tell whether his bath is doing him the right sort of service, says the Y. M. C. A. trainer, by the way he feels after it. If there is no subsequent glow of warmth over the body, something is wrong with the bath. Either it has been too warm or too cold or he has remained in the water too long.

The best advice to anyone before taking a cold bath treatment is to have a reliable doctor make a thorough examination of him and tell him whether it is safe or not.

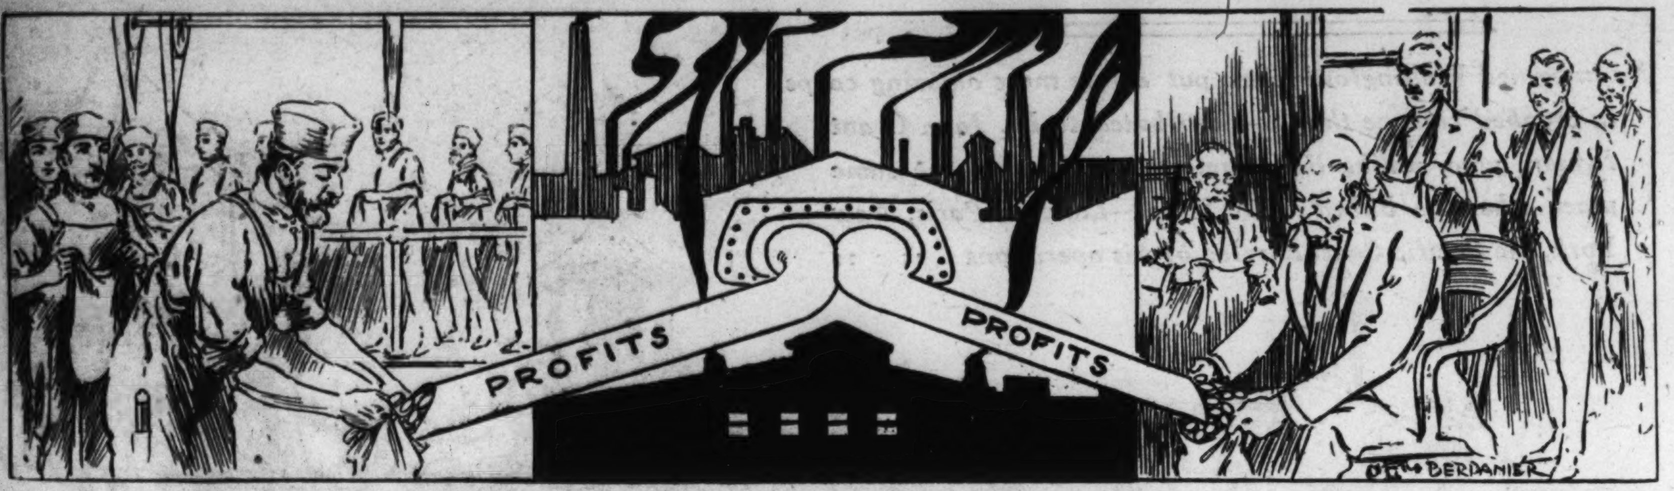
Growth in United States of Profit-Sharing, Capital's Division of Its Earnings With Labor



Plan which was looked upon with distrust for many years now puts millions which formerly went to officers and directors into pockets of workmen—One entire American community, which operates under system, has no work for its police force, no strikes, no paupers, and most of the employes of its industrial plants own their own homes.

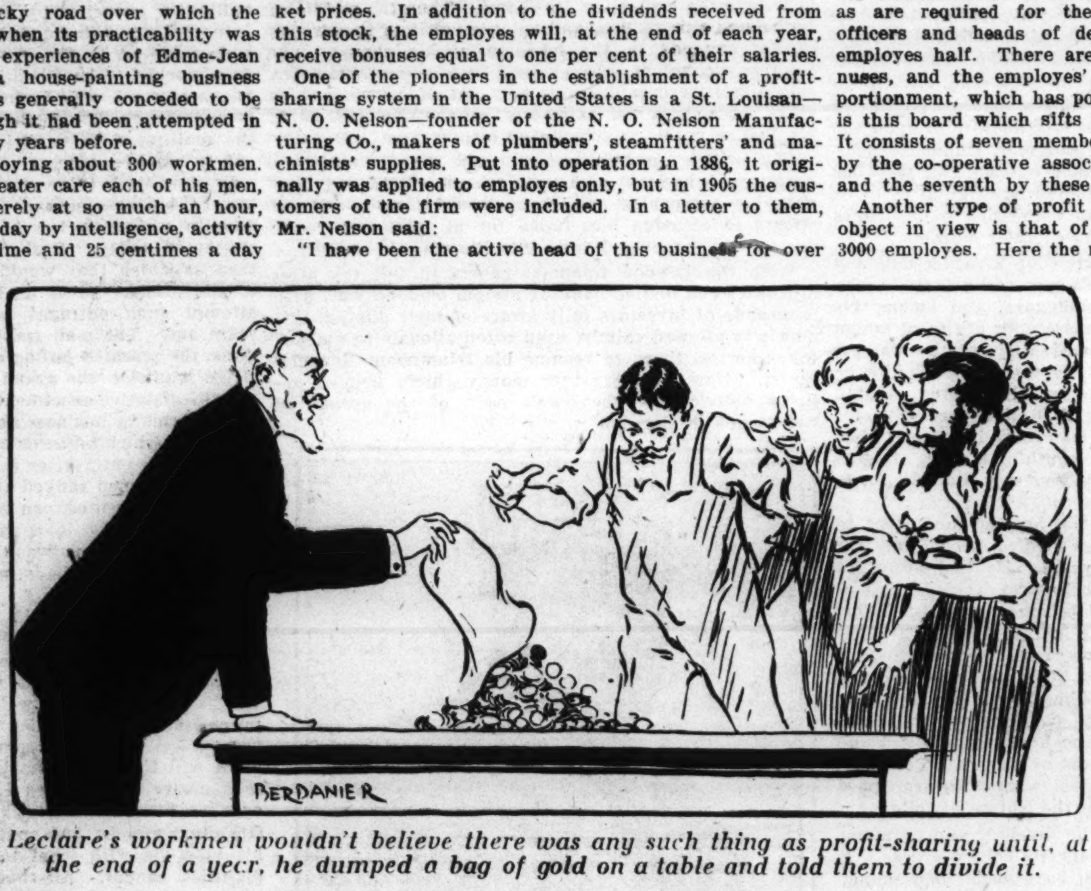
IN order to obtain a feature for his newspaper, a reporter in Chicago was sent into the loop district, the city's busiest quarter, some years ago, with a pocketful of $5 gold pieces. He was instructed to offer one of them for a dime to any passerby he might meet; to explain to the person that the money was perfectly good and that he was practically giving it away. After being out for several hours and when about to be arrested, suspected of insanity, he returned to his office with his little pile of gold intact.

The reporter proved nothing except that which was already known; that is, that human nature is suspicious of anything new, anything bizarre, anything that does not conform to pre-established custom. This trait explains why the man who laid the Atlantic cable and the inventors of the telephone, the flying machine, the submarine and the wireless were laughed at and why, when any man evolves an idea for the betterment of his fellow men the ordinary run of people begin right away to look for the ulterior motive.

It explains, too, why profit-sharing—the dividing by capital with labor of the earnings which the latter has made possible—has become an established institution only after many years of experiment handicapped by distrust both on the part of employers and employes. That it is firmly established now cannot be gainsaid, especially in the United States, where the adoption of the plan has spread amazingly within the last two years.

An illustration of the rocky road over which the profit-sharing idea traveled when its practicability was first tested is given in the experiences of Edme-Jean Leclaire, who established a house-painting business in Paris in 1827. Leclaire is generally conceded to be the father of the idea, although it had been attempted in a desultory sort of way many years before.

In 1840 Leclaire was employing about 300 workmen. He had calculated that by greater care each of his men, whom he was employing merely at so much an hour, could save him 60 centimes a day by intelligence, activity and a more zealous use of time and 25 centimes a day by avoiding waste of materials and injury to tools, a grand yearly total for the 300 men of 76,500 francs, or $15,300. He called his men together and explained his profit-sharing scheme to them, but they heard it stolidly and were not impressed. Two years later, even after the intervening period had been devoted to their education and preparation for putting the plan into effect, they still looked upon it with distrust. The next year he assembled the 44 workmen who were entitled to share the profits of the preceding year and flung down upon a table a bag containing 12,266 francs. Opening the bag, he paid each his allotment, amounting to about $50 per man. This convinced them and the idea was gradually enlarged upon by the master of the house.



Leclaire's workmen wouldn't believe there was any such thing as profit-sharing until, at the end of a year, he dumped a bag of gold on a table and told them to divide it.

It is a far cry from Leclaire's time to the present, but at last scores of great institutions in this country have acknowledged the benefits to be derived from profit-sharing. The United States Steel Corporation, one of the most mammoth enterprises in the United States, is one of these. Then, there is the Ford Motor Co., which gives away millions of dollars every year in salaries and bonuses to employes and rebates to customers; the Procter & Gamble Soap Co., the William Filene's Sons Co., department store of Boston; the Dennison Manufacturing Co., the National Carbon Co., the Illinois Central Railroad, the Boston Consolidated Gas Co., and many other private enterprises and public service corporations. Millions which formerly went into the pockets of owners, officers and directors are now diverted into the keeping of the men and women who helped to make them, and the employers receive their reward in increased profits and greater efficiency. Genuine profit-sharing concerns likewise have become numerous in France and England.

The United States Steel Corporation has annually, since 1903, except for the bad year of 1915, offered employes the privilege of subscribing for preferred or common stock of the corporation, to be paid for in installments not exceeding one-fourth of the employe's salary. The total subscriptions under the plan since its establishment were: Preferred stock, 348,605 shares; common stock, 197,672 shares. Special bonuses were allowed employes who kept their stock for the full five years and completed the payments thereon. In addition, shares upon which payments were allowed to lapse were turned into the treasurer and made into a pool and divided as a bonus among those employes who had been thrifty enough to keep up their payments. The amount of special compensation paid to subscribers from 1903 to 1911, inclusive, aggregated $6,964,676. As to what will be paid for the five-year period, ending this year, no figures are available, but it is estimated that it will be $6,000,000, making a total of $12,964,676. At the close of 1914 the number of employes who had bought stock or who were making payments upon it was 40,719. Figures for 1915 have not yet been computed.

On March 1, 20,000 of the employes of the International Harvester Co. had taken advantage of a profit-sharing offer, which had been posted for a period of 60 days. The men have purchased profit-sharing certificates to be paid for in installments of from $1 to $25 a month, deducted from their salaries. The certificates are exchangeable for stock at less than market prices. In addition to the dividends received from this stock, the employes will, at the end of each year, receive bonuses equal to one per cent of their salaries.

One of the pioneers in the establishment of a profit-sharing system in the United States is a St. Louisan—N. O. Nelson—founder of the N. O. Nelson Manufacturing Co., makers of plumbers', steamfitters' and machinists' supplies. Put into operation in 1886, it originally was applied to employes only, but in 1905 the customers of the firm were included. In a letter to them, Mr. Nelson said:

"I have been the active head of this business for over 30 years. I am the owner of as much or more property than I want. It has been made by the co-operation of the employes and the customers. I now want them to have the benefit of it."

At the beginning of the year 1886 a notice was placed in the pay envelopes of the employes of the Nelson company that the net profits of the business, after allowing the commercial rate of interest on the capital, would be divided by equal percentage on the capital and wages and salaries of employes who had worked as much as six months within the year. Owing to a big railroad strike, the profits barely allowed a five per cent dividend the first year. This was paid in cash with the option of leaving on deposit, which about one-half did.

The next year allowed a 10 per cent dividend on wages and a surplus. It then was announced that thereafter the dividends would be paid in stock. When the customers were taken in their share was based on the gross profit of their purchases, the firm receiving six per cent, but no further share of the profits. The arrangement has yielded dividends to employes of from 10 to 30 per cent, averaging about 18 per cent. A surplus has been laid by equal to about 50 per cent of the capital stock issued and liberal depreciation of the fixed property.

At present the Nelson company employes own about one-third of the capital. To prevent improvident men from bartering away their dividends, the firm in recent years issued certificates of stock only after three years and prohibited any person while in the company's employ to buy or sell employe stock. In meritorious cases the company buys the stock. If an employe becomes disabled his stock is cashed by installment and he and his family are provided for as long as needed. All employes, no matter of what age, sex or color, including the officers, are eligible to share the profits.

"It cannot be claimed," said Mr. Nelson in a recent magazine article, "that every employe and customer will do his utmost, but it goes without saying that he will do better than when in instinctive opposition. Interested co-operation is more efficient than war-like competition."

When the plan was put into effect the capital of the Nelson company was about $100,000 and the employes numbered about 200. The capital and surplus now is about $2,000,000, and the employes 1000.

An Eastern manufacturer abandoned a profit-sharing plan several years ago because he found it impossible to evolve a scheme whereby the drones in his establishment could be eliminated and individual merit rewarded. The drones got as much as the workers. The Filene company believes it has solved this problem in the formation of the Filene Co-operative Association, an organization of employes. The company divides its net profits half and half after paying dividends on the capital invested in the business and providing such sums as are required for the retirement of stock. The officers and heads of departments get half and the employes half. There are provisions for awarding bonuses, and the employes' half goes to a board of apportionment, which has power to award the bonuses. It is this board which sifts the drones from the workers. It consists of seven members, three of which are chosen by the co-operative association, three by the directors and the seventh by these six.

Another type of profit sharing which has the same object in view is that of the Farr Alpaca Co., having 3000 employes. Here the management is depended upon to separate the lazy from the diligent and to prevent the former from staying on the payroll long enough to benefit from the profit-sharing plan. To share in the profits of the Farr company an employe's name must appear on the payroll on Jan. 1 of each year. He must remain continuously in the service of the company for the following 12 months and his services must be satisfactory. When an employe is discharged or leaves voluntarily the amount forfeited by him is credited to a benefit fund, out of which the directors of the company may give assistance to aged or disabled employes.

In the plant of the Lever Soap Co., at Cambridge, Mass., as well as all others of the company throughout the world, a system known as "co-partnership" is in effect. Each eligible employe annually receives partnership certificates equal to 10 per cent of his salary or wage. These certificates draw dividends amounting to five per cent less than those paid on the company's ordinary shares; that is, the partnership certificates rank equally with the regular shares after the latter receive dividends of five per cent. The plan is restricted to employes who are 25 years old, have been in the service of the company five years and who have signed an agreement to work faithfully, but applies to both men and women.

A stock distribution system similar to that employed by the Nelson company is in operation at the plant of the Boston Consolidated Gas Co. The dividend to the eligible employes is called a premium and this is fixed at the same rate as the dividend on the stock of the company for the corresponding year. The premium of each employe is figured on the amount of his salary or wages for the year and is applied toward the purchase of preferred shares of capital stock at market prices. Any odd balances remaining after the stock is taken up is credited to the employe on the books of the company and bear interest at the rate of four per cent per annum. The stock is the absolute property of the employes and cannot be sold without the approval of the directors, but the plan differs from that followed by

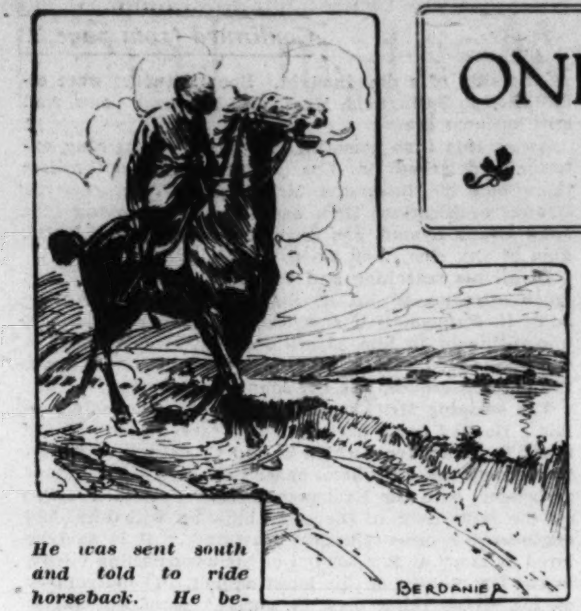
ONE MAN'S FORTY-YEAR BATTLE AGAINST CONSUMPTION

Afflicted from youth with tuberculosis, Dr. Edward L. Trudeau for four decades fought mankind's conflict with the White Plague, being first in America to adopt Koch's theory of germ infection—The fascinating life story of a hero of peace :: ::



He was sent south and told to ride horseback. He became worse as a result of his toil in the heat.

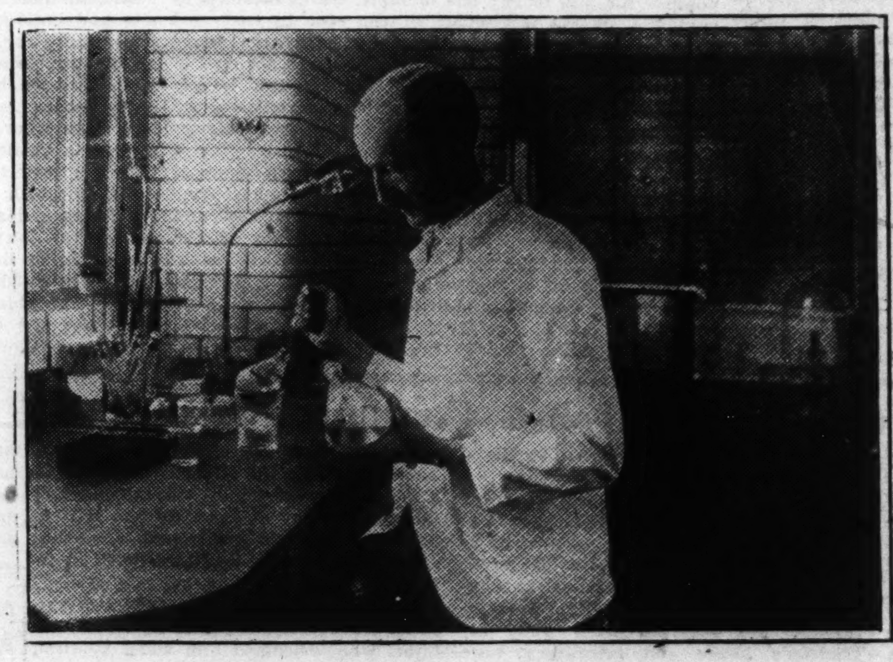
THIS is the true story of a man of great valor, not in war but in peace. Stricken with tuberculosis in his youth, he waged a daily battle with the dreadest of diseases for his life, which he preserved to the age of 67 years; and in addition had the strength to forge his own struggles and sufferings into weapons for the defense of mankind against the White Plague. Directly and indirectly he was the means of snatching thousands of lives from the grip of humanity's deadliest foe.

In the title of a biography by Stephen Chalmers, Dr. Edward Livingston Trudeau is described as "The Beloved Physician." He was widely known to the laity as well as the medical profession through his foundation of the Adirondack Cottage Sanitarium for the treatment of incipient consumption in working men and women, the first of its kind in America; and of the Saranac laboratory for the study of tuberculosis, the first research laboratory for the purpose in this country. He was the first man in the United States to cultivate the tubercle bacillus and confirm Koch's brilliant discovery that the disease is due to germ infection; and he was the first physician in America to introduce the microscopic method of diagnosing consumption.

Dr. Trudeau's life-story is not only fascinating as a record of heroism, but for its sidelights upon famous men, the most conspicuous of these being Robert Louis Stevenson and E. H. Harriman. Stevenson himself one of the great army of the tuberculous, was for a time Dr. Trudeau's patient: the physician was a chum of Harriman when the latter was only a clerk in a New York broker's office. Dr. Trudeau died recently.

DR. TRUDEAU was born in New York, Oct. 5, 1848. His father, Dr. James Trudeau, was a member of a well-known New Orleans family of French descent; and his mother's father was Dr. Francois Eloi Berger, a French physician whose ancestors were doctors for many generations back.

The boy lived with his mother in Paris, France, from 1851 to 1865. He was 17 years old when the family returned to New York, and there his brother was attacked by a rapidly progressive type of tuberculosis. Edward became his nurse; and so little was known about the infectious nature of the malady 50 years ago that he was permitted to sleep in the same bed with his brother. One of the attending physician's most solemn injunctions was never to open the windows. "In the light of our present knowledge," said Dr. Trudeau in his posthumous book, "An Autobiography" (Doubleday, Page & Co.), I must shudder to think what the condition of that room must have been." The brother died in a few months; and it is probable, although Dr. Trudeau does not say so, that it was from him he contracted the disease.



DR. TRUDEAU, THE INVESTIGATOR.

Although slender of build, young Trudeau was very athletic and active, and of remarkable endurance. He was a notable oarsman and walker. On a wager, one night, he walked from Fifty-ninth street in New York City to the Battery in 47 minutes. Despite his vigorous condition, however, he received several warnings that tuberculosis had already chosen him for its own, but such was the ignorance of science then that they went unheeded. Some of these symptoms were occasional fevers, attributed to malaria, and cold abscesses, thought due to muscular strain.

He had been graduated as a physician and married before the first hint came to him of the tragedy of his life. He felt tired all the time, but thought it was caused by the confinement of city life. A fellow physician one day thought he looked ill and took his temperature. To Dr. Trudeau's astonishment it was 101. His friend suggested that he have his lungs examined.

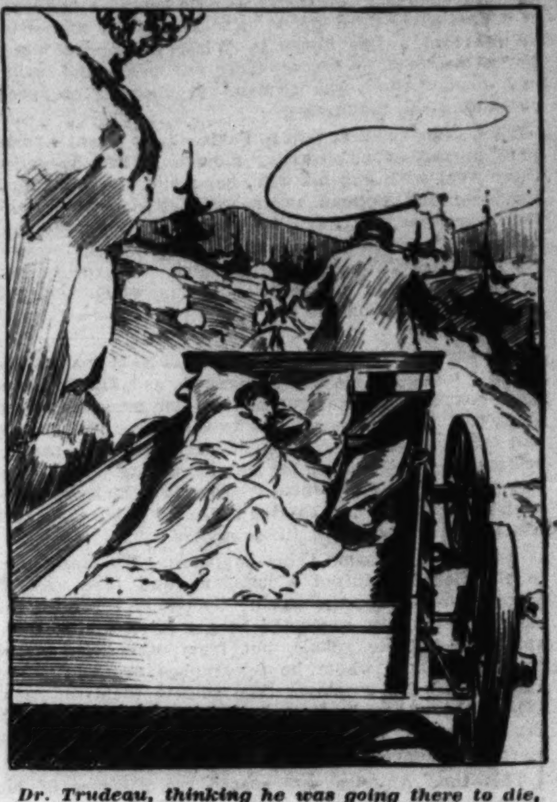
Dr. Trudeau laughed at the idea, but the other insisted, so in a few days Dr. Trudeau went to Dr. Janeway, famous for his skill in physical diagnosis. After a thorough examination Dr. Janeway pronounced: "The upper two-thirds of the left lung are involved in an active tuberculous process." Such was the irony of things that Dr. Trudeau was at the time conducting classes in diseases of the chest at a New York medical school, without the least suspicion that anything was wrong with his own lungs.

Dr. Janeway's diagnosis was considered by Dr. Trudeau to be the equivalent of a sentence of death. "I think I know something," he says, "of the feelings of the man at the bar who is told he is to be hanged on a given date. for in those days pulmonary consumption was considered absolutely fatal. It seemed to me the world had suddenly grown dark."

The prescription given to Dr. Trudeau was that he should go South, ride horseback and exercise daily. He went to Aiken and obeyed instructions. The result was that his fever kept up and that he lost weight and strength steadily. In those days the value of the rest cure in tuberculosis, now considered an essential of treatment, was not suspected. No one told him not to struggle and rebel against his plight, and he became thoroughly unnerved. "It took me a long time to learn," he writes, "that acquiescence is the only way for the tuberculous invalid to conquer fate."

He returned home sicker than ever; but soon accident showed him the way for helping himself and then others. A friend invited him on a trip to a hunting lodge in the Adirondacks, in a rough inaccessible region with an inclement and trying climate. He accepted, for he loved hunting and fishing, and the forests and lakes of the wilderness. If he had but a short time to live, he wished to spend that time in surroundings that most appealed to him.

After leaving the railroad, it was a drive of 42 miles over rough roads to their destination. Dr. Trudeau made the trip on a mattress and pillow in a stage wagon, and for him the last part of the ride was "an afternoon of misery."



Dr. Trudeau, thinking he was going there to die, made the trip from the railroad station in a stage wagon.

In this environment his health and appetite improved remarkably. He was out of doors most of the day, but idled much of the time. being rowed about in a boat, fishing or waiting at his station for his guide and dogs to drive a fox or rabbit or deer within gunshot. It was during this summer that E. H. Harriman—a clerk in the office of D. C. Hays & Co.—ran up into the mountains to see Dr. Trudeau. The physician relates that the lodgekeeper had purchased a gilt ball and with great pride placed it on top of his flag pole.

"I told him," Dr. Trudeau writes, "that I knew if Ed Harriman caught sight of that ball when he arrived the first thing he would do would be to shoot at it. As the stage stopped Harriman jumped out, rifle in hand, caught sight of the bright ball at the top of the flag pole, and put a bullet through it before shaking hands with us all." Of Harriman the author says: "A more light-hearted and better companion and friend I could not have had." Their intimacy continued undiminished through Harriman's amazing career as a financier until his death.

At the end of the summer Dr. Trudeau returned to New York, and soon suffered a relapse. His physicians recommended that he spend the winter in St. Paul, but the climate and the exercise he was urged to take were so trying that by spring he was iller than ever. Again he went back to the Adirondacks, and in those happy surroundings his health again improved. At the end of the summer he formed the heroic resolution of spending the winter in the Adirondacks—which, under conditions then, he says, was similar to passing the winter in the Klondike. His physician did not object; and explained afterwards that he felt no hope of Dr. Trudeau's recovery, and thought he might as well spend his remaining days where he was happiest.

There, in a snow-covered wilderness extending for miles around, with the mercury many degrees below zero, the invalid, with his courageous wife and two young children, lived through the winter months. The railroad was 42 miles away; the nearest physician was at Plattsburg, 60 miles distant. "In those days," the writer recalls, "the belief that cold and storm were the two things to be avoided by the consumptive, and that he should in winter seek a warm and sunny climate, was so general and deep-rooted that my staying in so rough a climate seemed to my friends little short of suicide."

Much to the surprise of Dr. Trudeau's physician, his health was improved by the winter of blizzards in the Adirondacks; and the next winter he resolved to repeat the experiment. The keeper of the hunting lodge had given it up in the meantime, and Dr. Trudeau obtained a cottage on Saranac Lake. This was the beginning of the famous Saranac Lake health resort, for other physicians, learning of the benefits of the climate in Dr. Trudeau's case, sent invalids to him there. Here, in later years, Dr. Trudeau founded his Cottage Sanatarium and Tuberculosis Laboratory. The pioneer work of these two institutions was extremely influential in initiating the great anti-tuberculosis crusade in the United States. For 40 years, with only one exception, Dr. Trudeau and his wife spent the winters at Saranac Lake; and to this he attributed his long life, although more or less of a chronic invalid.

In 1882 came what Dr. Trudeau considered the most important event in his life. In that year Dr. Koch published his epoch-making paper on "The Etiology of Tuberculosis," in which he made the startling assertion that a specific germ, the tubercle bacillus, was the cause of this universal disease. Dr. Trudeau read extracts from the paper in his foreign medical journals; and at Christmas a friend made him a gift of a translation of the entire paper. "Surely," he says, "I never had a Christmas present that meant more to me than that big hand-written copy book."

Dr. Trudeau knew nothing of the science of bacteriology, then in its infancy, but, despite his poor health, decided to master all that was known of the subject. In New York he found a physician who had studied in Koch's laboratory, and under him learned to stain and recognize the tubercle bacillus under the microscope. At a time when most American physicians were deriding not only Koch but the entire germ theory, this physician, himself engaged in a daily conflict with tuberculosis in his own body, was cultivating consumption germs in his laboratory, inoculating guinea pigs and seeking that still undiscovered boon—an anti-tuberculosis serum.

His researches instantly bore practical fruit by giving him skill, which to other physicians seemed uncanny, in diagnosing consumption in its earliest stages. The physical examination then in vogue was worthless until the disease had appreciably affected the lungs. With his microscope Dr. Trudeau could detect the earliest invasion of the disease; his fame as a diagnostician spread, and persons went to him for examination from distant parts of the country and even the world, one man coming from far-away Australia.

Dr. Trudeau was also engaged at the time—such was the energy and zeal of this sick man—in building up his cottage sanitarium. He became, he says, "an incorrigible beggar of money for other people." He visited tirelessly among the well-to-do with pleas for money; with such success that cottage after cottage arose on Saranac Lake, where working men and women could have treatment at a nominal cost. With his growing fame came demands upon the physician for articles for medical journals and addresses at medical conventions.

In October, 1887, there arrived at Saranac Lake Dr. Trudeau's most illustrious patient, Robert Louis Stevenson, who wrote there some of his best essays—"Pluvis et Umbra," "The Lantern Bearers," "A Christmas Sermon," as well as some portions of "The Master of Ballantrae."

The romancer and the physician had many discussions by the fireplace of Stevenson's sitting room. "It was a great privilege to meet him in this informal way," says Dr. Trudeau, "and the impression of his striking personality, his keen insight into life, his wondrous idealism, his nimble intellect and his inimitable vocabulary in conversation, has grown on me more and more

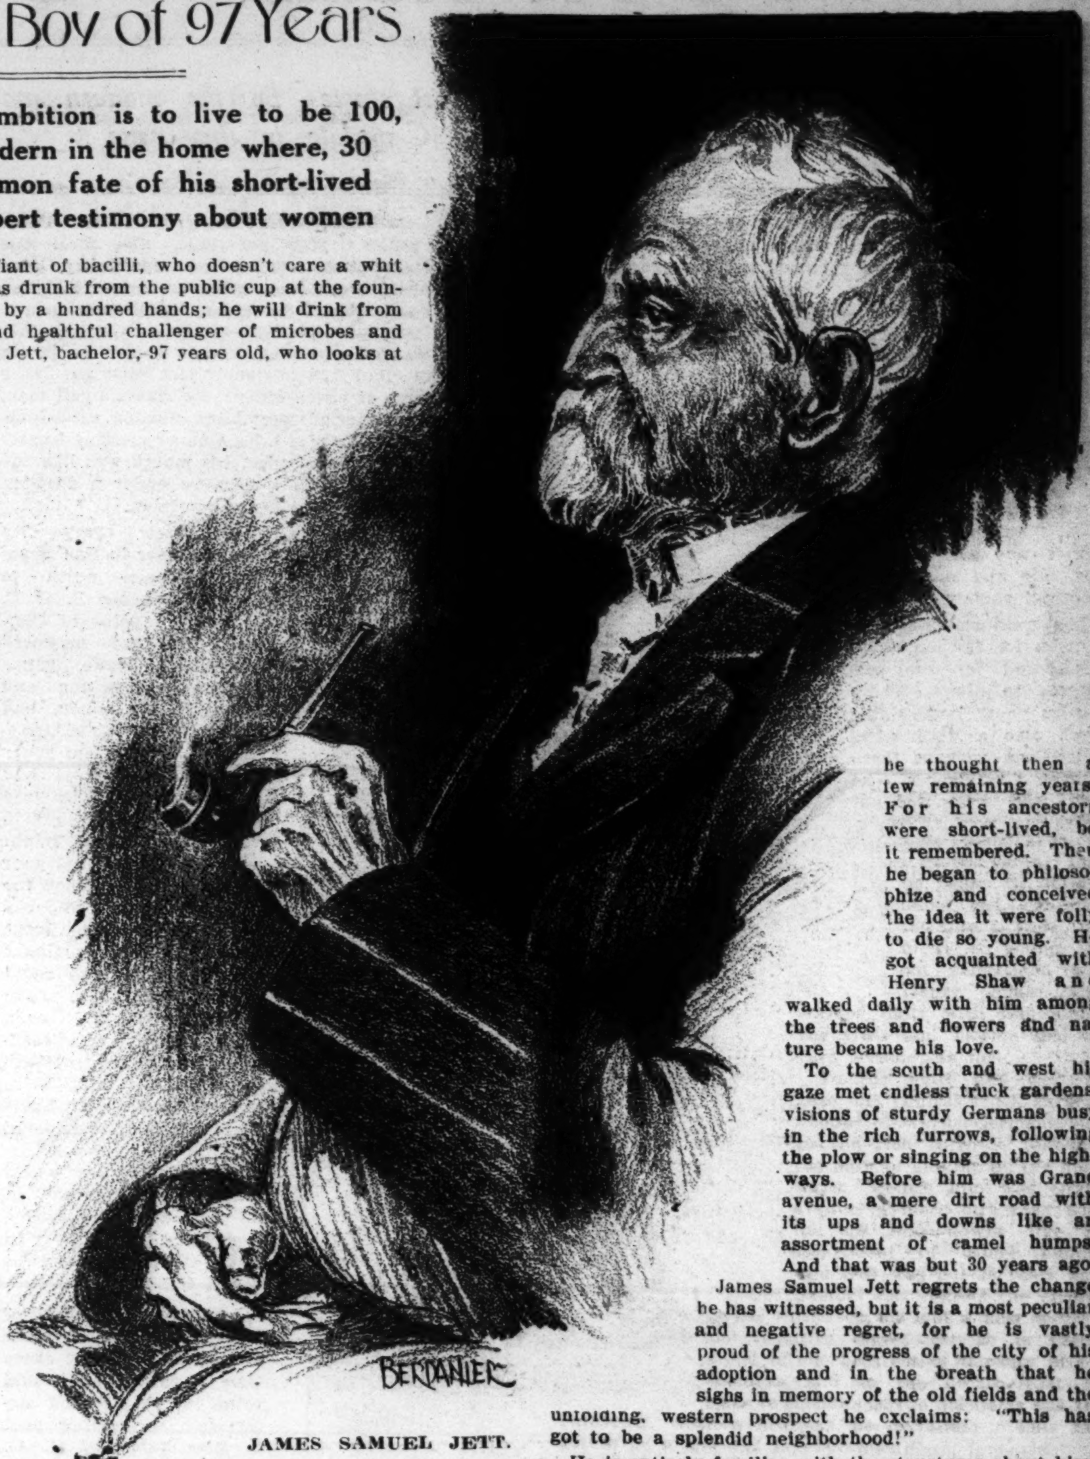
"Bacilli and Sanitation? Nonsense!"

Remarks This St. Louis Boy of 97 Years

James Samuel Jett, bachelor, whose chief ambition is to live to be 100, philosophizes on things ancient and modern in the home where, 30 years ago, he retired to await the common fate of his short-lived ancestors—Confesses he can give no expert testimony about women



JAMES SAMUEL JETT.

THERE is one person in St. Louis, uttterly defiant of bacilli, who doesn't care a whit whether a vast section of mixed population has drunk from the public cup at the fountain or whether a hotel towel has been used by a hundred hands; he will drink from the cup and use the towel. This fearless and healthful challenger of microbes and scoffer at modern precautions is James Samuel Jett, bachelor, 97 years old, who looks at you without the aid of glasses and hears as well as you do.

Thirty years ago this venerable specimen of health and exponent of good cheer retired to the quietude of the Memorial Home on South Grand avenue, because the ways of modern men and women interested him little. Too much speed was being shot into the terrestrial machine.

"My great desire," says he, "is to live a century."

"And what have you done toward consummating that ambition?" he was asked recently.

"Why, what can I do but wait and see," was the laconic reply. After a moment of thought he added: "I have not indulged in youthful orgies, I went to bed at reasonable hours, but smoked, drank and acted the part of the normal citizen. I have no array of 'dont's'; let common sense dictate in every act."

Jett came to St. Louis when 10 years old and almost immediately went with his parents to Edwardsville. He says that Illinois people at that time spoke of "St. Louis, near Alton," for then the town on the bluffs was expected by many to become the metropolis of the valley

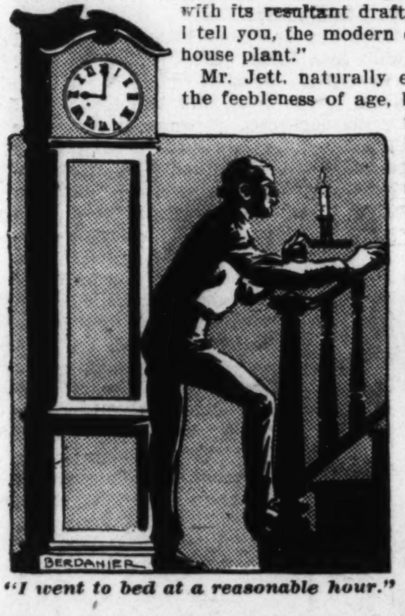
After some practical experience as a clerk in a general store at Edwardsville and as postmaster, Jett came to St. Louis and established a jewelry business on Main street near Vine, later moving to Fourth, close to Olive. But in 1860 the lure of yellow metal led him to Colorado and subsequently to Montana, where, after 10 years of ownership and investments in mines, he returned to St. Louis, "broke."

"Regret my ventures? No! Those ventures are possibly responsible for my longevity. The West puts life in a man. I came from Kentucky and I am the last survivor of a long line of short-lived ancestors. Then, again, I think that perhaps my Western career had naught to do with the extension of years and the secret is in the mind—the ardent desire to live long. You see, my ideas about the causes of long life are fickle.

"There is one thing I firmly believe, however, and that is that the extreme, present-day theories of bacilli and sanitation are sheer nonsense. In the good old days men lived as long as now. Perhaps we had more plagues, more epidemics, but general cleanliness has rid the world of these, not the silly individual towel and paper drinking cup."

The old man laughed softly to himself as were the sanitation subject quite a joke.

"Living in the old days was unquestionably more wholesome. We were not so susceptible to colds with the old-fashioned open grate fire, with its resultant drafts of fresh air. I tell you, the modern child is a hothouse plant."



"I went to bed at a reasonable hour."

Mr. Jett, naturally enough, shows the feebleness of age, but is the picture of good health. The signs of the sclerotic are not visible and his cheeks have a normal amount of color. He does not leave the home grounds now, most especially, he explains, because he has no desire to do so.

Two years ago he expressed a desire to join the Presbyterian Church, and friends took him in an automobile to the Tyler Place Presbyterian Church, Spring and Russell avenues, where he placed his letter.

"Churches are a comfort—religion is a help, but one can become extreme along those lines," he exclaimed. "In my youth I was a Methodist, but," and he smiled slyly, "I backslid. There were so many irregularities cropping out in the church that I could not stomach the subject at all for years."

And that automobile ride! "I just did not like the motion of that machine at all," exclaimed the old gentleman, chuckling.

The big headliners of the daily papers, epitomizing the horrors of war, the killing of men by the thousands and hundreds of thousands, keenly fascinate and appal the tender-hearted nonogenarian. His sympathies are with the allies, with no well-defined argument to defend his sentiments He is thoroughly confident of the ultimate victory of the allies.

"When the war began and when England entered the field I expected the Germans to cry for peace, but the way those Germans fought and continue fighting is past understanding. But England is a bulldog and will stick it out to the last man.

"Why, during the Civil War, when we read of men being killed off by the thousands, we were horrified, but what will the Civil War be in retrospection?

"Well, you see, you are asking a question along lines where I must admit my greatest ignorance," he exclaimed when asked how he thought the modern woman compares with women of his youth. "What should I know about women; I am a bachelor and," he added with a characteristic chuckle, "perhaps that is another cause of my long life."

Mr. Jett is convinced that there is apparent, generally, a growing lack of credit and trust.

"In my time," he said, "a man's personal integrity was his bank account; absolute trust breeds honor. There was less of embezzlement and more desire to pay bills and meet all forms of obligation. The penniless youth who desires to enter business today is put on a rack, is made to sign endless bonds against the seed of theft, which, it seems, the modern business man thinks is implanted in all mankind.

"Mistrust is the greatest breeder of theft. If you think a man a thief—and you do if you insure his honesty—why, he may as well be one, and when he flies with the bank account, why be astonished?"

The venerable philosopher expressed a desire to qualify his sympathies for the allies and his seeming dislike for the Germans. It was difficult to realize his extreme age as he spoke:

"I have come in contact with many Germans—who has not in St. Louis?—and they have ever been sterling friends, splendid citizens and entertain better ideas of living than the average citizen. I admire Germany as a nation, but what seems to be an antipathy is really not, it is merely remote racial instinct with its subconscious, indefinable outcroppings. If we are not of Teutonic blood we are interested in the success of the allies, yet deplore the misfortunes of the Germans. I wish I could make myself clearer."

The manner in which this old man expounds logical sentences on things of human interest is interesting. His words are carefully chosen, softly enunciated and flow into convincing sentences. When one bids him good-by it is with a deep regret for the past of which James Samuel Jett is a lingering benediction.

"We were not so susceptible to colds with the old-fashioned grate fire with its resultant drafts of fresh air."

Across the street from the Memorial Home is Tower Grove Park, one of the many good points that lured Jett—30 years ago, when he cast about for a home in which to spend what he thought then a few remaining years. For his ancestors were short-lived, be it remembered. Then he began to philosophize and conceived the idea it were folly to die so young. He got acquainted with Henry Shaw and walked daily with him among the trees and flowers and nature became his love.

To the south and west his gaze met endless truck gardens, visions of sturdy Germans busy in the rich furrows, following the plow or singing on the highways. Before him was Grand avenue, a mere dirt road with its ups and downs like an assortment of camel humps. And that was but 30 years ago.

James Samuel Jett regrets the change he has witnessed, but it is a most peculiar and negative regret, for he is vastly proud of the progress of the city of his adoption and in the breath that he sighs in memory of the old fields and the unfolding, western prospect he exclaims: "This has got to be a splendid neighborhood!"

He is entirely familiar with the structures about him. For has he not, pipe in mouth, strolled over miles of new streets, watched the houses rise like magic and seen the new faces as they came? He is a walking history, a living page of the past, a moral lesson to youth.

Visitors who go to his room to cheer him depart cheered—cheered with a quaint philosophy grown fat through kindness and a vast sympathy which remains elastic and young when, according to the reckonings in the Good Book, James Samuel Jett should have been a memory.

Jett came to the institution as the first male guest. It was the original intention of the founders to limit its residents to married couples, but the pathetic, lonesome fate of widowers, widows and bachelors had an appeal that was beyond the passing. So when the venerable Mr. Jett discovered this extended hospitality he decided to make it his final home.

"General cleanliness has rid the world of epidemics, not the silly individual towels and paper drinking cups."

His step was light then, his voice firm and he did much to cheer those about him. But the amazing feature of this extension of youth is that its limitations have not been reached and he is still light of step, still firm of voice and still cheers those about him.

Indeed, if you make inquiries of him regarding any part of the institution, or if you are seeking someone about the place, this young-old man will not give you merely the verbal instruction how to solve your quest, not he; James Samuel Jett will arise, precede you to the desired source of information and you will not walk slow in following. He has a rapid gait. His carriage is erect and his address most remarkable. He will proudly be your host about the institution, calling attention to its remarkable home-like characteristics, and when you have departed you have forgotten that you have communed with one of the ancients.

Indeed, he feels a sort of proprietary interest in the home by virtue of his long residence and regards the street in front and the park opposite as his own particular demesne. But he is a benevolent baron of this territory, eager to welcome visitors.

How to Dine Well Without Meat in Lent

By NESTOR A. L. LATTARD (Maitre d'Hotel of the Plaza, New York City).

TO get up a good luncheon or dinner without using meat is the despair of the average housekeeper. But in the 40 days that began last Wednesday this problem faces hundreds of thousands of women who preside over households in which Lent is strictly observed.

Did they but know, meatless meals are just as easy to prepare, just as delicious to eat and supply just as much nourishment as dishes that have meat as their basis. Most of us eat too much meat, anyway, and it is good for our health to become accustomed to the multitude of foods that serve equally well to satisfy hunger and taste.

Not nearly enough interest is taken by housewives and cooks in the multitude of vegetables out of which such delicious combinations can be made. If more care were taken in their preparation and more ingenuity displayed in combining them, it would prove of great value to all homes, hotels and restaurants.

And few American women have any idea of the value of the Italian and German pastes — macaroni, noodles, spaghetti, lasagnette, fettuccini, gnocchi, etc., or of the thousand forms in which they can be served, with and without meat sauces. Ravioli, for instance, which are made from a paste into which only eggs and flour enter, kneaded and cut into squares one day and left till the next to dry; then folded into envelopes and filled with a stuffing that may be made in many different ways but that does not necessarily contain meat, and served with a rich sauce, are delicious, most nutritious and easily digested.

Nor do we make enough use of cheese, in its 3000 varieties.

Vegetables intelligently selected and combined with cheeses and farinaceous foods can be made to take the place of meat in any menu, no matter how elaborate. The whole mushroom family—only one of which, unfortunately, is commonly found on American tables—eggplant, cardoons, cucumbers and squash are a few of the vegetables that deserve a more prominent place on our tables.

Here are a few suggestions for novelties in the way of dishes prepared without any meat:

OMELET ALICE.

Dice of fried eggplant and fresh mushrooms mixed in the beaten eggs and seasoned.

SCRAMBLED EGGS, CRISFIELD.

Proceed as for regular scrambled eggs, adding a little cream while beating; season with salt, white pepper and celery salt. Then throw into the pan; when almost cooked, add some fresh crabmeat and mix without breaking. Serve.

HARD-BOILED EGG CROQUETTE, A L'AURORE.

Chop up the desired quantity of hard boiled eggs, both yolks and whites; mix with these enough duxelle to give it a nice flavor; season, make it into shapes of croquettes, pass in batter and fry.

SAUCE AURORE—Place some Bechamel in a pan; season with salt, prepared red pepper and nutmeg; mix with this some finely chopped blanched onions; incorporate into this enough yolks of hard boiled eggs, first pounded to a paste with a little fresh butter, to give it a pretty stiff consistency; strain and serve with egg croquettes.

EGG JULIE.

Take a hard boiled egg; cut off enough of the lower part to remove the yolk; make a dressing of paprika, salt and pepper with the yolk and put it back into the egg. Place this on a small artichoke bottom; glaze with a pink mayonnaise, adding just a dash of paprika at the top; then place a nice rim of caviar around it.

MOUSSE OF SALMON, ALGERNON.

Mousse of salmon placed in a buttered circular mould; poached unmoulded, spread with devilled sauce, mustard; pass under the salamander to brown; the inside of the circle filled with lozenge-shaped cucumbers, previously boiled; serve with this a Newburg sauce.

FILET OF SEA BASS, YVONNE.

Saute the fish with white wine, with Julienne of mushrooms in it. Garniture of soft clams Remick, as follows: Take the desired number of medium-sized soft clams; steam until they open. Take the flat shell off and lay aside in a warm place. Cover with sauce Remick, sprinkle with bread crumbs and grated cheese and pass under the salamander to brown.

SAUCE REMICK—To make Sauce Remick for 24 clams, take one-half pint of good, stiff mayonnaise, add six tablespoonfuls of chili sauce, three tablespoonfuls of Lattard sauce, salt, pepper, one-fourth teaspoonful of curry powder, one-half teaspoonful of powdered English mustard and celery salt.

BOULA GRATINE.

Light cream of new peas with green turtle meat.

POTATOES OR SWEET POTATOES, MARKLE.

Bake the potatoes, take out of shell; in chafing dish fix with butter, paprika and salt; when about ready to serve add a good glass of Port wine, stirring thoroughly; serve.

CRABMEAT CAKES, CELERY SAUCE.

Make the crabmeat cakes as you would codfish cakes, but do not break the crabmeat (or as little as possible). To make the celery sauce, use the leaves of the celery and odds and ends; put in cream and let simmer down; when it has simmered to the consistency of a sauce, strain; season to taste, adding a little celery salt to the seasoning. Pieces of celery may be left in.

CRABMEAT MACLAY.

Garnish an artichoke bottom with crabmeat; its dressing made with sour cream, well seasoned with salt, white pepper, paprika and a little curry powder; serve over a leaf of lettuce, very cold.

BISQUE DES INDIENS.

Half milk and half cream in a deep pan. Into this throw enough crabmeat to give the cream a full flavor of the crab; let come to a boil three or four times and strain through a fine Chinese sieve; season with a little celery salt, salt, white pepper and curry powder; when about to serve add six very small steamed little neck clams for each person.

TOMATO TOTO.

One-third smoked salmon, two-thirds sturgeon, dressed with Supreme Sauce in which a little fresh caviar is mixed. Stuff into a scooped-out tomato and arrange nicely on a cold plate with a leaf of lettuce.

SUPREME SAUCE—6 tablespoons of mayonnaise, 3 tablespoons of chili sauce, 3 tablespoons of Lattard sauce or 1½ tablespoons of Worcestershire sauce, 1 tablespoon tarragon vinegar. Season to taste with salt, pepper, celery salt, English mustard and curry powder; stir thoroughly; strain and place in the ice box for a couple of hours so as to have it very cold when ready to serve.

STRIPED BASS, MOLLENHAUER (Fisherman's Style)

Take the tray out of the fish boiler; place a mirepoix on the bottom of it, cover with sea weed and replace the tray over that. Arrange over the tray a nice striped bass, thoroughly cleaned and clipped, placing in its belly a bouquet of fragrant herbs. To a five or six pound bass, pour in one quart and one pint half Rhine wine and half sweet cider. Season the bass thoroughly with salt, pepper, paprika and celery salt. Place some medium ,small peeled potatoes around the fish, add a few nice pats of butter over the bass, cover and seal with paper and dough, placing over the range to steam slowly. Do not unseal until served.

BAKED POTATO, SURPRISE.

Take a medium-sized baked potato, scoop it out and mash the contents with a celery cream sauce; fill the potato, sprinkle with cheese and bread crumbs and put back in the oven to brown.

TURBAN OF SPINACH, FLORINI.

Proceed as for a timbale, using egg to hold the spinach together. Place in a circular buttered mould and poach; when done, unmould; meanwhile, saute eggplant cut in half-inch squares, fried in butter; arrange this in the center of the turban of spinach and serve a Worcestershire and Madeira sauce at same time.

SALAD CORDON ROUGE.

Heart of lettuce, celery knobs in slices, border of diced beets; French dressing.

SALAD DRATTAL.

Cut some crisp romaine across the leaf in about half-inch lengths; arrange these in a salad bowl, making a hollow in the center; take some watercress, chop it up slightly and make a nest in the middle of the salad bowl over the romaine: into this nest place two balls of cream cheese, one colored pink with paprika, the other left white. Make a dressing for the salad as follows: Regular French dressing with celery salt, a little more English mustard, mashed pickled walnuts and hashed nuts in equal quantities. Mix thoroughly.

SALAD LILY.

Hollowed out half lettuce, small balls of cream cheese, red Bar-le-Duc jelly; French dressing.

SALAD SURPRISE.

Asparagus tips, fresh mushrooms, grilled and sliced Julienne; dressing as follows: French dressing, highly seasoned, to which is added chili sauce, English mustard and mushroom catsup, dressing to be made rather thick. Serve on a leaf of lettuce.

SALAD ALMA.

Heart of romaine, grapefruit, orange and alligator pear, Julienne of pimentos.

BOMBE PLAZA.

Bombe of crushed bananas and orange juice, not too sweet; cooked with cream, strained and frozen, in any desirable shape.

ALASKA SURPRISE.

Inside a mould of vanilla ice cream place some brandied peaches with whipped cream; perfume the whipped cream with a little Chartreuse; freeze, unmould, place on a platter: decorate so as to cover all the ice cream with a fairly good layer of beaten whites of eggs, to which has been added a little chocolate powder; place in oven to color: serve at once.

LA PRECIEUSE.

Banana ice cream, moulded in a peach shape; color on one side to represent a peach as near as possible; inside the mould of banana ice cream put a tablespoonful of red Bar-le-Duc jelly.

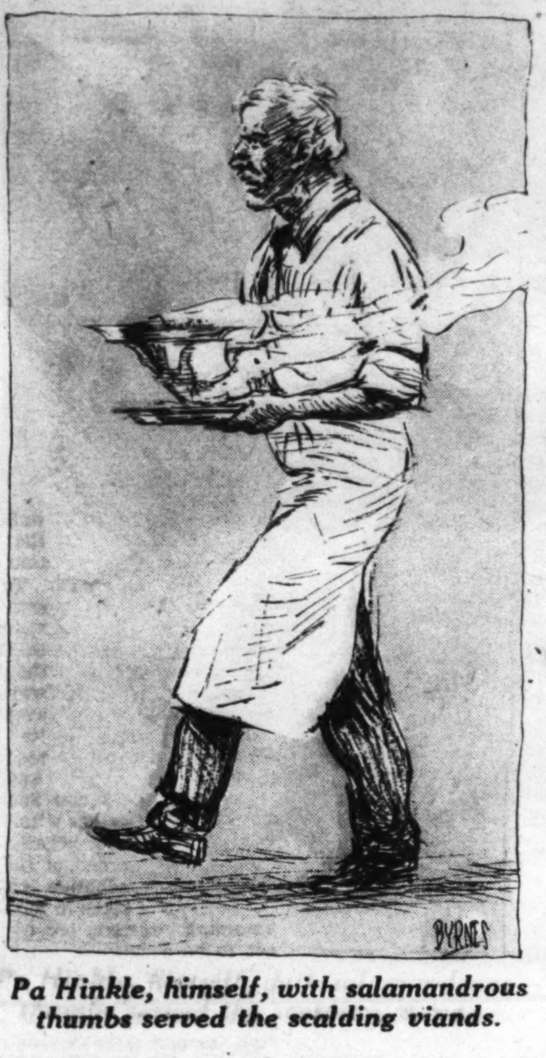
A POOR RULE BY O. HENRY

Second of a series of short stories by the modern master of brief fiction
Complete in this issue

I HAVE always maintained and asserted from time to time, that woman is no mystery; that man can foretell, construe, subdue, comprehend and interpret her. That she is a mystery has been foisted by herself upon credulous mankind. Whether I am right or wrong we shall see. As "Harper's Drawer" used to say in bygone years: "The following good story is told of Miss ——, Mr. ——, Mr. —— and Mr. ——."

We shall have to omit "Bishop X" and "the Rev. ——," for they do not belong.



Pa Hinkle, himself, with salamandrous thumbs served the scalding viands.

In those days Paloma was a new town on the line of the Southern Pacific. A reporter would have called it a "mushroom" town; but it was not. Paloma was, first and last, of the toadstool variety.

The train stopped there at noon for the engine to drink and for the passengers to dine. There was a new yellow-pine hotel, also a wool warehouse, and perhaps three dozen box residences. The rest was composed of tents, cow ponies, "blackwaxy" mud, and mesquite-trees, all bound round by a horizon. Paloma was an about-to-be city. The houses represented faith; the tents hope; the twice-a-day train by which you might leave, creditably sustained the role of charity.

The Parisan Restaurant occupied the muddiest spot in the town while it rained, and the warmest when it shone. It was operated by a citizen known as Old Man Hinkle, who had come out of Indiana to make his fortune in this land of condensed milk and sorghum.

There was a four-room, unpainted, weather-boarded box house, in which the family lived. From the kitchen extended a "shelter" made of poles covered with chaparral brush. Under this was a table and two benches, each 20 feet long, the product of Paloma home carpentry. Here was set forth the roast mutton, the stewed apples, boiled beans, soda-biscuits, puddinorpie and hot coffee of the Parisan menu.

Ma Hinkle and a subordinate known to the ears as "Betty," but denied to the eyesight, presided at the range. Pa Hinkle himself, with salamandrous thumbs, served the scalding viands. During rush hours a Mexican youth, who rolled and smoked cigarettes between courses, aided him in waiting on the guests. As is customary at Parisian banquets, I place the sweets at the end of my wordy menu.

Ileen Hinkle!

The spelling is correct, for I have seen her write it. No doubt she had been named by ear; but she so splendidly bore the orthography that Tom Moore himself (had he seen her) would have indorsed the phonography.

Ileen was the daughter of the house, and the first Lady Cashier to invade the territory south of an east-and-west line drawn through Galveston and Del Rio. She sat on a high stool in a rough pine grandstand —or was it a temple?—under the shelter at the door of the kitchen. There was a barbed-wire protection in front of her, with a little arch, under which you passed your money. Heaven knows why the barbed wire; for every man who dined Parisianly there would have died in her service. Her duties were light; each meal was a dollar; you put it under the arch, and she took it.

I set out with the intent to describe Ileen Hinkle to you. Instead, I must refer you to the volume by Edmund Burke entitled: "A Philosophical Inquiry into the Origin of Our Ideas of the Sublime and Beautiful." It is an exhaustive treatise, dealing first with the primitive conceptions of beauty—roundness and smoothness, I think they are, according to Burke. It is well said. Rotundity is a patent charm; as for smoothness—the more new wrinkles a woman acquires, the smoother she becomes.

Ileen was a strictly vegetable compound, guaranteed under the Pure Ambrosia and Balm-of-Gilead Act of the year of the fall of Adam. She was a fruit-stand blonde—strawberries, peaches, cherries, etc. Her eyes were wide apart, and she possessed the calm that precedes a storm that never comes. But it seems to me that words (at any rate per) are wasted in an effort to describe the beautiful. Like fancy, "It is engendered in the eyes." There are three kinds of beauties—I was foreordained to be homiletic; I can never stick to a story.

The first is the freckle-faced, snub-nosed girl whom you like. The second is Maude Adams. The third is, or are, the ladies in Bouguereau's paintings. Ileen Hinkle was the fourth. She was the Mayoress of Spotless Town. There were a thousand golden apples coming to her as Helen of the Troy laundries.

The Parisian Restaurant was within a radius. Even from beyond its circumference men rode in to Paloma to win her smiles. They got them. One meal—one smile—one dollar. But with all her impartiality, Ileen seemed to favor three of her admirers above the rest. According to the rules of politeness, I will mention myself last.

The first was an artificial product known as Bryan Jacks—a name that had obviously met reverses. Jacks was the outcome of paved cities. He was a small man, made of some material resembling flexible sandstone. His hair was the color of a brick Quaker meeting-house; his eyes were twin cranberries; his mouth was like the aperture under a drop-letters-here sign.

He knew every city from Bangor to San Francisco, thence north to Portland, thence S. 45 E. to a given point in Florida. He had mastered every art, trade, game, business, profession and sport in the world, had been present at, or hurrying on his way to, every head-line event that had ever occurred between oceans since he was 5 years old. You might open the atlas, place your finger at random upon the name of a town, and Jacks would tell you the front names of three prominent citizens before you could close it again. He spoke patronizingly and even disrespectfully of Broadway, Beacon Hill, Michigan, Euclid and Fifth avenues, and the St. Louis Four Courts. Compared with him as a cosmopolite, the Wandering Jew would have seemed a mere hermit. He had learned everything the world could teach him, and he would tell you about it.

I hate to be reminded of Pollock's Course of Time, and so do you; but every time I say Jacks I would think of the poet's description of another poet by the name of G. G. Byron who "Drank early; deeply drank — drank drafts that common millions might have quenched; then died of thirst because there was no more to drink."

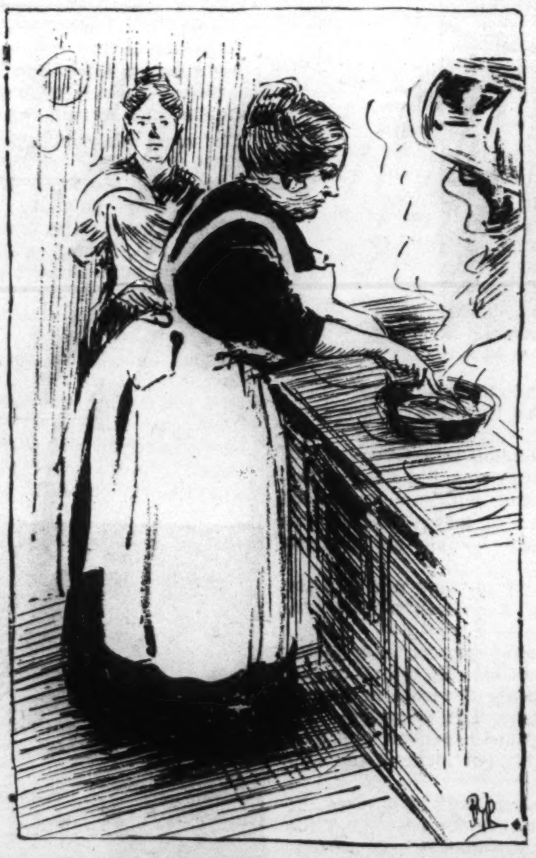
That fitted Jacks, except that, instead of dying, he came to Paloma, which was about the same thing. He was a telegrapher and station and express agent at $75 a month. Why a young man who knew everything and could do everything was content to serve in such an obscure capacity, I never could understand, although he let out a hint once that it was a personal favor to the president and stockholders of the S. P. Ry. Co.

One more line of description, and I turn Jacks over to you. He wore bright blue clothes, yellow shoes and a bow tie made of the same cloth as his shirt.

My rival No. 2 was Bud Cunningham, whose services had been engaged by a ranch near Paloma to assist in compelling refractory cattle to keep within the bounds of decorum and order. Bud was the only cowboy off the stage that I ever saw who looked like one on it. He wore the sombrero, the chaps and the handkerchief tied at the back of his neck.

Twice a week Bud rode in from the Val Verde Ranch to sup at the Parisian Restaurant. He rode a many-high-handed Kentucky horse at a tremendously fast lope, which animal he would rein up so suddenly under the big mesquite at the corner of the brush shelter that his hoofs would plow canals yards long in the loam.

Jacks and I were regular boarders at the restaurant, of course.



Ma Hinkle and a subordinate named "Betty" presided at the range.

The front room of the Hinkle House was as neat a little parlor as there was in the blackwaxy country. It was all willow rocking-chairs, and home-knit tidies, and albums, and conch shells in a row. And a little upright piano in one corner.

Here Jacks and Bud and I—or sometimes one or two of us, according to our good-luck—used to sit of evenings when the tide of trade was over, and "visit" Miss Hinkle.

Ileen was a girl of ideas. She was destined for higher things (if there can be anything higher) than taking in dollars all day through a barbed-wire wicket. She had read and listened and thought. Her looks would have formed a career for a less ambitious girl; but, rising superior to mere beauty, she must establish something in the nature of a salon—the only one in Paloma.

"Don't you think that Shakspeare was a great writer?" she would ask, with such a pretty little knit of her arched brows that the late Ignatius Donnelly, himself, had he seen it, could scarcely have saved his Bacon.

Ileen was of the opinion, also, that Boston is more cultured than Chicago; that Rosa Bonheur was one of the greatest of women painters; that Westerners are more spontaneous and open-hearted than Easterners; that London must be a very foggy city, and that California must be quite lovely in the springtime. And of the many other opinions indicating a keeping up with the world's best thought.

These, however, were but gleaned from hearsay and evidence; Ileen had theories of her own. One, in particular, she disseminated to us untiringly. Flattery she detested. Frankness and honesty of speech and action, she declared, were the chief mental ornaments of man and woman. If ever she could like anyone, it would be for those qualities.

"I'm awfully weary," she said, one evening, when we three musketeers of the mesquite were in the little parlor, "of having compliments on my looks paid to me. I know I'm not beautiful."

(Bud Cunningham told me afterward that it was all he could do to keep from calling her a liar when she said that.)

"I'm only a little Middle-Western girl," went on Ileen, "who just wants to be simple and neat, and tries to help her father make a humble living."

(Old Man Hinkle was shipping a thousand silver dollars a month, clear profit, to a bank in San Antonio.)

Bud twisted around in his chair and bent the rim of his hat, from which he could never be persuaded to separate. He did not know whether she wanted what she said she wanted or what she knew she deserved. Many a wiser man has hesitated at deciding. But decided.

"Why—ah, Miss Ileen, beauty, as you might say, ain't everything. Not sayin' that you haven't your share of good looks, I always admired more than anything else about you the nice, kind way you treat your ma and pa. Anyone what's good to their parents and is a kind of homebody don't specially need to be too pretty."

Ileen gave him one of her sweetest smiles. "Thank you, Mr. Cunningham," she said. "I consider that one of the best compliments I've had in a long time. I'd so much rather hear you say that than to hear you talk about my eyes and hair. I'm glad you believe me when I say I don't like flattery."

Our cue was there for us. Bud had made a good guess. You couldn't lose Jacks. He chimbed in next.

"Sure thing, Miss Ileen," he said; "the good-lookers don't always win out. Now, you ain't bad looking, of course—but that's nix-cum-rous. I knew a girl once in Dubuque with a face like a cocoanut, who could skin the cat twice on a horizontal bar without changing her hands. Now, a girl might have the California peach crop mashed to a marmalade and not be able to do that. I've seen—er—worse lookers than you, Miss Ileen; but what I like about you is the business way you've got of doing things. Cool and wise—that's the winning way for a girl. Mr. Hinkle told me the other day you'd never taken in a lead silver dollar or a plugged one since you've been on the job. Now, that's the stuff for a girl—that's what catches me."

Jacks got his smile, too.

"Thank you, Mr. Jacks," said Ileen. "If you only knew how I appreciate anyone's being candid and not a flatterer! I get so tired of people telling me I'm pretty. I think it is the loveliest thing to have friends who tell you the truth."

Then I thought I saw an expectant look on Ileen's face as she glanced toward me. I had a wild, sudden impulse to dare fate, and tell her of all the beautiful handiwork of the Great Artificer she was the most exquisite—that she was a flawless pearl gleaming pure and serene in a setting of black mud and emerald prairies—that she was—a—a corker; and as for mine, I cared not if she were as cruel as a serpent's tooth to her fond parents, or if she couldn't tell a plugged dollar from a bridle buckle, if I might sing, chant, praise, glorify and worship her peerless and wonderful beauty.

But I refrained. I feared the fate of a flatterer. I had witnessed her delight at the crafty and discreet words ruins, and, on the left, to a small, tumbledown house with ill-fitting shutters.

He was turning in this direction, when he was much surprised to perceive fresh footprints on a border which had been soaked with the recent rain. And he could see that these footprints had been made by a woman's boots, a pair of elegant and dainty boots.

He found more footprints a little farther, on another border which the owner of the boots had crossed, and they led him away from the house, toward a series of clumps of trees where he saw them twice more. Then he lost sight of them for good.

He was standing near a large, half-ruined barn, built against a very tall bank. Its worm-eaten doors seemed merely balanced on their hinges. He went up and looked through a crack in the wood. Inside the windowless barn was in semi-darkness, for but little light came through the openings stopped up with straw, especially as the day was beginning to wane. He was able to distinguish a heap of barrels, broken wine presses, old plows and scrap iron of all kinds.

"This is certainly not where my fair stroller turned her steps," thought Don Luis. "Let's look somewhere else."

Nevertheless, he did not move. He had noticed a noise in the barn.

He listened and heard nothing. But as he wanted to get to the bottom of things, he forced out a couple of planks with his shoulder and stepped in.

The breach which he had thus contrived admitted a little light. He could see enough to make his way between two casks, over some broken window frames, to an empty space on the far side.

His eyes grew accustomed to the darkness as he went on. For all that, he knocked his head against something which he had not perceived, something hanging up above, something rather hard which, when set in motion, swung to and fro with a curious grating sound.

It was too dark to see. Don Luis took an electric lantern from his pocket and pressed the spring.

"Damn it all!" he swore, falling back aghast.

And the next moment he uttered another oath. A second skeleton hung beside the first!

They were both fastened by stout ropes to rings fixed in the rafters of the barn. Their heads dangled from the slipknots. The one against which Perenna had struck was still moving slightly, and the bones clicked together with a grewsome sound.

He dragged forward a rickety table, propped it up as best he could, and climbed onto it to examine the two skeletons more closely. They were turned toward each other, face to face. The first was considerably bigger than the second. They were obviously the skeletons of a man and a woman.

But what perhaps was most impressive in this ghastly spectacle, was the fact that each of the skeletons, though deprived of every rag of clothing, still wore a gold ring, too wide now that the flesh had disappeared, but held, as in hooks, by the bent joints of the fingers.

He slipped off the rings with a shiver of disgust, and found that they were wedding rings. Each bore a date inside, the same date, 12 August, 1887, and two names: "Alfred—Victorine."

"Husband and wife," he murmured. "Is it a double suicide? Or a murder? But how is it possible that the two skeletons have not yet been discovered? Can one conceive that they have been here ever since the death of old Langernault, since the Government has taken possession of the estate and made it impossible for anybody to walk in?"

He paused to reflect.

"Anybody? I don't know about that, considering that I saw footprints in the garden, and that a woman has been there this very day."

The thought of the unknown visitor engrossed him once more, and he got down from the table. In spite of the noise which he had heard, it was hardly to be supposed that she had entered the barn. And, after a few minutes' search, he was about to go out, when there came, from the left, a clash of things falling about and some hoops dropped to the ground not far from where he stood.

They came from above, from a loft likewise crammed with various objects and implements and reached by a ladder. Don Luis placed his electric lantern on a cask in such a way as to send the light right up to the loft. Seeing nothing suspicious, nothing but an arsenal of old-pickaxes, rakes and disused scythes, he attributed what had happened to some animal, to some stray cat; and, to make sure, he walked quickly to the ladder and went up.

Suddenly, at the very moment when he reached the level of the floor, there was a fresh noise, a fresh clatter of things falling; and a form rose from the heap of rubbish with a terrible gesture.

It was swift as lightning. Don Luis saw the great blade of a scythe cleaving the air at the height of his head. Had he hesitated for a second, for the tenth of a second, the awful weapon would have beheaded him. As it was, he just had time to flatten himself against the ladder. The scythe whistled past him, grazing his jacket. He slid down to the floor below.

But he had seen.

He had seen the dreadful face of Gaston Sauverand, and, behind the man of the ebony walking-stick, wan and livid in the rays of the electric light, the distorted features of Florence Levasseur!

CHAPTER IX.

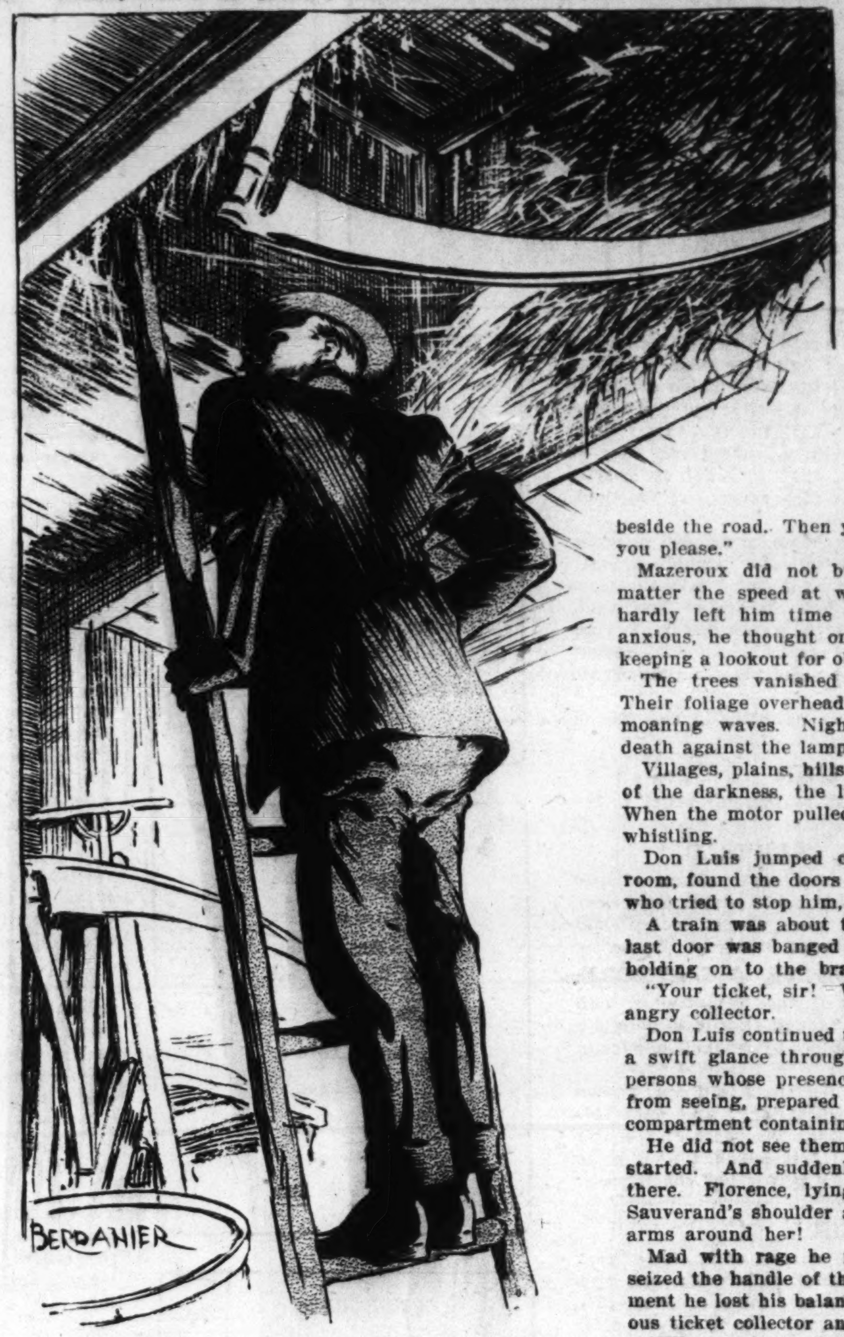
Lupin's Anger.

HE remained for one moment motionless and speechless. Above was a perfect clatter of things being pushed about, as though the besieged were building themselves a barricade. But to the right of the electric rays, diffused daylight entered through an opening that was suddenly exposed; and he saw, in front of this opening, first one form and then another stooping in order to escape over the roofs.

He leveled his revolver and fired, but badly, for he was thinking of Florence and his hand trembled. Three more shots rang out. The bullets rattled against the old scrap iron in the loft. The fifth shot was followed by a cry of pain. Don Luis once more rushed up the ladder.

Slowly making his way through the tangle of farm implements and over some cases of dried rape seed forming a regular rampart, he at last, after bruising and barking his shins, succeeded in reaching the opening, and was greatly surprised, on passing through it, to find himself on level ground. It was the top of the sloping bank against which the barn stood.

He descended the slope at haphazard, to the left of the barn, and passed in front of the building, but saw nobody. He then went up again on the right; and although the flat part was very narrow, he searched it carefully for, in the growing darkness of the twilight, he had every reason to fear renewed attacks from the enemy.



It was swift as lightning. Don Luis saw the great blade of a scythe cleaving the air at the height of his head.

He now became aware of something which he had not perceived before. The bank ran along the top of the wall, which at this spot was quite sixteen feet high. Gaston Sauverand and Florence had, beyond a doubt, escaped this way.

Perenna followed the wall, which was fairly wide, till he came to a lower part, and here he jumped into a plowed field skirting a little wood toward which the fugitives must have run. He started exploring it, but, realizing its denseness, he at once saw that it was waste of time to linger in pursuit.

He therefore returned to the village, while thinking over this, his latest exploit. Once again Florence and her accomplice had tried to get rid of him. Once again Florence figured prominently in this network of criminal plots.

"Oh, the loathsome creature!" he muttered, with a shudder. "How can she have so fair a face, and eyes of such haunting beauty, so grave, sincere, and almost guileless?"

In the church square, outside the inn, Mazeroux, who had returned, was filling the petrol tank of the motor and lighting the lamps. Don Luis saw the Mayor of Damigni crossing the square. He took him aside.

"By the way, Monsieur le Maire, did you ever hear any talk in the district, perhaps two years ago, of the disappearance of a couple 40 or 50 years of age? The husband's name was Alfred"——

"And the wife's Victorine, eh?" the Mayor broke in. "I should think so! The affair created some stir. They lived at Alencon on a small, private income; they disappeared between one day and the next and no one has since discovered what became of them, any more than a little hoard, some 20,000 francs or so, which they had realized the day before by the sale of their house. I remember them well. Dedessuslamare their name was."

"Thank you, Monsieur le Maire," said Perenna, who had learned all that he wanted to know.

The car was ready. A minute after he was rushing toward Alencon with Mazeroux.

"Where are we going, Chief?" asked the sergeant.

"To the station. I have every reason to believe, first, that Sauverand was informed this morning—in what way remains to be seen—of the revelations made last night by Mme. Fauville relating to old Langernault; and, secondly, that he has been prowling around and inside old Langernault's property today for reasons that also remain to be seen. And I presume that he came by train and that he will go back by train."

Perenna's supposition was confirmed without delay. He was told at the railway station that a gentleman and a lady had arrived from Paris at 2 o'clock, that they had hired a trap at the hotel next door, and that, having finished their business, they had gone back a few minutes ago, by the 7:40 express. The description of the lady and gentleman corresponded exactly with that of Florence and Sauverand.

"Off we go!" said Perenna, after consulting the timetable. "We are an hour behind. We may catch up with the scoundrel at Le Mans."

"We'll do that, Chief, and we'll collar him, I swear; him and his lady, since there are two of them."

"There are two of them, as you say. Only"——

"Only what?"

Don Luis waited to reply until they were seated and the engine started, when he said:

"Only, my boy, you will keep your hands off the lady."

"Why should I?"

"Do you know what she is? Have you a warrant against her?"

"No."

"Then shut up."

"But"——

"One word more, Alexandre, and I'll set you down beside the road. Then you can make as many arrests as you please."

Mazeroux did not breathe another word. For that matter the speed at which they at once began to go hardly left him time to raise a protest. Not a little anxious, he thought only of watching the horizon and keeping a lookout for obstacles.

The trees vanished on either side almost unseen. Their foliage overhead made a rhythmical sound as of moaning waves. Night insects dashed themselves to death against the lamps.

Villages, plains, hills; and then, suddenly in the midst of the darkness, the lights of a large town, Le Mans. When the motor pulled up at the station the train was whistling.

Don Luis jumped out, rushed through the waiting room, found the doors shut, jostled the railway officials who tried to stop him, and reached the platform.

A train was about to start on the farther line. The last door was banged to. He ran along the carriages, holding on to the brass rails.

"Your ticket, sir! Where's your ticket?" shouted an angry collector.

Don Luis continued to fly along the footboards, giving a swift glance through the panes, thrusting aside the persons whose presence at the windows prevented him from seeing, prepared at any moment to burst into the compartment containing the two accomplices.

He did not see them in the end carriages. The train started. And suddenly he gave a shout; they were there. Florence, lying on the seat with her head on Sauverand's shoulder and he leaning over her, with his arms around her!

Mad with rage he flung back the bottom latch and seized the handle of the carriage door. At the same moment he lost his balance and was pulled off by the furious ticket collector and by Mazeroux, who bellowed:

"Why, you're mad, Chief! you'll kill yourself!"

"Let go, you ass!" roared Don Luis. "It's they! Let me be, can't you!"

The carriages filed past. He tried to jump on to another footboard. But the two men were clinging to him, some railway porters came to their assistance, the station master ran up. The train moved out of the station.

"Idiots!" he shouted. "Boobies! Pack of asses that you are, couldn't you leave me alone? Oh, I swear to heaven"——

With a blow on his left fist he knocked the ticket collector down; with a blow of his right he sent Mazeroux spinning; and shaking off the porters and the stationmaster he rushed along the platform to the luggage room, where he took flying leaps over several batches of trunks, packing cases and portmanteaux.

"Oh, the perfect fool!" he mumbled, on seeing that Mazeroux had let the power down in the car. "Trust him, if there's any blunder going!"

Don Luis had driven his car at a fine rate during the day, but that night the pace became vertiginous. A very meteor flashed through the suburbs of Le Mans and hurled itself along the highroad. Perenna had but one thought in his head; to reach the next station, which was Chartres, before the two accomplices, and to fly at Sauverand's throat.

"Her lover! Her lover!" he muttered, gnashing his teeth. "Why, of course, that explains everything! They have combined against their accomplice, Marie Fauville; and it is she alone, poor devil, who will pay for the horrible series of crimes!"

To the hum of the engine and the sighing of the trees which bent down at the approach, he murmured incoherent words. The recollection of the two lovers clasped in each other's arms made him cry aloud with jealousy. He wanted to be revenged. For the first time in his life, the longing, the feverish craving to kill set his brain boiling.

"Hang it all!" he growled suddenly. "The engine's misfiring! Mazeroux! Mazeroux!"

"What, Chief! Did you know that I was here?" exclaimed Mazeroux, emerging from the shadow in which he sat hidden.

"You jackass! Do you think that the first idiot who comes along can hang on to the footboard of my car without my knowing it? Tell me, where did you buy your petrol?"

"At the grocer's."

of Bud and Jacks. No! Miss Hinkle was not one to be beguiled by the plated-silver tongue of a flatterer. So I joined the ranks of the candid and honest. At once I became mendacious and didactic

"In all ages, Miss Hinkle," said I, "'in spite of the poetry and romance of each, intellect in woman has been admired more than beauty. Even in Cleopatra, herself, men found more charm in her queenly mind than in her looks."

"Well, I should think so!" said Ileen. "I've seen pictures of her that weren't so much. She had an awfully long nose."

"If I may say so," I went on, "you remind me of Cleopatra, Miss Ileen."

"Why, my nose isn't so long!" said she, opening her eyes wide and touching that comely feature with a dimpled forefinger.

"Why—er—I mean," said I—"I mean as to mental endowments."

"Thank every one of you," she said, very, very sweetly, "for being so frank and honest with me. That's the way I want you to be always. Just tell me plainly and truthfully what you think, and we'll all be the best friends in the world. And now, because you've been so good to me, and understand so well how I dislike people who do nothing but pay me exaggerated compliments, I'll sing and play a little for you."

Of course, we expressed our thanks and joy; but we would have been better pleased if Ileen had remained in her low rocking-chair face to face with us and let us gaze upon her. For she was no Adelina Patti—not even on the farewellest of the diva's farewell tours. She had a cooing little voice like that of a turtle-dove that could almost fill the parlor when the windows and doors were closed, and Betty was not rattling the lids of the stove in the kitchen. She had a gamut that I estimate at about eight inches on the piano; and her runs and trills sounded like the clothes bubbling in your grandmother's iron wash-pot. Believe that she must have been beautiful when I tell you that it sounded like music to us.

Ileen's musical taste was catholic. She would sing through a pile of sheet music on the left-hand top of the piano, laying each slaughtered composition on the right-hand top. The next evening she would sing from right to left. Her favorites were Mendelssohn. and Moody and Sankey. By request she always wound up with "Sweet Violets" and "When the Leaves Begin to Turn."

When we left at 10 o'clock the three of us would go down to Jacks' little wooden station and sit on the platform, swinging our feet and trying to pump one another for clews as to which way Miss Ileen's inclinations seemed to lean. That is the way of rivals—they do not avoid and glower at one another; they convene and converse and construe—striving by the art politic to estimate the strength of the enemy.

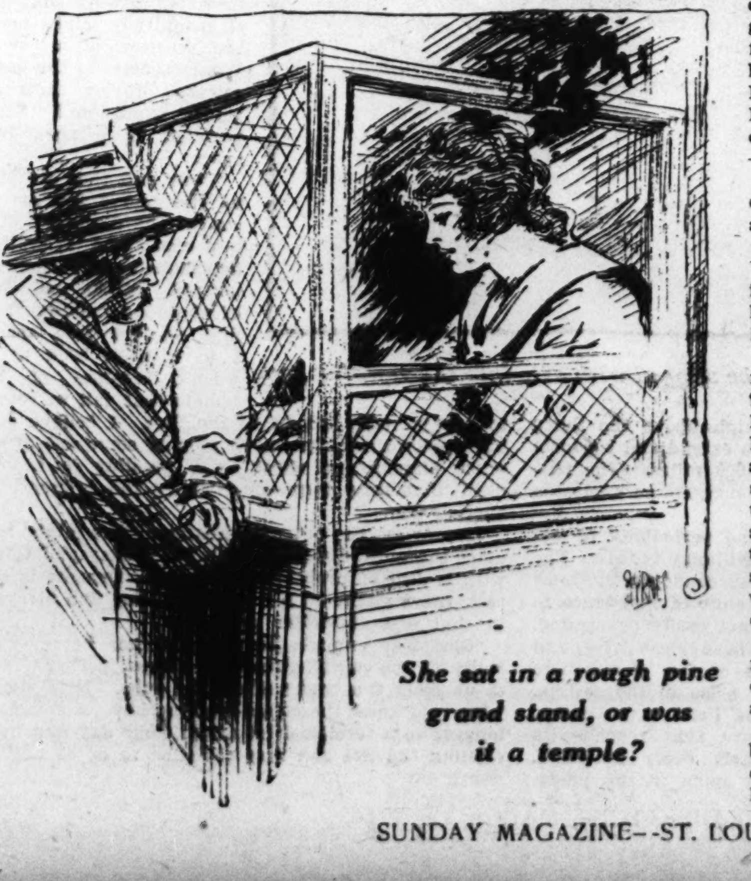
One day there came a dark horse to Paloma, a young lawyer, who at once flaunted his shingle and himself spectacularly upon the town. His name was C. Vincent Vesey. You could see at a glance that he was a recent graduate of a southwestern law school. His Prince Albert coat, light striped trousers, broad-brimmed soft black hat, and narrow white muslin bow tie proclaimed that more loudly than any diploma could. Vesey was a compound of Daniel Webster, Lord Chesterfield, Beau Brummell and Little Jack Horner. His coming boomed Paloma. The next day after he arrived an addition to the town was surveyed and laid off in lots.

Of course, Vesey, to further his professional fortunes, must mingle with the citizenry and outliers of Paloma. And, as well as with the soldier men, he was bound to seek popularity with the gay dogs of the place. So Jacks and Budd Cunningham and I came to be honored by his acquaintance.

The doctrine of predestination would have been discredited had not Vesey seen Ileen Hinkle and become fourth in the tourney. Magnificently, he boarded at the yellow pine hotel instead of at the Parisian Restaurant; but he came to be a formidable visitor in the Hinkle parlor. His competition reduced Bud to an inspired increase of profanity, drove Jacks to an outburst of slang so weird that it sounded more horrible than the most trenchant of Bud's imprecations, and made me dumb with gloom.

For Vesey had the rhetoric. Words flowed from him like oil from a gusher. Hyperbole, compliment, praise, appreciation, honeyed gallantry, golden opinions, eulogy and unveiled panegyric vied with one another for pre-eminence in his speech. We had small hopes that Ileen could resist his oratory and Prince Albert.

But a day came that gave us courage.



She sat in a rough pine grand stand, or was it a temple?

About dusk one evening I was sitting on the little gallery in front of the Hinkle parlor, waiting for Ileen to come, when I heard voices inside. She had come into the room with her father, and Old Man Hinkle began to talk to her. I had observed before that he was a shrewd man, and not unphilosophic.

"Ily," said he, "I notice there's three or four young fellers that have been callin' to see you regular for quite a while. Is there any one of 'em you like better than another?"

"Why, pa," she answered. "I like all of 'em very well. I think Mr. Cunningham and Mr. Jacks and Mr. Harris are very nice young men. They are so frank and honest in everything they say to me. I haven't known Mr. Vesey very long, but I think he's a very nice young man, he's so frank and honest in everything he says to me."

"Now, that's what I'm gittin' at," says old Hinkle. "You've always been sayin' you like people what tell the truth and don't go humbuggin' you with compliments and bogus talk. Now, suppose you make a test of these fellers, and see which one of 'em will talk the straightest to you."

"But how'll I do it, pa?"

"I'll tell you how. You know you sing a little bit, Ily; you took music lessons nearly two years in Logansport. It wasn't long, but it was all we could afford then. And your teacher said you didn't have any voice, and it was a waste of money to keep on. Now, suppose you ask the fellers what they think of your singin', and see what each one of 'em tells you. The man that'll tell you the truth about it'll have a mighty lot of nerve, and 'll do to tie to. What do you think of the plan?"

"All right, pa," said Ileen. "I think it's a good idea. I'll try it."

Ileen and Mr. Hinkle went out of the room through the inside doors. Unobserved, I hurried down to the station. Jacks was at his telegraph table waiting for 8 o'clock to come. It was Bud's night in town, and when he rode in I repeated the conversation to them both. I was loyal to my rivals, as all true admirers of all Ileens should be.

Simultaneously the three of us were smitten by an uplifting thought. Surely this test would eliminate Vesey from the contest. He, with his unctuous flattery, would be driven from the lists. Well we remembered Ileen's love of frankness and honesty—how she treasured truth and candor above vain compliment and blandishment.

Linking arms, we did a grotesque dance of joy up and down the platform, singing "Muldoon Was a Solid Man" at the top of our voices.

That evening four of the willow rocking chairs were filled besides the lucky one that sustained the trim figure of Miss Hinkle. Three of us awaited with suppressed excitement the application of the test. It was tried on Bud first.

"Mr. Cunningham," said Ileen, with her dazzling smile, after she had sung "When the Leaves Begin to Turn," "what do you really think of my voice? Frankly and honestly, now, as you know I want you to always be toward me."

Bud squirmed in his chair at his chance to show the sincerity that he knew was required of him.

"Tell you the truth, Miss Ileen," he said, earnestly, "you ain't got much more voice than a weasel—just a little squeak, you know. Of course, we all like to hear you sing, for it's kind of sweet and soothin' after all, and you look most as mighty well sittin' on the piano stool as you do faced around. But as for real singin'—I reckon you couldn't call it that."

I looked closely at Ileen to see if Bud had overdone his frankness, but her pleased smile and sweetly spoken thanks assured me that we were on the right track.

"And what do you think, Mr. Jacks?" she asked next.

"Take it from me," said Jacks, "you ain't in the prima donna class. I've heard 'em warble in every city in the United States; and I tell you your vocal output don't go. Otherwise, you've got the grand opera bunch sent to the soap factory—in looks, I mean; for the high screechers generally look like Mary Ann on her Thursday out. But nix for the gargle work. Your epiglottis ain't a real side-stepper—its footwork ain't good."

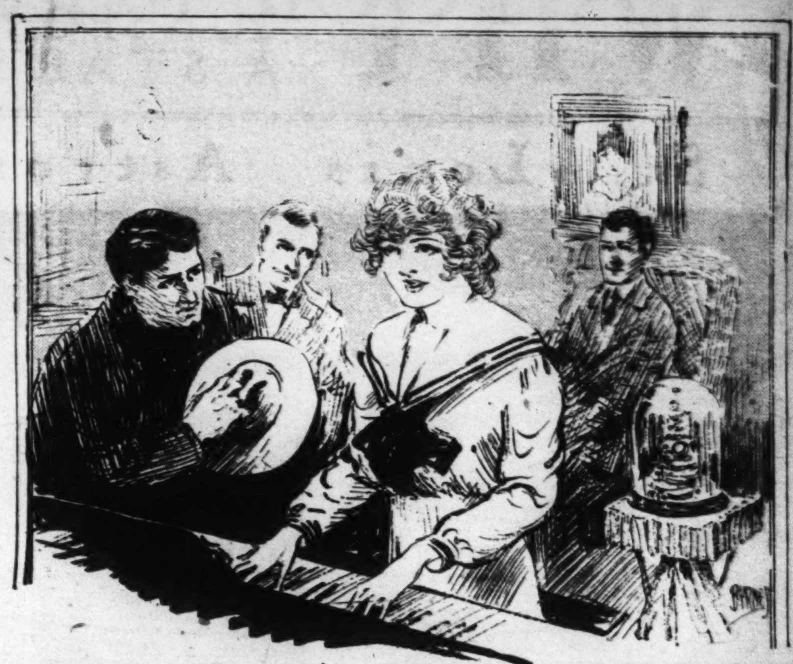
With a merry laugh at Jacks' criticisms, Ileen looked inquiringly at me.

I admit that I faltered a little. Was there not such a thing as being too frank? Perhaps I even hedged a little in my verdict; but I stayed with the critics.

"I am not skilled in scientific music, Miss Ileen," I said, "but frankly, I cannot praise very highly the singing voice that Nature has given you. It has long been a favorite comparison that a great singer sings like a bird. Well, there are birds and birds. I would say that your voice reminds me of the thrush's—throaty and not strong, nor of much compass or variety—but still—er—sweet—in—er—its—way, and—er"——

"Thank you, Mr. Harris," interrupted Miss Hinkle. "I knew I could depend upon your frankness and honesty."

And then C. Vincent Vesey drew back one sleeve from his snowy cuff, and the water came down at Lodore.



She must have been beautiful when I tell you that it sounded like music to us.

My memory cannot do justice to his masterly tribute to that priceless, God-given treasure—Miss Hinkle's voice. He raved over it in terms that, if they had been addressed to the morning stars when they sang together, would have made that stellar choir explode in a meteoric shower of flaming self-satisfaction.

He marshalled on his white finger-tips the grand opera stars of all the continents, from Jenny Lind to Emma Abbott, only to deprecate their endowments. He spoke of larynxes, of chest notes, of phrasing, arpeggios, and other strange paraphernalia of the throaty art. He admitted, as though driven to a corner, that Jenny Lind had a note or two in the high register that Miss Hinkle had not yet acquired—but—"!!!"—that was a mere matter of practice and training.

And, as a peroration, he predicted—solemnly predicted—a career in vocal art for the "coming star of the Southwest—and one of which grand old Texas may well be proud," hitherto unsurpassed in the annals of musical history.

When we left at 10, Ileen gave each of us her usual warm, cordial handshake, entrancing smile, and invitation to call again. I could not see that one was favored above or below another—but three of us knew—we knew.

We knew that frankness and honesty had won, and that the rivals now numbered three instead of four.

Down at the station Jacks brought out a pint bottle of the proper stuff, and we celebrated the downfall of a blatant interloper.

Four days went by without anything happening worthy of recount.

On the fifth, Jacks and I, entering the brush arbor for our supper, saw the Mexican youth, instead of a divinity in a spotless waist and a navy-blue skirt, taking in the dollars through the barbed-wire wicket.

We rushed into the kitchen, meeting Pa Hinkle coming out with two cups of hot coffee in his hands.

"Where's Ileen," we asked, in recitative.

Pa Hinkle was a kindly man. "Well, gents," said he, "it was a sudden notion she took; but I've got the money, and I let her have her way. She's gone to a corn—a conservatory in Boston for four years for to have her voice cultivated. Now, excuse me to pass, gents, for this coffee's hot, and my thumbs is tender."

That night there were four instead of three of us sitting on the station platform and swinging our feet. C. Vincent Vesey was one of us. We discussed things while dogs barked at the moon that rose, as big as a five-cent piece or a flour barrel, over the chaparal.

And what we discussed was whether it is better to lie to a woman or to tell her the truth.

And as all of us were young then, we did not come to a decision. THE END.

SPOTS BEFORE THE EYES

THE prevalence of this condition has given rise to a great many curious ideas. Almost everyone either sees fixed or floating spots at times, or hears some friend complain of these conditions, so that it is not strange that many popular misconceptions have arisen. The commonest form of floating spots are those which are known by the name of muscae volitantes, an old name which indicates how long the condition has been observed. These are tiny transparent chains, or strings, which are seen especially on a white or brightly illuminated field. These spots are probably caused by the remains in the fluid part of the eye of certain cells which should have been completely absorbed in the development of the eye. They never lead to impairment of vision, and, as before stated, are perfectly transparent. Other floating spots are due to cobweb-like masses of inflammatory material which are thrown out into the fluid of the eye by some low-grade inflammation. These spots usually obscure the vision, which is their great point of difference from the former ones. It is, of course, very important to find out in any case whether the spots are due to inflammation or not, and this can only be done by a skilled observer. It is a prevalent idea that the wearing of a dotted veil may leave permanent spots in the field of a vision. While the dotted veil may be a source of strain by causing the wearer to pull on the eye muscles in order to avoid the obstruction of vision, it certainly is not the case that the dots, or any other object seen, can be permanently protographed on the nerve tissues of the eye. There is only one exception to this statement. Many people who have carelessly looked too much at the sun, generally in observing the eclipse, have actually produced a slight inflammatory change in the retina, so that there is always a blurry spot wherever they look. But it is doubtful if any light less brilliant than the sun can produce a permanent spot, and certainly a dark object cannot do so.—Journal of the American Medical Association.

THE TEETH of THE TIGER

New Adventures of Arsene Lupin

By MAURICE LeBLANC

CHAPTER VIII. (Continued.)

WHEN the first moment of stupefaction was over, the Deputy Chief took the letter. His orders were not to read it and not to let anyone else read it.

Here is the letter, published by the newspapers, which also published the declarations of the experts certifying that the handwriting was Hippolyte Fauville's:

"I have seen him! You understand, don't you, my dear friend. I have seen him! He was walking along a path in the Bois, with his coat collar turned up and his hat pulled over his ears. I don't think that he saw me. It was almost dark. But I knew him at once. I knew the silver handle of his ebony stick. It was he beyond a doubt, the scoundrel!

"So he is in Paris, in spite of his promise. Gaston Sauverand is in Paris! Do you understand the terrible significance of that fact? If he is in Paris, it means that he intends to act. If he is in Paris, it means certain death to me. Oh, the harm which I shall have suffered at that man's hands! He has already robbed me of my happiness; and now he wants my life. I am terrified."

So Fauville knew that the man with the ebony walking-stick, that Gaston Sauverand, was designing to kill him. Fauville declared it most positively, by evidence written in his own hand; and the letter, moreover, corroborating the words that had escaped Gaston Sauverand at his arrest, showed that the two men had at one time had relations with each other, that they were no longer friends, and that Gaston Sauverand had promised never to come to Paris.

A little light was therefore being shed on the darkness of the Mornington case. But, on the other hand, how inconceivable was the mystery of that letter found on the table in the workroom!

Five men had kept watch, five of the smartest men obtainable; and yet, on that night, as on the night of the fifteenth of April, an unknown hand had delivered the letter in a room with barricaded doors and windows, without their hearing a sound or discovering any signs that the fastenings of the doors or windows had been tampered with.

The Prefect of Police, greatly impressed by the first two miracles, had determined to see the next one for himself, and was present in person on the third night.

He came accompanied by several inspectors, whom he left in the garden, in the passage, and in the attic on the upper story. He himself took up his post on the ground floor with Weber, Mazeroux and Don Luis Perenna.

Their expectations were disappointed; and this was M. Desmalions' fault. In spite of the express opinion of Don Luis, who deprecated the experiment as useless, the Prefect had decided not to turn off the electric light, so that he might see if the light would prevent the miracle. Under these conditions no letter could appear, and no letter did appear. The miracle, whether a conjuring trick or a criminal's device, needed the kindly aid of the darkness.

On the fifteenth of May the wait was renewed. This time the light was put out, but the Prefect of Police kept his hand on the electric switch. Ten times, 20 times he unexpectedly turned on the light. There was nothing on the table. What had aroused his attention was the creaking of a piece of furniture or a movement made by one of the men with him.

Suddenly they all uttered an exclamation. Something unusual, a rustling noise, had interrupted the silence.

M. Desmalions at once switched on the light. He gave a cry. A letter lay not on the table, but beside it, on the floor, on the carpet.

Mazeroux made the sign of the cross. The inspectors were as pale as death.

M. Desmalions looked at Don Luis, who nodded his head without a word.

They inspected the condition of the locks and bolts. Nothing had moved.

That day again the contents of the letter made some amends for the really extraordinary manner of its delivery. It completely dispelled all the doubts that still enshrouded the double murder on the Boulevard Suchet. Again signed by the engineer, written throughout by himself, on the eighth of February, with no visible address, it said:

"No, my dear friend, I will not allow myself to be killed like a sheep led to the slaughter. I shall defend myself, I shall fight to the last moment. Things have changed lately. I have proofs now, undeniable proofs. I possess letters that have passed between them. And I know that they still love each other as they did at the start, that they want to marry, and that they will let nothing stand in their way. It is written, understand what I say, it is written in Marie's own hand: 'Have patience, my dear Gaston. My courage increases day by day. So much the worse for him who stands between us. He shall disappear.'

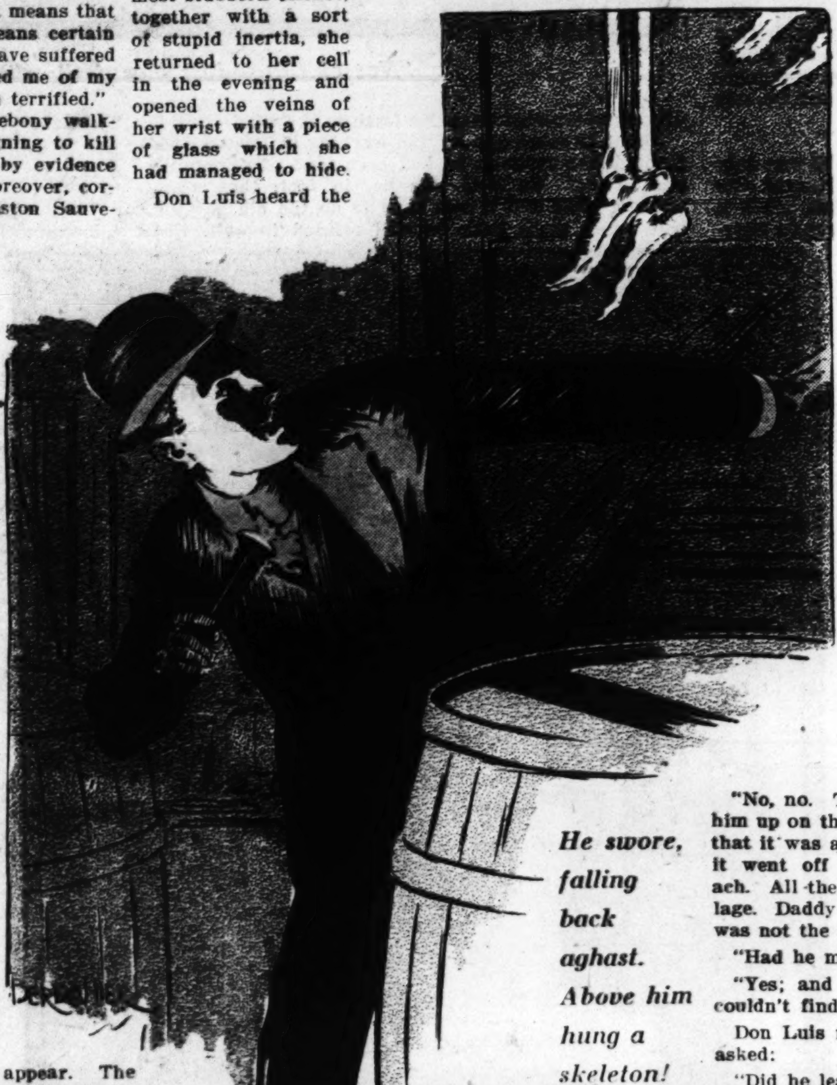
"My dear friend, if I succumb in the struggle you will find those letters (and all the evidence which I have collected against the wretched creature) in the safe hidden behind the small glass case: Then revenge me. Au revoir. Perhaps good-by."

Thus ran the third missive. Hippolyte Fauville from his grave named and accused his guilty wife. From his grave he supplied the solution to the riddle and explained the reason why the crimes had been committed: Marie Fauville and Gaston Sauverand were lovers.

Certainly they knew of the existence of Cosmo Mornington's will, for they had begun by doing away with Cosmo Mornington; and their eagerness to come into the enormous fortune had hastened the catastrophe. But the first idea of the murder rose from an older and deep-rooted passion.

One problem remained to be solved: Who was the unknown correspondent to whom Hippolyte Fauville had bequeathed the task of avenging his murder, and who, instead of simply handing over the letters to the police, was exercising his ingenuity to deliver them by means of the most Machiavellian contrivances?

To all questions Marie Fauville replied in the most unexpected manner, though it was one that fully accorded with her threats. A week later, after a long cross-examination at which she was pressed for the name of her husband's old friend and at which she maintained the most stubborn silence, together with a sort of stupid inertia, she returned to her cell in the evening and opened the veins of her wrist with a piece of glass which she had managed to hide.



He swore, falling back aghast. Above him hung a skeleton!

Don Luis heard the news from Mazeroux, who came to tell him of it before 8 o'clock the next morning, just as he was getting out of bed. The Sergeant had a traveling bag in his hand and was on his way to catch a train.

Don Luis was greatly upset.

"Is she dead?" he exclaimed.

"No. It seems that she has had one more let-off. But what's the good?"

"She'll do it again, of course. She's set her mind upon it. And, one day or another"——

"Did she volunteer no confession, this time either, before making the attempt on her life?"

"No. She wrote a few words on a scrap of paper, saying that, on thinking it over, she advised us to ask a certain M. Langernault about the mysterious letters. He was the only friend that she had known her husband to possess, or at any rate the only one whom he would have called, 'My dear fellow,' or, 'My dear friend.' This M. Langernault could do no more than prove her innocence and explain the terrible misunderstanding of which she was the victim."

"But," said Don Luis, "if there is anyone to prove her innocence, why does she begin by opening her veins?"

"'She doesn't care,' she says. Her life is done for; and what she wants is rest and death."

"Rest? Rest? There are other ways in which she can find it besides in death. If the discovery of the truth is to spell her safety, perhaps the truth is not impossible to discover."

"What are you saying, Chief? Have you guessed anything? Are you beginning to understand?"

"Yes, very vaguely, but, all the same, the really unnatural accuracy of those letters just seems to be a sign"——

He reflected for a moment and continued:

"Have they re-examined the erased addresses of the three letters?"

"Yes, and they managed to make out the name of Langernault."

"Where does this Langernault live?"

"According to Mme. Fauville, at the village of Damigni, in the Orme."

"Have they deciphered the word Damigni on one of the letters"

"No, but they have the name of the nearest town."

"What town is that?"

"Alencon."

"And is that where you're going?"

"Yes, the Prefect of Police told me to go straightaway. I shall take the train at the Invalides."

"You mean you will come with me in my motor."

"Eh?"

"We will both of us go, my lad. I want to be doing something: the atmosphere of this house is deadly for me."

Half an hour later they were flying along the Versailles road. Perenna himself was driving his open car. They reached Alencon in time for lunch. When they had done, they went to the chief postoffice. Nobody knew the name of Langernault there. Besides, Damigni had its own postoffice, though the presumption was that M. Langernault had his letters addressed poste restante at Alencon.

Don Luis and Mazeroux went on to the village of Damigni. Here again the Postmaster knew no one of the name of Langernault; and this in spite of the fact that Damigni contained only about a thousand inhabitants.

"Let's go and call on the Mayor," said Perenna.

At the Mayor's Mazeroux stated who he was and mentioned the object of his visit. The Mayor nodded his head.

"Old Langernault? I should think so. A decent fellow; used to run a business in the town."

"And accustomed, I suppose, to fetch his letters at Alencon postoffice?"

"That's it; every day, for the sake of the walk."

"And his house?"

"Is at the end of the village. You passed it as you came along."

"Can we see it?"

"Well, of course * * * only"——

"Perhaps he's not at home?"

"Certainly not! The poor, dear man hasn't even set foot in the house since he left it the last time, four years ago!"

"How is that?"

"Why, he's been dead these four years!"

Don Luis and Mazeroux exchanged a glance of amazement.

"So he's dead?" said Don Luis.

"Yes, a gunshot."

"What's that!" cried Perenna. "Was he murdered?"

"No, no. They thought so at first, when they picked him up on the floor of his room; but the inquest proved that it was an accident. He was cleaning his gun, and it went off and sent a load of shot into his stomach. All the same, we thought it very queer in the village. Daddy Langernault, an old hunter before the Lord, was not the man to commit an act of carelessness."

"Had he money?"

"Yes; and that's just what clinched the matter; they couldn't find a penny ot it!"

Don Luis remained thinking for some time and then asked:

"Did he leave any children, any relations of the same name?"

"Nobody, not even a cousin. The proof is that his property—it's called the Old Castle, because of the ruins on it—has reverted to the State. The authorities have had the doors of the house sealed up, and locked the gate of the park. They are waiting for the legal period to expire in order to take possession."

"And don't sightseers go walking in the park, in spite of the walls?"

"Not they. In the first place, the walls are very high. And then—and then the Old Castle has had a bad reputation in the neighborhood ever since I can remember. There has always been a talk of ghosts; a pack of silly tales. But still"——

Perenna and his companion could not get over their surprise.

"This is a funny affair," exclaimed Don Luis, when they had left the Mayor's. "Here we have Fauville writing his letters to a dead man—and to a dead man, by the way, who looks to me very much as if he had been murdered."

"Someone must have intercepted the letters."

"Obviously. But that does not do away with the fact that he wrote them to a dead man and made his confidences to a dead man and told of his wife's criminal intentions."

Mazeroux was silent. He, too, seemed greatly perplexed.

They spent part of the afternoon in asking about old Langernault's habits, hoping to receive some useful clew from the people who had known him. But their efforts led to nothing.

At 6 o'clock, as they were about to start, Don Luis found that the car had run out of petrol, and sent Mazeroux in a trap to the outskirts of Alencon to fetch some. He employed the delay in going to look at the Old Castle outside the village.

He had to follow a hedged road leading to an open space, planted with lime trees, where a massive wooden gate stood in the middle of a wall. The gate was locked. Don Luis walked along the wall, which was, in fact, very high and presented no opening. Nevertheless, he managed to climb over by means of the branches of a tree.

The park consisted of unkept lawns, overgrown with large wild flowers, and grass-covered avenues leading on the right to a distant mound, thickly dotted with Diagrammatic explanation of Father Brennan's theory, showing how gases accumulate beneath the sun's photosphere pushing it out in spots until they break through.

Father Brennan advances theory that solar body is surrounded by a luminous shell under which gases accumulate until they explode, tearing out holes many times bigger than our whole earth. :: :: ::

THINK of a sudden fiery eruption belching forth from the center of the earth and tearing from the American Continent the entire State of Texas, dissolving it instantly into flaming gas and smoke to be puffed, like a mighty breath from the mouth of a gigantic monster, a thousand miles in the sky! Impossible of conception, isn't it?

But such an eruption would be insignificant compared with one of a similar nature effacing the entire American Continent. Yet right in our solar system—in fact on the face of the Sun—such cataclysms are a chronic ailment and so gigantic in their nature that a dozen earths might slip with amazing ease and quite unnoticed into the resultant, yawning gap.

Now is the maximum period of Sun spots.

And we mortals look upon the ancient solar disc through smoked glass, see these storm-like eruptions and dare pronounce them spots! They have mystified astronomers for a hundred odd years. What are they? What is the underlying cause and why are they periodic?

These questions, which have set astronomers theorizing for scores of years, are answered by Rev. Martin S. Brennan, astronomer priest of St. Louis, in a new and amazingly simple theory, which is popularly and exclusively presented for the first time in the Sunday Post-Dispatch Magazine. In giving the underlying law of sun spots, Father Brennan at once reveals why some of the fixed stars are variable in their brilliancy. To quote the priest:

"The light of the Sun is variable, making its changes through a period of 11 years. Every star—for stars are suns similar to ours—if carefully examined, might be found to vary in its light-giving function. The variations of some of these stars, or suns, are so keenly defined as to challenge investigation. These variations, as in the case of old Sol, are periodic. Now what is the cause of this periodicity?

"As an instance, Mira in the Whale—an equatorial constellation—for a half month shines as a star of the second magnitude, then fades away for three months, going down to the eleventh magnitude, impossible of detection by the unaided eye. After five months it revives. Three more months and it is again in its full glory. Megrez in the Great Bear has been fading for more than 100 years. In fact, the sky is full of such variable wonders. It is the nature of suns, an underlying law.

"What is the reason of this variableness which extends even to our Sun? Sun spots. That is the certain answer. The size and number of sun spots must, naturally enough, diminish proportionately the light-giving quality of the Sun. But what has puzzled us most is the necessity for sun spots. They must be necessary or they would not be there.

"They are necessary. They are the safety valves of suns, preventing an explosion of the entire mass. They are also creative and are, no doubt, responsible for comets, meteors and even planets, although I add the last in fear; for it is a variation of the nebular hypothesis of creation and any statement along these lines is most likely to be misconstrued. Astronomers, you know, are great critics.

"The Sun, apparently, is a dark body surrounded by an outer shell called the photosphere. It is the photosphere that is presented to us. In this photosphere spots occur and along the two sides of the solar equator exclusively. Great flames are hurled from the sides of the spots high above the Sun's disc. Some have been known to extend and separate from the Sun's surface at 200,000 miles. The phenomenon of a forming sun spot suggests an explosion from beneath.

"Now my theory for cause and periodicity of sun spots and variation in stellar brilliancy is this: The photosphere or luminous shell, surrounding the solar body as a mass has a vast amount of resistance to inward pressure. It is a wall not easily penetrated. Beneath accumulate gases. These gases rise and press against the inner walls of the photosphere identically as smoke and heat arise to the ceiling. Year after year the gas, finding little or no outlet, forms an accumulative pressure that reaches its maximum strength approximately every 11 years. As this time approaches weak spots in the photosphere give way and we have an increasing and decreasing number of spots as the maximum period advances and wanes.

"The reason for spots appearing on either side of the equator is obvious enough. The centrifugal force of the gas whirling with the rotation of the Sun would cast it to the equatorial center. You might expect the gas to perforate the true center of the equator and so it would but for the fact the photosphere itself must be thicker at the true center from the same centrifugal force. Consequently the nearest weak points are on either side of the solar equator. Here the sun spots occur.

"What law applies to the Sun must, obviously, apply to the stars, since stars are suns, and cause their variations in brilliancy. I suspect also that there exists a similar cause for the changeable appearance in the gaseous envelope of Jupiter, the planet. Light variations in stars and their twinkling appearance could also be caused, to some degree, by undulations in their photospheres, but I am merely suggesting this.

"Naturally enough I can look for a deal of criticism in expounding a sun spot theory. It has been a vexatious subject. But there was never a theory advanced without a multitude of objections following. Later these very objections turn out to be the supporting bulwarks of the original statements.

"The book of Genesis seemed to contradict the nebular theory of creation in the statement that the earth was completed before the Sun was made, now we know that Genesis was correct and so was the nebular hypothesis; for it required ages before the light of the Sun burst upon the earth through lifting masses of gas and clouds. Prior to that time there was no Sun so far as the earth was concerned. The case might be the same now with the planet Venus which is entirely hidden by masses of clouds. If there be people on Venus they have never seen the Sun.

"I am not alone in the belief that comets and meteors are fragments of the Sun, explosively detached and hurled into space. They become magnetized and are attracted into orbits and held through attraction and repulsion.

"In regard to variable stars I might add that the frequency of their maximum periods is greater or less according to the rapidity with which gas accumulates and also according to the thickness and resistance of the photosphere of the particular star in mind.

"When an astronomer thinks of the Sun he will invariably fall to theorizing; for Old Sol is the father and mother of our planetary system. Most of us do not think of the creative power of the Sun as an existent function; but who can say the Sun has not just as much power today as in those remote times recorded in Genesis? Every sun spot of magnitude might mean the creation of a comet. What becomes of the gases released during these gigantic explosions? Some part of it escapes into space.

"Now and then we pick up the papers and see recorded the discovery of a new comet and its orbit is determined and periodicity noticed. Might not some of these be making their first venture into space? I have often been asked what becomes of the comets that fail to return to pay periodic tribute to the Sun. I believe they have missed calculations in looping some one of the outer planets and shoot away possibly to wander until that time they come under the influence of another sun.

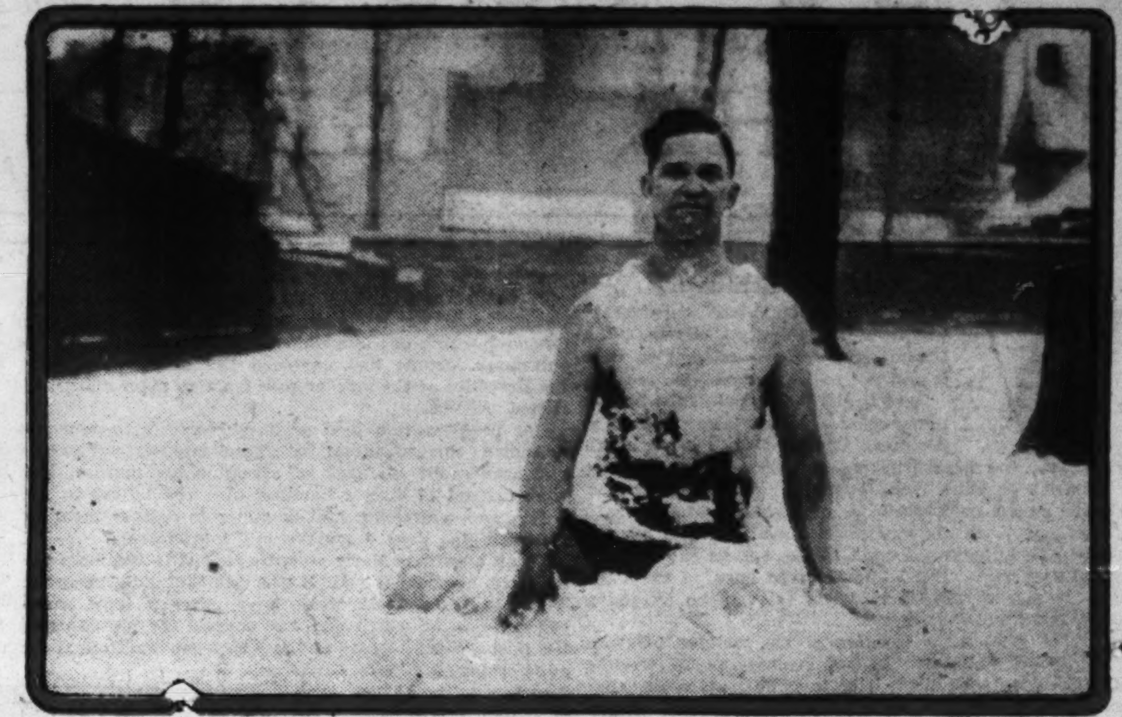
"So we see the unity of creation. You might look upon the most distant star in the galaxy and think, with a deal of probability that your thought is correct, there might be a fragment of our Sun straying in that distant stellar orbit.

"Obviously enough, the thought may be reversed. Many of the newly discovered comets perhaps come to us from the bonds of distant suns. It is simple when you know the comet-catching law. A comet belonging to a foreign orbit might some day find itself circling Old Sol and may continue to do so until it wears out."

Cataclysms so gigantic that a dozen earths might be slipped with ease into the yawning gap.

How St. Louisan Heroically Keeps His Health

Clad only in skimpy bathing suit, Joseph Birdsong frolics in the snow or takes icy baths—Declares he never has cold and has grown in weight from 135 to 180 pounds—Dangers as well as advantages in his method pointed out by physical culture expert -:- -:-



"Not chilling—just pleasantly exhilarating."

TRAFFIC stopped in the 3700 block on Washington avenue one raw, cold, snowy February day when a robust young man appeared at the door of No. 3719 clad only in a bathing suit and slippers. It was one of the skimpiest of bathing suits, too, leaving exposed most of the legs, all of the arms and shoulders and a liberal section of the neck and chest.

Passers-by gasped as the young man kicked off the slippers and strode out, barefoot, into the snow. And when he threw himself down on the ground, piling the snow up around him and throwing handfuls of it over his body as if it were sand at a summer bathing resort, the spectators murmured a concerted "B-r-r-r!" and drew their overcoat collars closer. The thermometer was considerably below the freezing point and a raw northeast wind was driving the falling snow in gusts. The scantily-clad young man continued to amuse himself and then obligingly posed for a photograph. A gang of boys ran up, one of them shouting:

"Hi, fellers, here's a movie!"

He was mistaken. It wasn't a movie. It was only Mr. Joseph B. Birdsong taking a little pleasant matutinal exercise. If there is anything that sends a more pleasurable thrill through Mr. Birdsong's Spartan nervous organization than a frolic, unclad, in the snow, it's a cheering little swim in ice water. There is no accounting for hobbies, and this happens to be Mr. Birdsong's hobby.

Everybody who has lived in a country village remembers that at least one of his fellow townsmen was some old codger who came from somewhere up in the far north. It was always this chap's delight to pick out the coldest winter morning to go after his mail in his shirtsleeves, by way of showing the effete villagers how contemptuous of their winters a man could be who had been brought up where there were winters as were winters. Instinctively one found himself wondering whether Mr. Birdsong were one of these.

Mr. Birdsong is not. He is a Georgian. He was born and grew up well into the teens in Atlanta, where a severe frost is referred to for months after as "the cold spell," and where a two-inch fall of snow is designated a blizzard. He speaks with the soft drawl of the South Atlantic states. And he goes through one of our winters wearing low shoes, summer underwear and lightweight clothing. He wears a handsome overcoat with a Persian lamb collar, but that is for the sake of appearance. He is a piano salesman and it would never do for an overcoatless man to try to sell anybody a piano in the middle of January. The customers might get to feeling so much sympathy for the salesman that they would forget to buy his pianos.

He was not always thus. Time was when Mr. Birdsong would as soon have thought of jumping into a fire as of jumping into an icy lake. In those days he was a narrow-chested, spindleshanked youth of 135 pounds in weight, looking about husky enough to throw a baseball 100 yards in three relays. Today he weighs 180 pounds, looks as physically fit as a challenger on the eve of a world's championship prizefight. You have to use logarithms in computing his chest expansion. He would be a fine model for the second pose in one of those old-fashioned pictures of "before and after taking."

What is the secret of the change? Mr. Birdsong will tell you confidentially that it is cold water bathing, and he won't be angry if you violate the confidence and trumpet the news forth to the whole world.

About 18 years ago he was working in Boston and, through the summer, he had been fond of swimming and diving. So fond was he, in fact, that when autumn came and it was time to do the old bathing suit up in moth balls he still refused to quit. He found a few other hardy individuals and they paddled about every day, although the water grew colder and colder. Pretty soon they were breaking holes in the ice for the sake of a refreshing plunge.

"I am no colder than you are," Mr. Birdsong has just remarked to the man in the overcoat.

They found that while their less adventuresome friends were suffering from colds they were immune. They suffered less from cold weather than others and found their physical condition rapidly improving. Then they formed an organization which they called the "Ice Club," and one of the first duties they imposed upon themselves was inducing other members to join.

The Ice Club is still in existence, only today it has something like 200 members. Mr. Birdsong is authority for the statement that within the 18 years 135 persons who had incipient tuberculosis when they became members have been cured.

"It would be very foolish and risky for one not accustomed to it to begin cold-water bathing in winter at once," said Mr. Birdsong recently. "The shock would be too severe and might have disastrous results. But one can accustom himself to it gradually.

"The best way is to begin swimming in summer and to keep it up every day. As the temperature gradually lowers the body will adapt itself to the change and in a little while no serious discomfort will be felt from bathing even in ice water.

"Another way is to take daily baths, gradually lowering the temperature of the water. One can get into the tub when the water is moderately warm and let cold water trickle in so that it will cool by slow degrees and finally he can stand it very cold. It is always advisable even for those hardened to it to take a shower or pour cold water down the spinal column for several minutes before taking a cold plunge. I always do that—in fact, did it just before I went out into the snow."

Cold water is very invigorating and stimulating, building up the circulation and toning the body up to its greatest efficiency, in Mr. Birdsong's opinion. He himself never has heat in his bedroom, however cold the weather may be, and always keeps the windows wide open. He says he cannot account for it, but it is a fact that he scarcely feels the cold more when he is romping around in the snow in a bathing suit than he does when he is outdoors clad in complete street costume.

He spends most of his leisure in summer swimming at natatoriums and does 19 different kinds of dives. A year or so ago he went swimming on New Year's day in a river in Spokane, Wash. He has gone swimming in Canada when the thermometer was three or four degrees below zero and remained in the water 15 or 20 minutes without suffering any ill effects.

Mr. Birdsong's system of training has been adopted with modifications by many physical culture experts. A. A. McLaughlin, physical director of the Central Y. M. C. A., declares a great deal has been done towards developing puny men by cold baths, although, he warns, a great deal of care must be exercised. Some men never can stand cold baths at all, but are likely to faint when plunged into cold water. Every man, particularly every man past 30, should be careful how he starts about this strenuous hardening process.

The first thing to be done, according to Mr. McLaughlin, is to undergo a thorough physical examination. If there is a weak heart, a plunge into cold water might stimulate the blood circulation faster than the heart could handle it and there would be direful consequences. The greatest care also should be exercised in exposing the abdomen to sudden cold, as, when the stomach is full of food, it is likely to cause a congestion that may be fatal.

According to the Y. M. C. A. expert, every person physically fit should learn to take cold baths. Hundreds of St. Louisans are already doing it every day in the year and, as a rule, they are in better health and freer from colds than those who do not.

One should sleep, he says, in a cold room. Even if he cannot stand a cold bath he ought to be able to dress in the cold. But if he does take a cold bath, the bathroom should be warm, so that there will not be any dangerous after chill. Nobody ought to take very warm baths and even moderately warm

Romance and Power of the Fourth City in drawings by Hugh Ferriss

These are the first five of a group of ten pictures made by Hugh Ferriss, formerly of St. Louis, and now of New York, where his work in crayon, pastel and pen and ink has been greatly admired. Mr. Ferriss recently spent three weeks here, gathering material for this series of sketches. The others will appear in the next issue of the Rotogravure Section. Those portions of the captions which are in quotation marks were written by the artist in a letter describing the aims of the drawings. He said further: "As far as subjects for art are concerned, St. Louis is an undiscovered city. Notable artists have portrayed the power and the romance of New York, Pittsburg, Philadelphia, and other localities, yet St. Louis — with a few valued exceptions — has remained fallow ground.... St. Louis is rich material for artists, and whoever of them are setting out to discover Her, are marking the way which will eventually lead to invaluable canvasses and manuscript." Mr. Ferriss is the son of Judge Franklin Ferriss, of St. Louis, formerly a member of the Missouri Supreme Court.

THE MOONLIGHT'S SHINING RIGHT ON MY FACE AND KEEPING ME AWAKE!
WHAT YOU TAKE FOR MOONLIGHT, COLONEL, IS THAT LIGHT DOWN IN THE BANK VAULT ACROSS THE WAY—A VERY SUSPICIOUS-LOOKING CIRCUMSTANCE AT THIS UNEARTHLY HOUR OF 3 A.M.—QUICK! WE MUST INVESTIGATE!
UP WITH 'ER TOBY—IT'S A CINCH!
'AND IT UP, PALS—HI'LL JOLLY WELL TYKE IT!
$500
DOUSE THE GLIM, PETE—WE DON'T NEED THE LIGHT NOW!
WE'VE GOT ONLY A LITTLE WAYS TO GO, TOBY, SO DON'T HURRY AN' WE WON'T AROUSE NO SUSPICION!
HI'LL RUN ALONG EASY, PROFESSOR.
BY THE DEPTH OF THE TRACKS THERE ARE AT LEAST THREE IN THE CAR BESIDES THE LOOT—FEARFUL ODDS—ONE AGAINST THREE—I'LL HAVE TO RELY ON STRATEGY!
YOU FELLERS GO ON IN—I'LL CARRY THE BOODLE!
'ERE WE ARE AT THE CAVE, PROFESSOR!
THIS IS MY CHANCE! NOW OR NEVER!
HEY! STOP YER SPEEDIN'!
OH, EXCUSE ME, MR. HAWKSHAW, I DIDN'T KNOW YOU!
DON'T MENTION IT, ROONEY!
YOU NEEDN'T HAVE HUNG ONTO THE BAG SO TIGHTLY, COLONEL—I WAS TAKING CARE OF IT!
$50,000

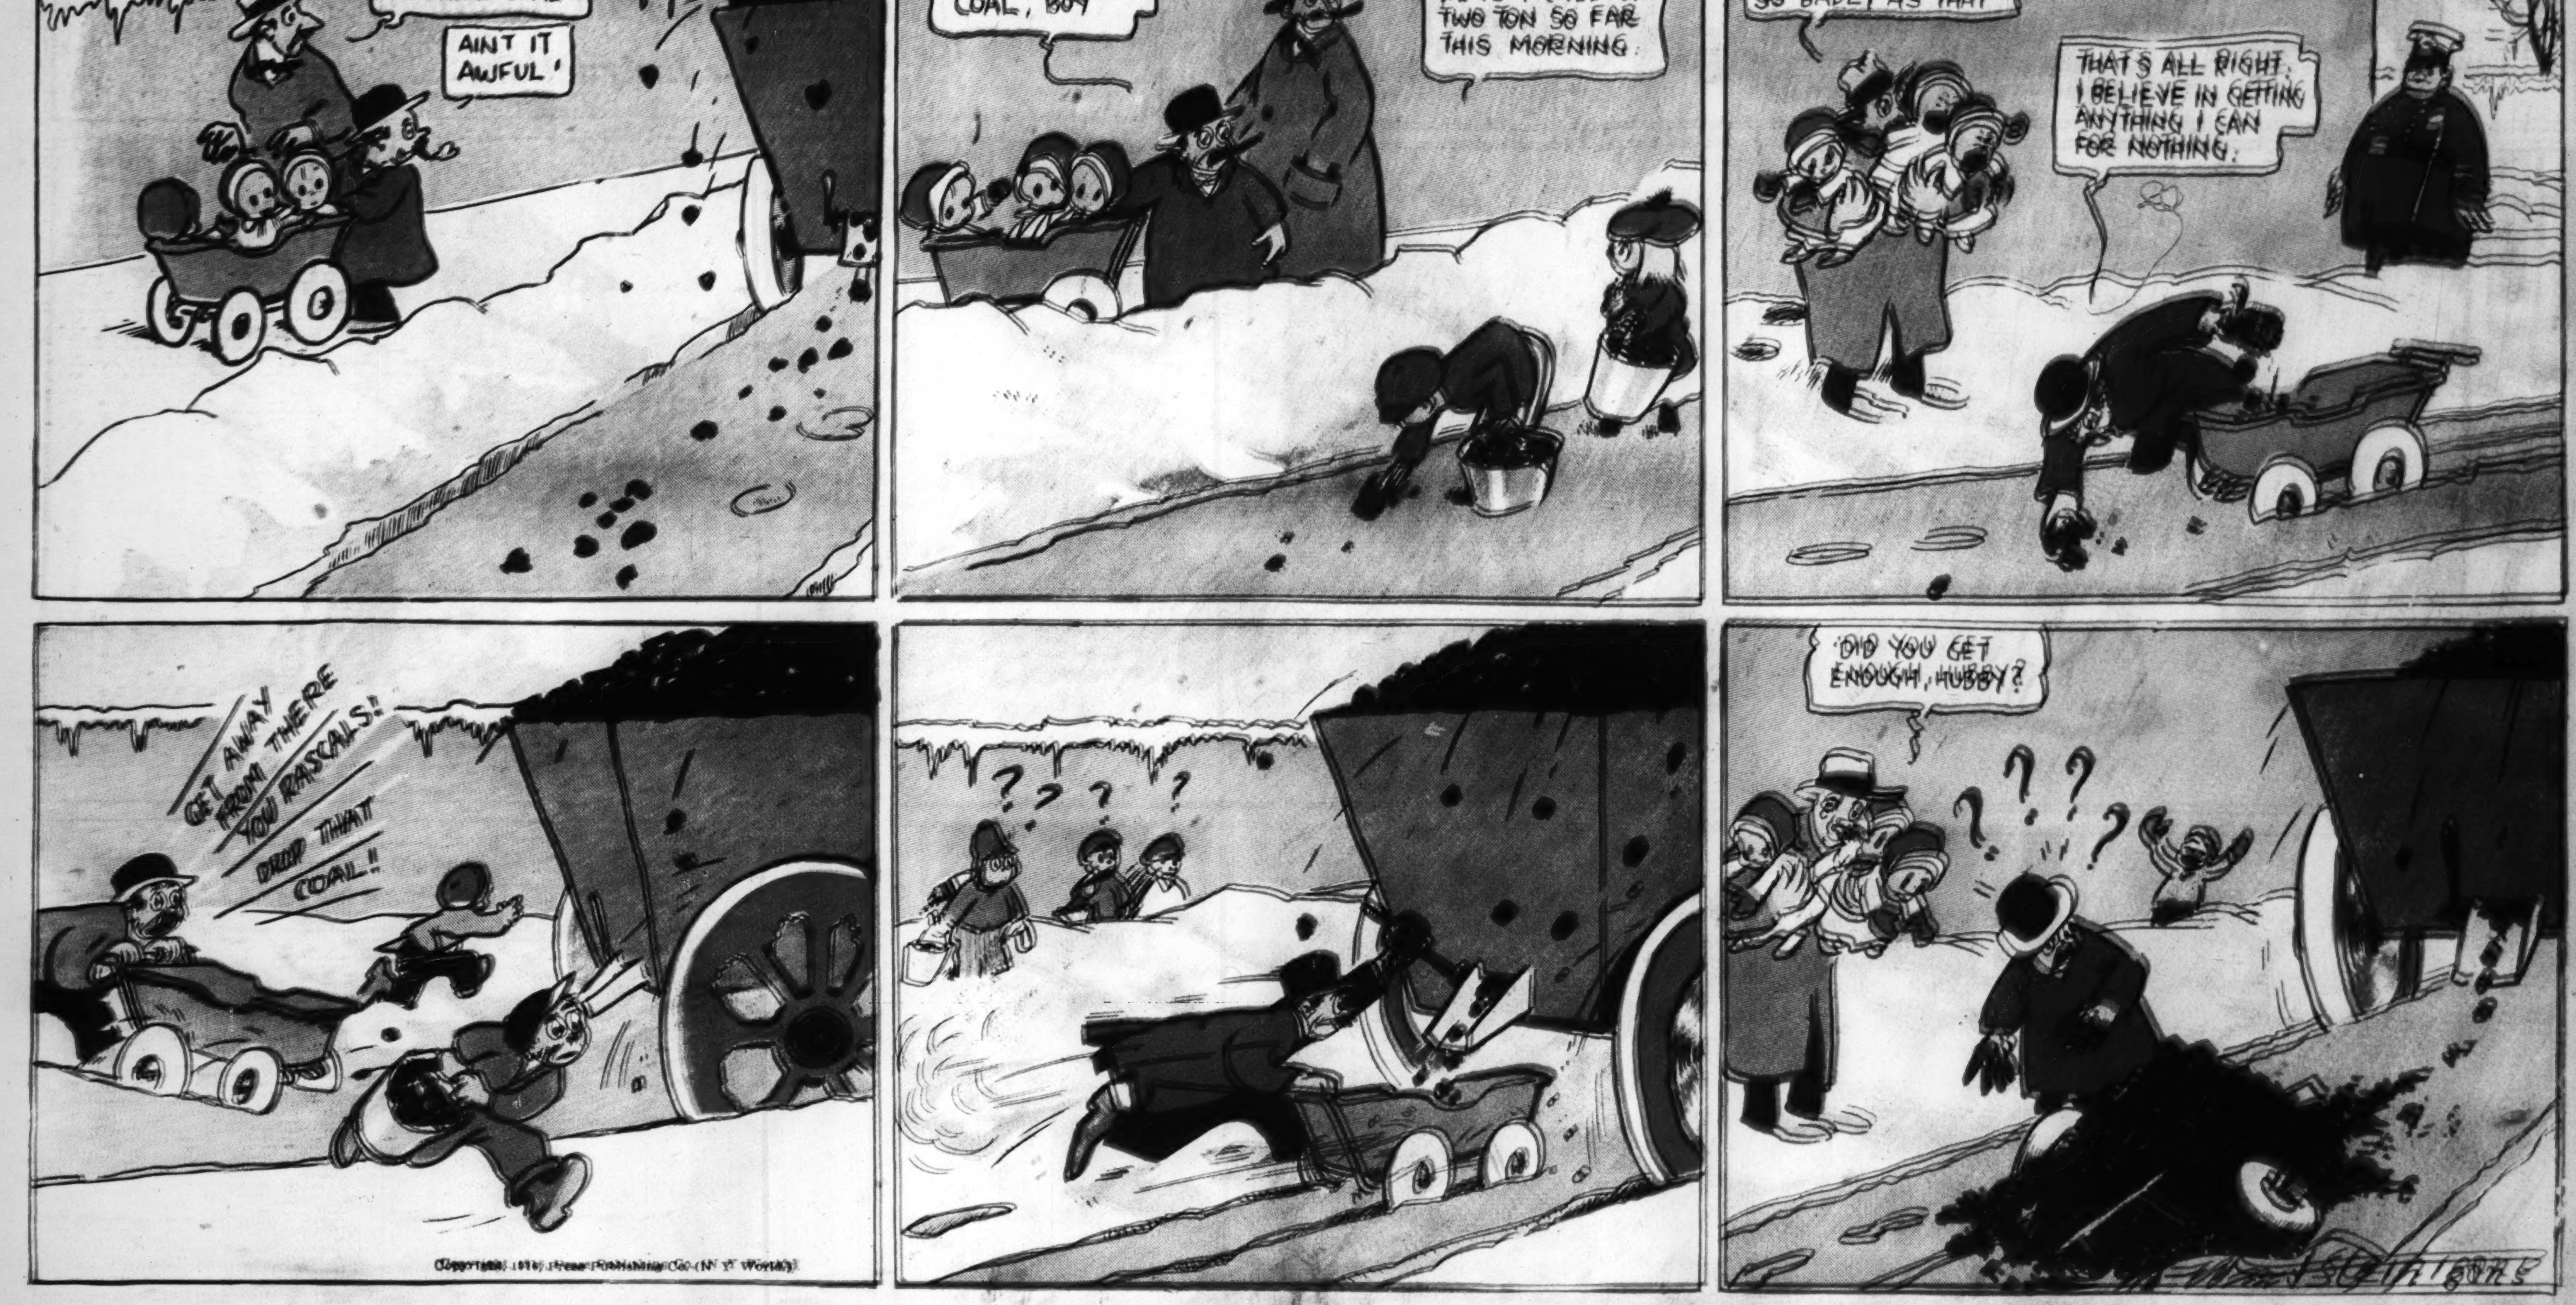
Mr. Hubby—It Serves Him Right for Being So Hoggish



LOOK AT THE WASTE OF ALL THAT VALUABLE COAL
AINT IT AWFUL!
GETTING MUCH COAL, BOY
WE'VE PICKED UP TWO TON SO FAR THIS MORNING.
CUT IT OUT HUBBY! YOU DON'T NEED THE COAL SO BADLY AS THAT THAT'S ALL RIGHT. I BELIEVE IN GETTING ANYTHING I CAN FOR NOTHING.
GET AWAY FROM THERE YOU RASCALS! DROP THAT COAL!!
? ? ? ?
DID YOU GET ENOUGH, HUBBY?
